Ald. Buller suggested that they put on gates at Park and Aylmer streets. The Mayor did not want that moved as he thought the cost might fall on the city.

Ald. Duncan agreed with Ald. Buller, that a stiff stand should be made Ald. Duncan said that he would pay his own expenses to Toronto, to protest against the action proposed by the Railway Commission. He would not mind Chamberlain street being closed, as the people could go out by way of Lafeyette avenue.

The City Solicitor wanted to know if there was any chance of them putting gates on Aylmer street. All agreed that they were badly needed.

The Mayor and the City Solicitor will meet the Board of Railway Commissioners in Toronto on Thursday, and press for the subwaying of Monaghan Road in the place of Park St., and the closing of Chamberlain street only.

CONTINUATION OF INVESTIGATIO IN RE FARMERS' BANK ORGANIZATION

Magistrate Denison Refuses to Try Charges in Two Cases --Sent to the Sessions

From the mass of questions which were launched at W. R. Travers, ex-manager of the aFrmers Bank, at the resumed inquiry Tuesday morning into the conspiracy charges against Jas. R. Stratton, J. J. Warren, Dr. John Ferguson, John Watson, Alexander Fraser, and Alexander Lowne, the point about which Crown Attorney Corley hinged his questions was the $80,000 borrowed from the Trusts and Guarantee Co. in order to make up the deficit necessary for the bank to produce the $250,000 so as to secure the charter from the Dominion Government. To this Mr. Travers adhered that the loan was a very ordinary one conducted with the Trusts Company, and that it was not a matter in which either Mr. Warren or Mr. Stratton had made the slightest attempt to secure any personal profit. Mr. Travers is still firm in his statements that in all his transactions he acted in good faith for the interests of the general public and that had things not been closed down upon him so hastily the bank would have pulled out of the hole.

Mr. Travers' evidence was resumed. After some technical financial questions concerning the obtaining of the Farmers Bank charter, Mr. Corley, Crown Attorney, asked:

"Did you have any confierence with Mr. Stratton or Dr. Nesbitt with regard to it?"

"No, I think not."

"Did Nesbitt say anything about any interview with Mr. Stratton?"

"No."

"Later, did Dr. Nesbitt say anything about Mr. Stratton when you were making up the report?"

"No; he merely said he would get some of his friends to 'get me'"

"Is there any other information that you can give to assist the Crown?" asked the Crown Attorney.

"I don't think so."

"Do you think you have told me everything that is illegal or wrong about these thing?"

"I think so," said Travers.

D. Hughes-Charles' Evidence.

Mr. D. Hughes-Charles, examined by Mr. Corley.

"You are an official of the Bank of Commerce?"

"Not now. I was manager of the Bank at Peterborough from 1902 until last September."

"Can you recall a conversation with Mr. Stratton in 1906 in regard to the Farmers' Bank?"

"Yes."

"Where was that conversation?"

"At a private house in Peterborough during an afternoon."

"What was the line of the conversation as nearly as you can remember?"

"Well, I wrote a letter to the General Manager giving my recollection of it at the time."

Mr. Corley—"I will show you the letter to refresh your memory. Reading the letter, Mr. Charles said:

"What I said in this letter was correct."

The following is the letter referred to, which was read to the court:

Peterborough, Dec. 10, 1906.

"Dear Mr. Walker—

"I don't know whether a conversation I had with Mr. Stratton was to be considered by me as private or not. It took place at . . . He asked me how I would like to buy some stock in the Farmers Bank. Then he told me that he had made an advance of $80,000 to enable them to make their cash deposit with the Government. I asked him if he did not think the loan was a little risky. He said 'No; we have all the Farmers' Bank as security; including the farmers' notes, and was getting interest at 8 per cent., and had ample margin. I don't know whether the loan was made by the Traders Bank, of which he is vice-president, or the Trust and Guarantee Co., of which he is president."

Mr. Corley: "Was the conversation a private one?"

"No, it was a general conversation at a five o'clock tea. We were discussing matters generally, and among others the Farmers' Bank. Mr. Stratton asked me during the conversation if I would like to buy some stock. I said, 'No, it was a poor institution.' I gathered from Mr. Stratton that one of his companies had advanced $80,000 on the security of the shareholders' notes. I did not understand him to say which institution. He said they were well secured."

"You met him on the train at another time?"

"Yes. I met Mr. Stratton on the train a short time afterwards and in general talk he told me that Mr. Travers had paid off the loan."

Magistrate: "That is to say when he first told you about the loan it had not been repaid?"

"I did not understand so."

"How long was it after the conversation had taken place that you wrote the letter?"

"I could not say exactly. I first wrote a private letter to Mr. Laird, the manager, on the Monday immediately after the conversation, and I subsequently wrote to the General Manager, Mr. B. E. Walker."

"A few days later?"

"Yes, a few days later.

"In the meantime you had been to Toronto and going down on the train you met Mr. Stratton and he told you—"

"That the loan had been repaid."

Mr. Corley: "Have you any recollection of Mr. Stratton's mentioning the amount of the bonus?"

"Yes, it ran in my mind that he said 10 p.c., but I find it is not so in the letter. The letter says 8 per cent. per annum."

Magistrate: "That would be $1,000 bonus."

Magistrate: "Then Mr. Stratton was evidently aware that the loan was being made on the security of the notes endorsed to Mr. Travers?"

"Oh, yes."

Mr. Corley: "When you spoke of doubt in the matter you were speaking of doubt as to the quality of the security?"

"Yes, as to the quality of the security only. What I wrote in the letter was not anything reflecting on Mr. Stratton at all, but in reference to the way in which the Farmers' Bank was being started and I thought my head office ought to be advised of that"

"So the General Manager would know how to deal with the information?"

"Yes."

Cross examined by Mr. R. R. Hall:

"This conversation you had with Mr. Stratton was at a private house?"

"Yes."

"I suppose it was an ordinary social function—Five o'clock tea?"

"Yes."

"Was Mr. Stratton consulting you in any way at all in reference to the matter?"

"No."

"Simply talking in general casual conversation?"

"That was all."

"In casual conversations at five o'clock teas, things are not said exactly as if you were discussing a business transaction?"

"No, I do not think so."

"You understood that this loan of $80,000 was being made on the security of stockholders' notes?"

"Yes, that was the class of security."

"I do not understand you to say that you understood that such a transaction was contrary to law, to lend on stockholders' notes?"

"No, I was not making any reference to the transaction of the loan as being unlawful."

"You looked up the making of the loan upon notes of the subscribers as being a legitimate transaction in itself?"

"Yes."

"And if the Trusts Company were making a loan on subscribers notes for stock, you could find no fault with that."

"I was not finding any fault."

"Mr. Stratton did not seriously ask you to subscribe for stock in the Farmers' Bank?"

"No."

"You did not look on it that he was representing the Farmers' Bank in any way?"

"No."

"Sir Edmund Walker took no action in reference to your letter?"

"Not as far as I know."

"Was the impression left on your mind that the institution making the loan was receiving the profits and bonus on the transaction?"

"That was the impression; that the institution that was making the loan would get the profit."

Travers Cross-examined.

Mr. Travers was recalled for the benefit of the defence counsel, Mr. Wilson, appearing for J. J. Warren, questioned him as to his experience getting the information that Mr. Travers had gone to the Farmers from the Merchants Bank, the former being the first time he had occupied the position of general manager.

"Before meeting Mr. Warren you had been already appointed?"

"Yes, by the provisional directors. We had been working about six months."

"You were launching your prospects in life with this new position of yours? If it prospered you prospered, if it failed, you would lose everything?"

"Yes."

"And others as well," commented the magistrate.

Dealing With a Gentleman.

"When you went to Mr. Warren with that testimonial, he had every reason to think he was dealing with a gentleman of good standing and honour?' 'asked Mr. Wilson.

"Yes."

"At that time you hoped and expected to make the Farmers Bank a success?"

"I did."

"Did you hope to do so, right up to the end?"

"I did."

"You had some trouble with some of your local managers—one of whom was arrested?"

"Yes."

"And you lost some deposits?"

"Yes, we did in June, 1910."

"During July and August, 1910, you gained ground again, did you not?"

"I hardly think we gained ground."

"You had a gradual creeping up of deposits?"

"It would appear so."

"Did the opposition of Mr. Knight and the Bankers' Association stop, or continue from this time?"

"It continued to the end — the strongest kind of opposition."

"If you had not had that opposition and trouble with your local managers what would you say of your efforts to keep the bank up?"

"I think I would have been successful."

"And the bank would have been saved from failure, and the shareholders from their losses?"

"I think they would."

Notes on Subscriptions.

Mr. Wilson wanted to know about the notes given on subscriptions.

Travers explained that the money he borrowed on the notes was applied in the subscription books as cash subscriptions against names of subscribers who had really not paid any money.

"If a man paid $200 on a subscription of $1,000 you would take his promissory note for the balance?"

"Yes, and the balance would be attributed to other subscriptions upon which no money had been paid."

Travers went on to explain how the conditions presented to Mr. Hunter were reached.

"And with what final result?"

"I thought that the subscription list was in proper shape. The affidavit was prepared, I swore to it and started for Ottawa."

"And Hunter knew," asked the Magistrate, "how you were going to use the money?"

"Yes,' 'answered Travers. "To the best of my knowledge and belief, he told me that we were perfectly right in using the money as we had done."

Nothing to Do With It.

Travers said that neither Mr. J. J. Warren, the manager of the Trust and Guarantee Company, nor any other official of the company had anything to do with the materials set before the authorities at Ottawa, assuring them of the solidity of the bank and of the regularity of all proceedings connected with its promotions.

"Yes."

"And you believed that Mr. Warren was acting in perfectly good faith?"

"I had no reason to think otherwise."

His Own Responsibility.

"When you borrowed that money did you borrow it on your own responsibility or on the responsibility of the bank?"

"I borrowed it on my own responsibility and on the responsibility of the individual makers of the notes made by subscribers."

"When you made that loan of $80,000 you had no thought of deceit or made by subscribers."

"No."

"And if you had no idea of deceit and fraud, certainly Mr. Warren could have had none."

"I should not think so."

"The loan was in the ordinary way?"

"The rate was a little high."

"But the amount was larger than usual?"

"Yes."

Not Always Easy.

"It is not always easy to get so much money together in a hurry?"

"No."

At this juncture the case was adjourned until 3 o'clock.

Afternoon Session.

Mr. E. B. Stockdale, manager of the Toronto office of the Trusts and Guarante Company, was called to identify some of the cheques and other documents. He stated that it was Mr. Stratton's custom, when leaving the city for the week-end, to sign sufficient blank cheques to last until he returned to the city. It was a common practise in many companies, and it would not be necessary to show him the cheques before they were issued, as they would have to be passed on in board meeting in any case. The cheques also had to be signed and countersigned by other officials before they were valid

Mr. W. G. Mitchell, stock broker, stated that he had acted as agent between Travers and the trusts company, in the matter of payments, at the request of Mr. Warren, whose broker he was. Mr. Travers he had never seen at the time, and he received no fee for the transaction

Mr. Travers was recalled to give evidence, as to the settlement of the obligation of the Farmers' Bank to the Trusts and Guarantee Company.

Sent to The Sessions.

Toronto, Wednesday, February 22, 1911.—The only evidence taken this morning in the Farmers' Bank case was that of Mr. E. B. Stockdale, which showed that the $80,000 loan to W. R. Travers was made in the ordinary course of business and paid off in due course.

The Magistrate said that, as he before stated, he would not attempt to try any case in connection with the Farmers' Bank. He would not try the cases against Mr. Warren and Mr. Stratton, but he would send the cases to the Sessions and accept their own personal bonds to appear.

Rev. Father Morriscy

Father Morriscy's "No. 11" Cures Stomach Troubles.

When your stomach is working right you never know it is there. But when it feels as heavy as lead—when you have Heartburn, Belching of Wind, Sourness, a gnawing hunger, with distress after eating—when you feel irritable and depressed — then you may know that the digestive fluids in the stomach are not sufficient to digest what you eat.

Father Morriscy's "No. 11" Tablets supply these fluids in concentrated form. Each tablet, dissolved in the stomach, will digest 1¾ pounds of food, which is more than an average meal.

Read what Father Morriscy's treatment did for Mr. Gosline, of Salmon Lake. He writes Nov. 30, 1908:

"I was troubled with indigestion, so severe that I really thought I had cancer of the stomach. I took much doctors' remedies, till I was forced to seek another resource, and this was the Rev. Father Morriscy. His treatments worked miracles, until I have been entirely cured, so that now I do not look to the quality of the diet but to the quantity."

DESIRABILITY OF SINGING OUR NATIONAL SONGS

Editor Examiner:

Dear Sir,—By happy instinct our inspiring national song, "Oh, Canada," was chosen by Mr. Crane for the offertory selection at the general meeting in St. Paul's Monday night. While at first sight it seemed to have little connection with the subject of the evening, on the other hand it was really most appropriate as expressing another bond of union between the whole of the audience, and practically inculcating the spirit of patriotism which breathes so strongly throughout the Bible.

But, sir, how much more impressive and inspiring it would have been had the whole congregation risen to their feet at the opening chords. Surely there must have been many who found it difficult to remain seated instead of being active participators in a national act. I make no reflection whatever upon those who conducted the meeting, for as yet the appropriateness of this is not generally recognized. But even if this be not always considered advisable, may we not at least have our national song, so stirring and sublime, sung and played at every meeting of the Canadian Club, as a most natural and effective part of the proceedings?

Yours, etc.,
J. C. DAVIDSON.

THE CURSE OF THE NATION IS CONSTIPATION

"Fruit-a-tives" Alone Cures This Disease

A famous scientist states that Constipation, or non-action of the bowels, causes more deaths than all other diseases combined. Constipation inflames the Kidneys, ruins digestion, is the foundation of Rheumatism, poisons the blood, causes Headaches, Neuralgia, Nervousness and Insomnia.

Constipation is caused by a weak or sluggish liver. Bile, the only purgative of the body, is secreted by the liver, which in turn should pour out into the intestines sufficient bile to move the bowels. Unless the liver is active, there cannot be enough bile to move the bowels regularly, and Constipation is the result.

"Fruit-a-tives", the famous fruit medicine, will always cure Constipation because it acts directly on the liver—relieves the congestion—increases the quantity of bile—and strengthens the bowel muscles.

YESTERDAY IN LEGISLATURE

Member for West Hastings Makes Appeal in Behalf of His Bill to Control Mergers—Refuses to Withdraw It

OTHER BUSINESS

TORONTO, FEB. 21.—Lively passages between the Premier and members who were disinclined to abide by the traditional usages of Parliamentary procedure and a stiring debate on the question of watered stocks, afforded visitors to the Ontario Legislature an interesting afternoon yesterday at the Parliament Buildings. In addition, a number of bills were introduced, or given second or third readings.

Cabinet Ministers and the members paid close attention to the speech of J. W. Johnson, West Hastings, upon the question of watered stock. The sequel was an animated debate with the mover, a Government supporter, refusing to accede to his leader's suggestion to withdraw the bill. The Prime Minister said he had been given to understand that the measure was introduced to enable the mover and the House to discuss the position of affairs with respect to over-capitalization.

All might have gone smoothly but for the fact that Allan Studholme rose with a denunciation of anybody who would be weak-backed enough to withdraw a good measure just because his party didn't like it. Mr. Johnson resented quickly the imputation and declared that he would press the motion. When the vote was finally taken it was lost, of course, and Mr. Johnson did not call for a division, but it occasioned a very heated debate.

Mr. Johnson declared that watered stock made the poor man poorer and the rich man richer. It was an instrument of tyranny, the evil of which had been exampled in the United States. It was applied in effecting mergers and combines. The bait held out to the consumer was the promise of an increased production and a reduced price. The results were inevitably the reverse.

The Canadian Express Co. had, Mr. Johnson declared, with a capital asset of $212,000, watered its stock up to $3,000,000, and the Dominion Express Co. had beaten this a long way.

The Canadian Canners, he said, started by merging thirty-four factories, then the Dominion Canners added fourteen more. Thirty thousand dollars each would be a high valuation to put on the forty-eight factories, so that $1,440,000 would be the limit of their tangible assets. Yet the capitalization was $5,700,000. The difference of $4,260,000 is watered stock, and the company had, under its charter, the reserve power to issue $12,000,000 more of stock.

In 1910 the company made a profit of $400,000, which was 27 per cent. on its actual assets.

Hon. Mr. Hanna then asked that the bill be withdrawn. Studholme protested, and Mr. Johnson decided to let it stand. Several members joined in the debate, declaring that the bill was inadequate to meet the case.

When the vote was taken the roar of "No's" was like thunder compared to the "Ayes," and Mr. Johnson declared that he would not press for a division.

"Lost," announced the Speaker.

Hon. J. S. Duff moved the second reading of the pure milk bill, the provisions of which were recently published. The Minister of Agriculture said that the bill enacted into law the recommendations of the milk commission.

John Shaw, North Toronto, introduced the Toronto City Bill, which embodies the legislation asked for by the Toronto City Council.

A. E. Fripp, Ottawa West (Con.), again introduced his bill to permit municipalities to place a lower rate of taxation on improvements than on land. Mr Fripp states that this principle is being extensively applied in the west with most satisfactory results in stimulating the holding of unimproved land out of the market.

W. J. McCart, Stormont, (Lib.), felt the crushing power of an adverse majority when he refused to accept a Government suggestion. The incident arose over his motion for an order of the House for a return showing the number of officials, clerks and employes in the various branches of the Provincial Secretary's Department on Feb. 1, 1905, and on Jan. 1, 1911, with the salaries in each case.

Hon. W. J. Hanna expressed a willingness to furnish the return if the "additional work and results" were included.

Mr. McCart objected to any addition to the order. It contained all he wanted to know.

Sir James Whitney said that probably other members of the House would like the complete information.

Let them ask for it was Mr. McCart's attitude.

Thereupon the sledge hammer fell. Sir Hanna immediately moved Mr. Hanna's addition as an amendment and the order as amended was finally declared "carried."

On Dr. Lackler's bill to extend the powers of tax collectors to follow taxable goods to any part of the same county, Hon. W. J. Hanna said that the bill as prepared might cause injury to innocent persons who had acquired the goods followed. The bill went to the committee.

G. Pattinson's bill to govern the construction of bridges by adjacent municipalities was given a second reading.

Geo. H. Gooderham, South Toronto, introduced a bill to confer on the Ontario Motor League the same powers respecting the erection of road signs as formerly enjoyed by the Canadian Wheelmen's Association.

Hon. A. G. MacKay gave notice that he would ask the following:

"Has the Government cancelled the charters of any companies, incorporated under the Ontario Companies' Act, on the ground that they have failed to file their annual returns? And if so, how many?

It appears that the final reports of companies are required to be filed with the Provincial Secretary by Feb. 8 each year. If they fail to be received, letters of warning are sent to the delinquent concerns.

ECZEMA AND WHAT IS DONE TO CURE IT

Desperate Efforts, Disheartening Failures and Final Success.

Eczema is a skin affliction to which men and women alike are subject, from the first to the last day of their existence. It may occur as a single tiny spot, appearing and disappearing with each change in general health or present only at certain seasons; at the other extreme, the whole body may be involved in a torturing eruption. The latter condition may gradually arise through the neglect or improper treatment of lesser troubles or an apparently healthy skin may, in a single day, become a mass of eczema.

But whatever the form of the affection, the distressing itching, burning, scaling and crusting, the serious disfigurement and the constant dread that the eczema will become chronic, make a speedy cure the aim of every sufferer. Unfortunately, such a cure is not always readily obtained. The most skilled physician is often at a loss and even hospitals are forced to discharge the patient as incurable. Then a wide variety of remedies are resorted to, many perfectly harmless and equally ineffective, others as offensive to every sense that, were it not for the relief they are supposed to afford, no person of refinement would tolerate them for an instant.

To such sufferers, discouraged by repeated failures of even these heroic methods, the instant relief afforded by the first bath with Cuticura Soap and gentle application of Cuticura Ointment is almost incredible. They stop the itching and burning at once, make sleep possible and, in most cases, point to a speedy cure. So pure and sweet are Cuticura Soap and Ointment and so free from every substance of a disagreeable or harmful nature that they can be used without hesitation on the youngest infant or tenderest skin. Besides, they are most economical, a single set being often sufficient for the treatment of even the severest cases.

In proof of the efficacy of the Cuticura Remedies it will be enough to quote here a single letter, from Mrs. Edward Nearing, 11 Lansing Block, Watertown, N.Y.: "Four years ago I suffered with a terrible eczema, being a mass of sores from head to feet and for six months confined to my bed. During that time I suffered continual torture from itching and burning. After being given up by my doctor, I was advised to try Cuticura. After the first bath with Cuticura Soap and application of Cuticura Ointment I enjoyed the first good sleep during my entire illness. I also used Cuticura Resolvent and the treatment was continued for three weeks. At the end of that time I was entirely cured and have had no ill effects since. I would advise any person suffering from any form of skin trouble to try the Cuticura Remedies, as I know what they did for me."

Cuticura Soap, Ointment, Resolvent and Pills are sold by druggists everywhere. Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., sole props., Boston, Mass. Mailed free, on request, latest 32-page Cuticura Book, a guide to the speedy and economical treatment of skin and scalp affections, from infancy to age.

CANADA'S CHANCE

Hon. Mr. Lemieux Says She Should Not Neglect the Opportunity —Mr. Kyte Points Out Benefit to Fishermen

DEBATE ON THE BILL

Ottawa, Feb. 23.—Geo. Kyte (Richmond, N.S.), continuing the debate on the reciprocity agreement, gave an enthusiastic endorsation of the Government's proposals, more particularly because of the good effect he said they would have on the industries of the Maritime Provinces. Mr. Kyte said that with the exception of coal and steel, reciprocity between the Maritime Provinces and Ontario and Quebec had consisted in an exchange of the manufactured products of the latter for the cash currency of the people by the sea. At times, he admitted, there was a market for Maritime potatoes in mid-Canada, and fish to a limited extent came as far west as Montreal, but the natural market for both products was to be found in the United States. The people of the Maritime Provinces had been trying to coax the residents of this part of Canada to buy their fish, but with little success.

Dr. Sproule (E. Grey) replied the argument of Mr. Kyte that there was no inter-provincial or English trade in fish by showing that out of $15,006,000 fish produced last year $5,809,009 had gone to England, but only $1,627,000 to the United States.

Was it a wise policy to say, as the member for Richmond argued, that the natural resources of Canada were for to-day and not for to-morrow. "What about posterity?" asked Dr. Sproule.

Canada wanted nothing but the opportunity to work out her own problems, and to preserve the home market for Canadian farmers. In support of this demand Dr. Sproule pointed out that until the duty of three cents per pound had been placed on fresh meat the Canadian industry was dormant. So, too, the prohibition of the import of process butter and filled cheese had developed the native industry, and these Canadian products had a leading reputation in the markets of the world. In the horse-breeding industry he said that the splendid stock of the eastern provinces would be driven out of its natural market in the west through competition with the cayuse and broncho.

"Reciprocity can mean only one thing," said Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux, "the development, progress and ultimate grandeur of both countries." He twitted Dr. Sproule for being sentimental, reminiscent and witty in propounding his "tale of woe."

"Granted," he said, "that we have good times, but our policy is to have better times. Granted that we have good markets, which we, of the Liberal party have created (applause), we want better markets still; and let my hon. friend (Dr. Sproule) add this line: Yes, and let Canada with better times and better markets work out its own destiny under the aegis of the British flag."

"Let us," he said, "rise to the proper height; let us not be little Canada; let us trust ourselves in this bargain with the United States."

"Canada can absorb the United States. The United States materially cannot absorb Canada. Mr. Borden's motto was to let well enough alone. In view of the wonderful heritage of Canadians we could afford to adopt as a substitute for that motto: 'Let us open wide the gates of the country; let us not be afraid to bargain and to trade with our neighbors.'"

Mr. Lemieux emphasized his point by declaring that Great Britain was not afraid to trade east and west, north and south.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

S. Joshua Lewis of Yarmouth was fatally injured at a railway crossing.

Hon. M. H. Richey, ex-Lieutenant-Governor of Nova Scotia, died at Halifax.

The Grand Trunk will relay the line between London and the Falls with 100-pound rails.

Halifax Liberals gave a complimentary banquet to Premier Murray, at which the latter discussed the advantages of reciprocity to the Atlantic fishermen.

Nine Montreal families were driven out into the cold and biting wind last night when fire broke out in a three-storey stone front block on Hutchinson street. Twelve flats were damaged.

A bold attempt at robbery was made in the jewelry store of W. Wharin, 441 Spadina avenue, Toronto, at 4.30 yesterday afternoon, when he was struck on the head with the butt of a massive revolver in the hands of a masked man.

Annexation of Canada came before the North Dakota Legislature yesterday when Representative Sorlie introduced a resolution asking North Dakota members in Congress to use their influence in bringing about a peaceable annexation treaty.

Irish Boycott Coronation.

London, Feb. 23.—At a meeting of the Irish Parliamentary party last night it was decided to abstain from participating in the coronation ceremonies. A statement was issued to the effect that the party greatly regretted that the time had not yet come when it would feel free to join other representatives of the King, although the cause of Irish liberty was on the eve of victory. Promise was made that when the King visited Ireland the people would welcome him with generosity and hospitality.

Sing Sing Means Slow Death.

Albany, Feb. 23.—The annual report of the State Commission of Prisons, just made public, again calls attention to the unsanitary condition of Sing Sing Prison, and says a long sentence there is often a sentence to slow death because of the prevalence of tuberculosis.

BALFOUR ON LORDS.

He Says an Elective Second Chamber Is Useless.

London, Feb. 23.—The first day's debate on the Government's bill to abolish the veto power of the House of Lords, while it failed to indicate definitely the fate of the measure in the hands of the House of Lords, left no doubt as to the attitude of the Premier.

Mr. Balfour's speech was the great event of the day. He said that he distrusted the policy of making the House of Lords a purely elective body. In no country, in neither the United States nor France, had that been found consistent with the predominance of the Lower House. If, therefore it was wished that the House of Commons predominate, the hereditary principle should be continued. He indicated that he would consent to no change of the constitution which would allow Parliament to pass the home rule bill without this bill having been voted on by the electorate. In other words, he would not acquiesce in the home rule question being submitted to a second chamber differing only from the existing House of Lords in being bereft of its absolute power.

The Unionist members cheered again and again when Mr. Balfour declared that he would fight against a revolution on which the people had not been consulted, carried out, not at the bidding of the majority of the House, but at the bidding of the Nationalist minority.

50c. Bottle FREE

You know the "know-it-alls." Suspicious of everybody and everything.

They promised well at one time in their career, then they seemed to come to a full stop.

Just because of that unhappy distrust, that suspicion that won for them the same attitude in return, that made every one distrust and dislike them.

Now you're not a "know-it-all." Only about one per cent. of the people are.

We feel sure that you have an open receptive mind—one that is anxious to learn more, to advance.

And to you we say that you owe it to your own best judgment to try Psychine.

* * *

Every now and then we come to a certain epoch in medicine when we think advance or improvement impossible.

Then some one comes along and the whole school of medicine is overturned, new and apparently indisputable theories, all good, all progressive.

And the reason they cure is that they increase and strengthen the white corpuscles of the blood—the Phagocytes—the scavengers of the body, devouring every germ of disease that gains entrance to the body.

A third of a century ago, Psychine was compounded of certain herbs.

Since that time it has cured hundreds of thousands.

And all because it contained these herbs that science now knows builds up and strengthens the white corpuscles of the blood—the Phagocytes.

MR. WARREN'S STATEMENT.

He Says Transactions Were Bona Fide Business.

Toronto, Feb. 22.—J. J. Warren, general manager of the Trusts & Guarantee Co., has made a statement regarding his alleged connection with the Farmers' Bank, which he regards as only an ordinary business transaction.

He said, in part: I have lived in this community for almost twenty-five years, during which period, while no doubt I have made mistakes, yet never knowingly did I injure anybody. Without any enquiry or request for information from me, I find myself charged with two offences. One that I conspired with Dr. Beattie Nesbitt, the provisional board of directors and others to do an illegal act. The other that I accepted a pledge of the notes (circulation) of the Farmers' Bank, and therefore made a loan of them as security.

The offences charged are of a technical character. The first one in particular is undoubtedly the invention of a legal mind, whose I do not know yet. The other I am advised is based on a misunderstanding of the Bank Act.

At the time of the alleged committing of the first offence I did not know nor was I acquainted with Dr. Nesbitt or any member of the provisional board. I did not meet Dr. Nesbitt until he ran for mayor. I have never yet met the provisional directors, except Dr. Ferguson.

In the fall of 1908, as an official of the Trust Co., I made W. R. Travers personally a call loan on the security of a large number of satisfactory promissory notes. Counsel advised us that the business was perfectly legal and proper. Ultimately the loan was paid off in full. Moreover, the notes that formed the security were also paid in full.

I was no party to the representations Mr. Travers made at Ottawa. I did not know what they were.

In regard to the other offence, the Farmers' Bank was in the habit of depositing with us their notes (circulation), which we paid out in the ordinary course of our business. The amount of each deposit was placed to the credit of the bank which could and did draw against it by check. We never loaned $5 against the circulation of the Farmers' Bank.

Further, I never made five cents personally out of the Farmers' Bank business, every cent of profit went to the Trust Company, to whom it belonged.

A Follow Up Deputation.

Ottawa, Feb. 23.—Jas. Bower of Red Deer, Alta., president of the Canadian Council of Agriculture and of the United Farmers of Alberta, arrived in the city yesterday with representatives from Saskatchewan, Manitoba and Ontario, to press upon the Government the necessity of granting in full the demands made by the farmers' delegation in Dec. 16.

Could Not Rest at Night.
Back Was So Weak.

Weak, lame and aching backs are the primary cause of kidney trouble. When the back aches or becomes weak it is a warning from the kidneys that everything is not right with them.

If you don't do this, serious complications are very apt to arise and the first thing you know you will be troubled with Dropsy, Diabetes or Bright's Disease, the three most deadly forms of Kidney Trouble.

On the first sign of anything wrong Doan's Kidney Pills should be taken. They go to the seat of the trouble and strengthen the kidneys, thereby strengthening the back.

Mrs. John Puigh, Parkdale, Man., writes:—"I have used Doan's Kidney Pills and find nothing to beat them. I could not rest at night my back was so weak. I tried everything, but could not get anything to do me any good until I was told by a friend to use Doan's Kidney Pills. I tried them and I am not the same weak woman I was before. I am very thankful to have found so speedy a cure."

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50 cents per box or 3 for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

If ordering direct specify "Doan's."

Despair and Despondency

No one but a woman can tell the story of the suffering, the despair, and the despondency endured by women who carry a daily burden of ill-health and pain because of disorders and derangements of the delicate and important organs that are distinctly feminine. The tortures so bravely endured completely upset the nerves if long continued.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a positive cure for weakness and disease of the feminine organism.

IT MAKES WEAK WOMEN STRONG, SICK WOMEN WELL.

It allays inflammation, heals ulceration and soothes pain. It tones and builds up the nerves. It fits for wifehood and motherhood. Honest medicine dealers sell it, and have nothing to urge upon you as "just as good." It is non-secret, non-alcoholic and has a record of forty years of cures. Ask Your Neighbors. They probably know of some of its many cures.

If you want a book that tells all about women's diseases, and how to cure them at home, send 31 one-cent stamps to Dr. Pierce to pay cost of mailing only, and he will send you a free copy of his great thousand-page illustrated Common Sense Medical Adviser—revised, up-to date edition, in paper covers. CAN'T BEAT FRONTENACS

OSHAWA, FEB. 21.—In a game chuck full of high-class play by both teams, Kingston Frontenacs defeated Oshawa in a semi-final O. H. A. junior contest by a score of 11 to 7. It was the first of home-and-home games and Kingston now have a lead of four goals that Oshawa will have to overcome next Friday night at Kingston in order to win the round.

Last year these same two teams met in semi-final games, Kingston winning out by the narrow margin of one goal. Kingston, who have had a series of victories all season, arrived in Oshawa in the afternoon by special train, with about 250 supporters. The large rink was packed, over 1,500 excited and enthusiastic spectators being present. At one end of the rink the Oshawa band was stationed, while at the other end the Kingston rooters were bunched, with the 14th Regiment Band, and kept up a continuous programme of song and calls.

At half-time the entire Kingston crowd took to the ice and sang songs paraded and danced. It was an exciting sight. The Frontenacs played nearly the same team as last year, and every player is an expert. Oshawa was greatly weakened by the loss of Frechette, who has played with them all season, but who now is in the hospital here with pneumonia. It was a stiff, hard-checking contest from gong to gong, one of those games that try the courage and stamina of every man on the ice. The Frontenacs made a whirlwind start, and before Oshawa had realized it had scored three goals. Oshawa took their first goal by a long shot from Freeman.

Hunt, at centre, was the best player on the ice and repeatedly passed all the Oshawa defence and shot, scoring most of the goals. For the visitors Davidson, at point, was the backbone of their defence, and Oshawa's light forwards had to take a lot of hard body checks. Freeman, for Oshawa, as usual, pulled off many grand rushes from point to goal and scored, while Wyler, the new boy on the team surprised all Oshawa hockey fans by his speed and stick-handling. While the game was a most strenuous one, there was very little foul play. Four goals is a good lead, but Oshawa players are good or better way from home and still have a good chance. At half-time the score was 5 to 3 in favour of Kingston. In the second half Oshawa had the score a tie at one time and were putting up a great game with the puck around Kingston's goal. It was under these conditions that Hunt would get away with the puck alone and score for the Frontenacs. Williams, in goal for the Frontenacs, is a good substitute for Marchand. He was certainly kept busy in the second half handling the short-range shots. The line-up:

THE RING

LONDON, FEB. 21—Bill Lang, who once held the heavyweight championship of Australia, was no match for Sam Langford, the Canadian coloured pugilist, in a scheduled twenty-round bout at the Olympia to-night. Langford won in the sixth round, when Lang was disqualified, but the contest could not have gone much longer, as Lang was almost out when he committed the foul.

Six thousand spectators gathered at the Olympia to witness what they expected would be a fast bout. After six fierce rounds, when Langford was down, the Australian, in a dazed sort of way rushed at the Canadian and struck him and immediately the referee proclaimed Langford the winner.

The saying "a good big man will always beat a good little man," proved a fallacy, for the Australian, with all his natural advantages, including an extra 52 pounds in weight, was hopelessly outclassed by the coloured fighter, who walked into him from all angles and when he willed. Lang was all nerves. He seemed scared to death. The only redeeming feature of Lang's showing was his gameness in taking punishment. As early as the first round Sam punched him all over the ring. In the second the negro forced the Australian into a corner and dropped him for a count of nine with terrific left and right swings to the jaw.

SOME HOCKEY HAPPENINGS

There is a great deal of interest being taken in Peterborough in the senior O. H. A. semi-finals between the Parkdale and Argonaut teams. Local fans are interested in the fate of the Argos., not only because the Oarsmen have been seen in action here this season, but also because of the fact that Jakie Moore, a Peterborough boy, is playing rover for the Oarsmen.

Whitby goes to Midland to-night for the return game with Eddie Gould's bunch, one goal behind. It should be a close game at that, as the hard ice to-night will give the Blanchard-Smith-McCamus combination a better chance than they had in the slush last week.

The Peterborough Hockey Club has been so far unsuccessful in arranging an exhibition game this week. St. Michael's are unable to come, and Eatons are playing a series in Cleveland.

CURLING

Four rinks of the Lindsay curlers are due here to-day, while four of the Peterborough rinks left for Lindsay to-day at noon, where they will take part in the competition for the Lindsay-Peterborough cup.

SMASHED FENCE

An exciting runaway on Gilmour street to-day terminated in the yard of Mr. F. R. Yokome. A horse said to belong to Mr. Savigny ran away on Charlotte street, and, turning on St. Joseph street, charged at the fence in front of Mr. Yokome's property, at full speed. The paling was too frail in nature to stop the flying steed and it continued its wild flight across the lawn, winding up by being stopped by the more substantial fence in the rear.

REFUND OVERPAYMENT

Messrs. C. Young & Son, Insurance Agents, representing the Law Union and Rock Insurance Company, have received the following letter from their agents in Toronto regarding the settlement of a local claim a while ago. A similar letter was received by C. Young & Son, from the Phoenix Insurance Co. of Canada, regarding the same matter.

Toronto, Feb. 21, 1911.

Messrs. C. Young & Son, Peterborough, Ont.

Dear Sirs,—Re Policy No. 1574730. we had a letter from our head office to-day in connection with the returning of the amount over paid by us in connection with loss under above Policy. The Manager has asked us to ask you to convey to the policyholder his appreciation for the exceedingly satisfactory way he has behaved in this claim. He states that it is exceedingly satisfactory to find an Assured who is honest enough and honourable enough to treat the Companies as fairly as the Companies, in nine cases out of ten, try to treat the Assured.

Yours very truly,
Rideut & Strickland.

THE HONOUR ROLL

In the roll of honour column of "The Editor and Publisher" appears the name of the Peterborough Examiner, one of six Canadian newspapers that have been selected for this distinction. The roll of honour is a list of publications examined by the Association of American Advertisers, of which a complete examination of the various records of circulation was made and the actual circulation ascertained. This guarantee will be appreciated by advertisers. The sworn average daily circulation of the Examiner for the three months ending January 31st was 7450 copies, a record figure for this city.

TO HOLD MEETING

There will be a meeting of the Menie District Ayrshire Breeders' Club at 10.00 a.m., Tuesday, February 28, in the St. Lawrence Hotel, Campbellford. The Ayrshire Breeders of Peterborough, Hastings, Prince Edward and Northumberland and Durahm are represented by this club. All breeders of pure-bred Ayrshires are cordially invited to be present on this occasion.

The speakers secured for this occasion are: H. S. Arkell, of the Dominion Live Stock Branch, Ottawa. W. F. Stephen, of Huntingdon, Quebec and H. B. Cowan of the Farm and Dairy, Peterborough. These men need no recommendation. Addresses relating to Dairying and to Ayrshires will be given. Make it a point to be present.

POST CARD COLUMN

Sporting Editor of the Examiner:

A bets B that Kingston Juniors beats Peterborough by 8 goals on the round and Peterborough juniors defaulted and sent down a picked team for an exhibition game so that the Kingston team could get the gate receipts. Who wins, A or B?

SPORT.

Bets on the round in this case should be called off. Any bets made on the round were of course on the basis of two O. H. A. games. As one game was defaulted there was no O. H.A. round and bets are off just the same as they would be if both games had been defaulted.—Sporting Editor.

HAVE YOU SEEN THE EXHIBITS IN THE ARMOURIES?

The Stove and Hardware Dealers of Ontario, in Convention assembled, are having quite a time in the Armouries this week.

One of the features of the Convention is the exhibition of various lines of stoves, hardware and hardware specialties in the booths on the main floor. To the man on the street—to whom, by the way, this part of the Convention is open—one of the most interesting exhibits is that of the Gillette Safety Razor Company.

Besides a strikingly handsome array of Standard Sets, Pocket Editions and Combination Sets, they are showing all the parts of the razor in their several stages of manufacture.

When a man, particularly, if he is interested in mechanics, sees the ingenuity, the skill and the minute care which is involved in making the Gillette, he understands better why it shaves so well.

An illustration of the firm's policy of doing things in an original and effective way is the souvenir badge which they are presenting to each member who attends the Convention Suspended from the usual bar is a bronze shield from which projects a bronze fork, shaped so as to hold between the prongs a Gillette shaving brush of the best quality. The shield can be readily detached from the bar and hung in the bathroom, as a handy brush holder, as well as a reminder of the 1911 Convention

DYSPEPSIA
Can Be Cured.
This disease is the all prevailing malady of civilized life, and one which oftenest baffles all ordinary treatment. It gives rise to a great variety of distressing symptoms, such as distress after eating, rising and souring of food, wind in the stomach, heartburn, etc.
Nearly everything that enters a weak dyspeptic stomach acts as an irritant; hence the great difficulty of effecting a cure.
The long train of distressing symptoms, which render life a burden to the victim of dyspepsia, may be promptly cured by the use of Burdock Blood Bitters.
B.B.B. regulates the stomach, liver and bowels, stimulates secretion of the saliva and gastric juice to facilitate digestion, purifies the blood, and tones up the entire system.
Mrs. Herman Dickens, Benton, N.B., writes: "I have used Burdock Blood Bitters and find that few medicines can give such relief in dyspepsia and stomach troubles. I was troubled for a number of years with dyspepsia, and could get no relief until I tried Burdock Blood Bitters. I took three bottles and became cured, and I can now eat anything without it hurting me. I will highly recommend it to all who are troubled with stomach trouble."

Premature Report

A morning contemporary contains an excellent report of a lecture supposed to have been given in the Murray Street Baptist church last night. It is stated that there was a very large attendance and that there was a hearty vote of thanks passed to the speaker. The information is rather surprising in view of the fact that the lecture is not to be given until March 21st, a month from last night.

Don't Miss Seeing the MAXWELL House and Garden Specialties

At the Hardware Dealers' Convention

Every woman, or man either, who is interested in the easiest and most up-to-date way of doing what used to be the heaviest tasks around the house, should certainly see the MAXWELL exhibit in the Armouries. It will be on view from February 21st to 24th, and is open to everybody.

MAXWELL Washing Machines are there in several styles — Electric, Puritan, Water, Motor Washers, Champion High Speed Washers, Blue Belle Washers—each run by a different method, each the leader of its type. Whatever style you like best, you are sure of satisfaction if it's a MAXWELL.

Then there are the Blue Belle Wringers—The very finest made, with covered cog wheels, ball bearings and solid rubber rolls, guaranteed for five years: The MAXWELL "FAVOURITE" Churn, whose sales are bigger than those of all other churns sold in Canada combined: MAXWELL Lawn Mowers, famous for their clean even cutting, easy running and long wearing qualities: MAXWELL Wheelbarrows in nine different styles, from the steel Mortar Barrow to the light Garden type.

We extend to you a most cordial invitation to come in and look over the MAXWELL specialties, for we believe you will find it well worth while.

ALBERT CHEVALIER IN "DADDY DUFARD"

There is one situation in "Daddy Dufard," the new character comedy in which Albert Chevalier comes to The Grand next Saturday, that is calculated to keep the audience in breathless suspense until the denouement. Daddy Dufard, a daughter, Rose, is ambitious to play a certain part at the leading music hall of London. Her father knows she is admirably fitted for this, as he has trained him herself, and there have been few finer actors and stage directors than he. Rose gets the chance because of the attitude of Celia Fitzjames, a musical comedy favourite, who chooses the part beneath her consideration, though she she had first call on it. Rose goes ahead with her study of the part, and pleases Grover Tolt, manager of the theatre. She reports to the theatre opening night, gets into her costume, and is on the stage, waiting for her cue, when Celia Fitzjames appears, tells Toft she has reconsidered her decision, and will play his part, in which she is thoroughly rehearsed. Toft, who looks at the matter from the viewpoint of the manager, and relies upon the reputation of Miss Fitzjames, rather than the inexperience of Miss Dufard, agrees to Celia's going on. It looks as if poor little Rose were headed for the big disappointment of her life, when Daddy Dufard makes his master move and saves the day for her. Just what the move is Liebler and Company, managers of Daddy Dufard, think that it would be unfair to tell in advance. At all events Rose gets her wish and Celia doesn't, and the audience at the stage theatre, and the audience at the real play are studied. The supporting cast is remarkable, including among others Violet Heming, Leslie Kneyon, Horace Mitchell, Mary Barker, A. Hylton Allen, and Frankie Raymond.

PLEASANT EVENING

A number of young people enjoyed a very pleasant time last evening at the home of Mrs. C. Westlake, 189 Brock street. The event was in the nature of a surprise party by a number of her friends. The young people indulged in a most enjoyable sleigh drive around the city, and then proceeded to the home of Mrs. Westlake. The evening was spent in music and singing. Miss Heard filling the position of accompanist very acceptably. Dancing and games were also indulged in, and a very sociable and enjoyable time was spent. A dainty luncheon was served at 1.30 after which dancing recommenced and continued until about 2.30 when the party broke up. There were about 45 guests in all.

CUTTER UPSET

On Charlotte Street, Throwing Occupants to Car Track

What might have proved a serious accident, occurred this morning about 11.30, when Mr. J. Sargent of 594 Charlotte street and Miss B. Starke were driving out Charlotte street. They were going west and when they reached the corner of Park and Charlotte streets, the cutter slewed at the turn and upset, throwing the occupants violently to the hard ground on the street car track. Fortunately both escaped injury. The horse being only a young one, ran home. It got off with slight injury, and the cutter was not damaged. This is a bad corner, and people should exercise care in driving around it.

THOUSANDS OF PETERBOROUGH CITIZENS SAW THE GREAT HARDWARE EXHIBITION

Hall Was Thrown Open to the Public Last Night and There Was a Very Large Attendance—Yesterday's Business Session.

THE QUESTION BOX

The hardware exhibition in the Armouries was thrown open to the public last night for the first time since the convention opened, and the citizens took full advantage of the opportunity, the result being a steady stream of visitors which commenced to pour into the building at 7.30 o'clock so fast that at 8 it was difficult to move around inside. The exterior of the Exhibition, and the vast amount of labour that had been taken in decorating and arranging the exhibits, was a surprise to the visitors. Nothing of the kind has been in Peterborough before and the citizens were loud in their praises of the display. The firms which have souvenirs to give away, were especial centres of attraction, and the Hardware Convention of 1911 will be remembered in most Peterborough homes by some of the attractive articles given away:

WEDNESDAY'S SESSION.

Owing to the difficulties attendant upon handling so many people at the hotel dining rooms Wednesday's session did not commence until 2 o'clock The hall was well filled when President Cinnamon called the meeting to order.

H. T. Kirk of New Westminster, B. C., President of the B. C. Hardware Dealers' Association, Mr. F. C. Lariviere, Montreal, Honorary member of the Ontario Association; Mr. Hunt, of London, and Mr. Muxwell of Iver & Johnson Arms Co., of Pittsburg, who will address the delegates to-night, were invited to seats to the left of the President.

Following the reading of communications the Chairman called upon Mr. Lariviere, the first Honorary member of the Association, to address the meeting. Mr. Lariviere stated that he took care to request the holding of the convention at a time when he could be present. He courteously placed himself at the disposal of any member who might wish the benefit of his long experience.

Mr. Kirk, the next gentleman called upon, affirmed his inability to speak, but made a happy address. Speaking of his own experience, he said he believed that a man should handle the reins of business himself. He regretted his not being present at the first session. He stated that his own Association had a membership of 40, and that at the meetings, held in Vancouver, 99 per cent. of the New Westminster dealers attended. He emphasized the advantages of the Association in the matter of preventing price cutting. Price-cutting, he deprecated, and thought the wholesalers had it in their power to stop this by refusing credit to men of limited capital. Pressure had been brought to bear, he said, to prevent the supplying of price cutters and grocers who handle various hardware lines at cut prices. In New Westminster, he said, the trade worked in harmony, and a meeting could be called together by any dealer in an hour's time. He extended an invitation to all dealers who could attend the British Columbia convention to do so. Mr. Kirk concluded an interesting address by a reference to the excellent time given him.

With a humorous reference to the proposed reciprocity, the Chairman introduced Mr. Maxwell of the Iver Johnson Arms Co., who will address the delegates to-night on "Price Maintenance." Business he considered much the same in Canada as in the United States, with "possibly less foam and froth."

Mr. Hunt, at last year's convention in London, Secretary of the Reception Committee, the chairman said, couldn't keep away. Mr. Hunt acknowledged that he had no particular business at the Convention, but wanted to renew pleasant friendships formed a year ago.

1st—Charles H. McGibbon, Peterborough Hardware Co.

The results of yesterday's contest will be announced this afternoon and to-morrow's contest, a stove contest, will complete the series. These competitions are open to any visiting dealer or clerk, who will be provided

CHARGED WITH HAVING MADE IMPROPER PROPOSALS

Coal Deliverer Was Fined $10 by Magistrate This Morning on This Offence---Man Who Created Row in Restaurant is Mulcted $5.

A local coal deliverer was fined $10 in the Police Court this morning for entering the house of a South End resident and making indecent proposals to the mistress of the house. He pleaded not guilty to the charge, but the evidence was so convicting that the decision of the court resulted as stated. Mr. G. N. Gordon appeared for the defence. It appears that the accused called at the house in question, on Tuesday morning last, about 9 o'clock, and asked if there had been any coal bags left there. On receiving a reply in the negative, he requested to be permitted to warm his hands. He was allowed this privilege. He remained in the house for about ten minutes, according to the plaintiff's statement, during which time, improper and offensive suggestions and proposals were made. When the mistress of the house asked him to depart, he did so without resistance. The Magistrate, however, held that he was guilty, as he had not delivered coal there, and apparently used this as an excuse to go there, at the same time having other reasons for going. He said that the woman had pluck in coming to court and making the complaint, and that she should and would be given the benefit of the law, just as much as if she was rich. Her husband also gave evidence. He stated that she told him as soon as he came home, and that he went to the accused's employer about it. When there he met the man himself, and went at him about it. The accused asked that he say nothing about it but the plaintiff was not content with that conclusion, so the affair resulted as already stated.

Tom Him and John Ging of the Dominion Chinese Cafe, charged a local young man with being disorderly in their restaurant. The accused pleaded guilty, but he was fined $5.00.

The Chinamen stated that he and another man came into the restaurant and had supper last night about 11.30, and the accused refused to pay for his. They stated that the other man got up and paid for his own and walked out. Then the accused refused to pay, saying that the first man had paid. The plaintiffs denied that the other man had paid for anymore than his own. In the little scuffle which took place a window was broken and the Magistrate allowed $3.00 of the $5.00 to the Chinamen for damages.

WAS DRAGGED ROUND BY RUNAWAY TEAM

Harry Eisom, a Cavan Township Man, Had His Leg Broken and Sustained Other Injuries---Was Caught in the Harness and Pulled Around Until Hook Broke.

Mr. Harry Elsom, of the 7th line of Cavan, was the victim of a serious accident last night, which might have proved fatal. Mr. Elsom, who has only one hand, uses a hook in the place of the missing member, the hook in question being the cause of the accident. Mr. Elsom had returned from Millbrook and was in the act of unhitching the horses, when one of them bolted, dragging Mr. Elsom, who was caught in the harness, by the hook.

They dragged the unfortunate victim around the yard several times, until finally the hook broke, releasing Mr. Elsom from his perilous position, but not until he had sustained a broken leg and several other injuries. Drs. Turner and Wright were immediately summoned, and they were unable to ascertain up to a late hour last night, the extent of the injuries.

Facts About Motherhood

The experience of Motherhood is a trying one to most women and marks distinctly an epoch in their lives. Not one woman in a hundred is prepared or understands how to properly care for herself. Of course nearly every woman nowadays has medical treatment at the time of child-birth, but many approach the experience with an organism unfitted for the trial of strength, and when the strain is over her system has received a shock from which it is hard to recover. Following right upon this comes the nervous strain of caring for the child, and a distinct change in the mother results.

There is nothing more charming than a happy and healthy mother of children, and indeed child-birth under right conditions need be no hazard to health or beauty. The unexplainable thing is that, with all the evidence of shattered nerves and broken health resulting from an unprepared condition, women will persist in going blindly to the trial.

It isn't as though the experience came upon them unawares. They have ample time in which to prepare, but they, for the most part, trust to chance and pay the penalty.

In many homes once childless there are now children because of the fact that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound makes women normal, healthy, and strong.

Any woman who would like special advice in regard to this matter is cordially invited to write to Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass. Her letter will be held in strict confidence.

LET THEM SHOW US.

Some of us—most of us who want to be reasonable—have doubts that freer trade relations with the United States will tend to political annexation. Some of us who have political axes to grind declare, with the greatest possible emphasis, that reciprocity means annexation. This is such a serious matter that the people of this country—whose political allegiance is to be thus rudely disturbed; whose instincts of loyalty and attachment to the Mother Country are to be thus outraged; whose happy, political condition with practically absolute self government, good laws, good customs, good citizenship and contentment, is to be displaced by political conditions that are repugnant to all their ideals and preferences—the people would like to know by what process of reasoning, if any reasoning is possible, the possibility, not to speak of the probability, of annexation is evolved from the minds of the annexation shriekers.

The people of Canada of all classes who, through every stress of strife—through even the bitter sacrifices of war—have stood firm, unflinching and unchangeable, to British connection; have resisted every temptation to change their allegiance in which they are more firmly fixed than ever—the people of Canada, who have remained and still remain, unalterably British through all these things, wish to know if they can be regarded as such cravens, such cowards, such meanly grovelling objects that at this late day they should be willing to so sacrifice all the fruits of the past, so discredit all the memories of the past, as to be willing to even consider, not to speak of, accepting, annexation.

Will the yellow journals of the Conservative press, who shriek "annexation" with hysterical insistence; with the yellow politicians who join the cry, please explain the steps by which annexation is to be a logical result of the adoption of a trade agreement whose whole object is practically to promote a freer trade exchange of agricultural products between Canada and the United States? Let them point out the various steps; not by declamation, but by argument let these steps be exposed, let the sinister sequence to the unwelcome goal of annexation be plainly displayed. Let them produce their arguments, if they have any arguments. In default of doing so the people are justified in concluding that these shouters of "annexation," have no ground for their cry; that they are animated by no higher purpose than to debase every consideration of national advantage, every consideration of good citizenship, every consideration of fair and honest argument and legitimate political expedient to the gain of a petty partisan advantage.

The trade agreement is now under consideration by Parliament. It is either a more or less beneficial promoter of Canadian trade activity and prosperity, or otherwise. This is a legitimate object of discussion. In this way it can be discussed on its merits; but to substitute the senseless and unwarranted cry of "annexation" for argument is to debase a question of the greatest possible import to our national prosperity, or otherwise; is unworthy of journals or men who lay the slightest claim to fairness or patriotism.

If they honestly believe—which is very hard to believe—that the adoption of the trade agreement will lead to annexation, they must have been subjected to the same influence that produces all belief — conviction, founded upon evidence or argument. It is their duty to furnish this argument to propound the evidence. Assertion is not enough—that is the argumentative weapon of the demagogue. We should have logic, we should be shown.

In regard to the influence of freer trade upon annexation sentiment, the reader is specially referred to an article reprinted upon this page, taken from one of the staunchest true-blue Tory journals in Canada—the Ottawa Citizen. It is well worth reading, and it will show the degenerate Conservatives of these days how the noblest Roman of them all, Sir John Macdonald, regarded the matter. It is worth while repeating this great statesman's views. Just prior to the abrogation, in 1865, of the Reciprocity Treaty of 1854, Sir John, in a report to the Imperial Government, (Feb 19, 1865) besought that Government to leave nothing untried to "avert what would be generally regarded by the people of Canada, as a great calamity"—the abrogation of the treaty. The report continued:

> "It would be impossible to express in figures, with any approach to accuracy, the extent to which the facilities of commercial intercourse created by the reciprocity treaty have contributed to the wealth and prosperity of this province; and it would be difficult to exaggerate the importance which the people of Canada attach to the continued enjoyment of these facilities."

Then referring to the events of 1849—the annexation manifesto, signed principally by prominent Conservatives, the report dealts with this matter in a way to particularly interest the "annexation" ranters of to-day, and says:

> "Nor is the subject entirely devoid of political significance. Under the beneficial operation of the system of self-government, which the later policy of the Mother Country has accorded to Canada, in common with the other colonies possessing representative institutions, combined with the advantages secured by the reciprocity treaty of an unrestricted commerce with our nearest neighbours in the natural productions of the two countries, all agitation for organic changes has ceased—all dissatisfaction with the existing political relations of the province has wholly disappeared."

So that reciprocity, instead of promoting annexation, prevented annexation, which was a live issue at that time; whereas, as a sentiment or even as an idea, it is at the present time as dead as Julius Caesar. The words quoted above are not the words of some pestilent Grit, but the words of Sir John Macdonald, whose word should be law to every Conservative. Let the advocates of annexation who profess to have visions of it in the trade agreement, show us, by argument and evidence, how the pending trade arrangement will lead to annexation; only by doing this can they expect to be regarded seriously.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Toronto, which cannot even run the village pump or a street railway, is ready to decide the fate of the empire without half trying.

IT IS TO LAUGH.

(Farmers' Sun.)

In the trade year ending with March last we exported 13,000 bushels of beans to the United States in the face of a duty of 45c. per bushel; 147,000 bushels of barley in the face of a tax of 30c. per bushel; 86,000 tons of hay despite a tariff of $4 per ton; 679,000 bushels of potatoes on which the tariff is 25c. per bushel, and in the present fiscal year we will ship $3,000,000 worth of dairy products notwithstanding a tax of five cents per gallon on cream and six cents per pound on butter and on cheese.

This is a very considerable trade. Still no one pretends the continued existence of Canada as a nation is jeopardized by carrying it on. Why, then, should our nationality be destroyed by exporting larger volumes of these same commodities, to the same market, when all the taxes which now hamper the traffic are wholly abolished? One could understand the desirability of getting rid of these impediments to commerce being advanced as an argument in favour of political union. To assert that the removal of the impediments would lead to annexation is, as our French-Canadian compatriots would say, to touch

(Ottawa Citizen, Conservative.)

In the present controversy some public men on both sides of politics go so far as to suggest that the loyalty of the Canadian west is dependent on the maintenance by the United States of the present high duties on Canadian wheat and cattle. That is to say, they contend that if those duties are repealed, as proposed by the Fielding-Knox agreement, the settler will be rendered so prosperous that nothing can stop him from rushing to anexation in order to enjoy a fuller and more permanent measure of trade with the Americans.

Others, holding the opposite view, say that the present reciprocity, like that of 1854, will certainly improve the condition of the great natural industries, agriculture included, but by so doing will render the people at large better satisfied with Canadian institutions rather than less satsfied; so that instead of an agitation for political union in the west we shall find the settler starting his spring work with greater energy and more faith than ever in the future of the Dominion as a self-governing British community.

This conflict of opinion on so grave a subject can be decided, The Citizen believes, to the satisfaction of most intelligent men by further reference to the history of the Reciprocity Treaty of 1854.

We all know that a formidable annexation movement displayed itself in Montreal in 1849. It was brought about by the dislocation of Canadian commerce resulting from England's abandonment of the old Imperial preferential policy and her adoption of Free Trade. Our merchants found it difficult for the time being to compete in the British market with the exports of the older nations, whilst our raw products were shut out of the American market by duties running as high at 30 per cent. The manifesto, signed by influential men of all shades of opinion, advocated annexation principally on the grounds that in no other way could we obtain closer commercial relations with the United States, numerous diplomatic and legislative efforts to secure reciprocity.

Reciprocity was sought by Canadians as early as 1818 and a very remarkable petition from the Upper Canada legislature was laid before the British house of commons in 1836; for, strange as it may appear to the modern Imperial preferentialist, the policy of Imperial preference, in operation down to 1840 or thereabouts, bore hard in many respects upon the Canadian farmer. In 1847 the parliament of the Province of Canada lowered its duties on American and raised them on British factory goods, and in 1849 passed an act providing for the free admission of American wheat and other breadstuffs, vegetables, fruits, animals, butter, cheese, meats, lumber, etc., whenever like articles the produce of Canada were admitted free into the United States. If fish was not mentioned it was because the seaboard Provinces were then separate political entities, having nothing in common with the Province of Canada save the flag. Meanwhile the British minister at Washington had been labouring hard for reciprocity, but his and our offers and representations were seemingly of no avail.

How serious the situation was appears from Walrond's Letters and Journals of Lord Elgin, the governor-general. "How long," his lordship asks, "can such a state of things be expected to endure?" and he answers the question thus: "I am confident I could carry Canada unscathed through all these evils of transition and place the connection on a surer foundation than ever, if I could only tell the people of the province that, as regards the conditions of material prosperity they would be raised to a level with their neighbours. But if this be not achieved, if free navigation and reciprocal trade with the Union, be not secured for us, the worst, I fear, will come and that at no distant day." His private letters to the Lord Grey of the period who was at the colonial office contain many observations to the same effect; indeed, from first to last throughout that critical time Lord Elgin's recipe for dissipating the annexation movement was this (p. 61): "As regards these colonies you must allow them to turn to the best possible account their contiguity to the States, that they may not have cause for dissatisfaction when they contrast their own condition with that of their neighbours." Or as he says in another place (p. 102): "You have a great opportunity before you. Obtain reciprocity for us and I venture to predict that you will be able shortly to point to this hitherto turbulent colony with satisfaction, in illustration of the tendency of self-government and freedom of trade to beget contentment and material progress."

It may be well to say that Lord Elgin was not a confirmed Free Trader. He did not by any means believe in all that Peel and Cobden contended for, but was quite certain that closer commercial intercourse between Canada and the States would redound to the advantage of Canada. By a happy chance it fell to him to secure the Treaty of 1854 after years of fruitless endeavour on the part of others. That treaty, amongst other things, as has already been pointed out by The Citizen, provided for the free interchange of natural products, fish included, and in its general scope was not unlike the Fielding-Knox agreement of today. It was abrogated by congress in 1866 on various grounds, really because England and the United States in consequence of differences that has arisen during the American civil war had ceased to be friends. But before that happened the Canadian government in a report of council (Feb. 19 1865) entreated the Imperial ministry to leave no stone unturned "to avert what would be generally regarded by the people of Canada as a great calamity." This report, probably drafted by Sir John Macdonald or Galt, went on to say that "it would be impossible to express in figures, with any approach to accuracy, the extent to which the facilities of commercial intercourse created by the reciprocity treaty have contributed to the wealth and prosperity of this province; and it would be difficult to exaggerate the importance which the people of Canada attach to the continued enjoyment of these facilities." Then, turning back to the events of 1849, the report proceeds: "Nor is the subject entirely devoid of political significance. Under the beneficial operation of the system of self-government, which the later policy of the Mother Country has accorded to Canada, in common with the other colonies possessing representative institutions, combined with the advantage secured by the reciprocity treaty of an unrestricted commerce with our nearest neighbours in the natural productions of the two countries, all agitation for organic changes has ceased—all dissatisfaction with the existing political relations of the province has wholly disappeared."

The council were sure that if the treaty was abrogated the loyalty of the Canadian people to their sovereign would not be diminished in the slightest degree; still, as they said "they think they cannot err in directing the attention of the enlightened men who wield the destinies of the empire "to the connection which is usually found to exist between the material prosperity and the political contentment of a community, for in doing so they feel they are appealing to the highest motives that can actuate patriotic statesmen—the desire to perpetuate a dominion founded on the affectionate allegiance of a prosperous and contented people."

Instead then of precipitating annexation the reciprocity of 1854 warded it off, as Lord Elgin had foreseen. It was for this reason probably that Sir John Macdonald, a staunch Imperialist if ever there was one, was always anxious to see the treaty revived or the free interchange in some form of natural products re-established.

It will not do to say that we have outgrown the need of such a measure. Our exports of natural products to the United States are only second in volume to our exports to Britain; and as Sir John used to put it, if we have two free markets instead of one to sell to, it stands to reason we shall be just that much better off. And with all respect for those who think otherwise, it seems to The Citizen to follow as an irresistible conclusion that our increased prosperity will bring about a stauncher and more generous loyalty to Canada and to Great Britain, especially among those new races and peoples from various parts of the earth who are flocking by tens and hundreds of thousands into the Canadian West.

"THE INNOCENT MURDERERS"

By Wm. Johnston and Paul West

"Thanks," said the stranger. "Bye and bye, when there's less danger of being seen, I think I'll go up and make an investigation. Now, I'm going to look around."

"Good luck," said the Dean, "and don't forget to keep me informed of everything that happens. I shall not go to bed to-night, but will remain up and ready to lend you any assistance you may require."

"Good," said the stranger. "Oh, by the way, I left some of those papers in your library."

The Dean and the stranger re-entered the house and the door closed.

The trio in the shadows of the lilacs awoke.

"Did you hear what he said? Did you hear it?" snapped Snyder.

"I did," said Rice. "He's a detective."

"Yes," said Fischer, "and hes going over to der cemetery to-night to see vat made der light. He vill be too late. Come along."

He buttoned his coat tightly around his stocky figure, pulled his slouch hat down over his eyes and set off at a pace that Rice and even the long-legged Snyder had difficulty in maintaining.

Nothing was said for some time, until they had deviated from the main road and turned off toward the hawthorn path that they had once before travelled in company. Then the curious Snyder made bold to ask with what little breath he could spare from walking

"Vhat what are we going to do now?"

"Ve are going to get it," said Fischer, "Ve are going to take der body back to der college building!"

"The college building!" Rice and Snyder sprang the words with surprised emphasis.

"Yes, of course," said Fischer. "It is now der only vay out of der mess. Listen. Der body must be found, mustn't it?"

"Unless—" said Rice.

"Oh, I haf thought of all dot. Quickline, at the bottom of some pond—everyt'ing. It could not be safe. It might leave some traces. Let dem find der body since dey must, but under natural conditions. Der observatory of der college has not been used in several weeks. Ve vill put it up dere, vid der pieces of dot graduating glass by its side—der von he broke ven he drank vot vas in it. Snyder, you vill go to the laboratory und pick up der pieces—all you can find."

"Nuttings at all," said Fischer. "Snyder wrote dot note because Hopkins asked him to. Hopkins vas disappointed in some experiments he hes been making; he vished to commit suicide, of course." This was the German's way of looking at it, for a fact! "Vell, he had not der courage to say so; he had to use deceit, concealment—it is all in line vid his usual vay of keeping t'ings to himself. So he told Snyder he vas going avay, got him to put der note on der door, crept up into der observatory, und—vell, dere dey vill find him."

"When?" asked Snyder.

"How can I tell?" asked Fischer. "It is not my lookiut. It is der detective's!"

Probably, in their excited state of mind, Rice and Snyder would have assented to any plan less feasible than this one. Fischer's suggestion now seemed perfectly practical to them. They wondered why they had not thought of it themselves. In detail it was so complete, even to the manner of suicide. The discovery of the graduating glass by the side of the body; an analysis of its contents compared to the contents of the stomach—why, everything was so well worked out! It was masterful. Snyder alone had an objection. He did not like to go to the laboratory to get the pieces of glass.

The others, however, overruled him, so he finally assented.

They had no wheelbarrow with them this time. When they reached the vault in which lay the dangerous object that had caused them so much trouble, they realized that they must carry it back in their arms. They did not relish the idea. Not even the phlegmatic Fischer. But it had to be done. The trio assisted each other in lifting it out of the vault, and then the German flung it upon his shoulder and they resumed their homeward journeys. They uttered not a word. There was no topic open for conversation, except once, when Fischer stumbled and said:

Rice was just in time with a balancing touch to keep the Germans from dropping his ghastly bundle. Again when the blankets became partially unwrapped and trailed on the ground, Fischer asked Snyder to tuck them in. He did so, but it was a dreadful task.

They all noted with satisfaction that the luminosity of the body seemed entirely to have vanished. It gave forth no tell-tale glow through the blankets. It was just like any other body now. But it was too late, they realized, for this to be of any benefit to them. If it had only happened before they put it in the ice-house! If it had only never glowed!

The burden was such a heavy one and Fischer groaned under it so toward the end that Rice volunteered to relieve him.

"No," said the German "no; I am all right. Snyder, go ahead and get into der laboratory. Dat is all."

"I will leave you as we pass the laboratory, go on and find the fragments, andrejoin you in the observatory," suggested Snyder, unwilling to be left alone for any longer than was necessary.

"All right," grunted Fischer. Rice only snifled at their companion's cowardice.

They took the course over the college hill behind the town by the ice-pond. They were too eager to be affected by the familiar spots they had to pass.

"Ve vill go round by der back vay" said Rischer; "it is safer, I guess."

At the rear of the college building was an open space, the building sheltering it on two sides. The door for which they were aiming was at the intersection of the two sides of the structure, and connected directly with the stairs leading to the second floor. They entered and, with much work, carried their burden upstairs, along the hall, past the laboratory door and up the short steps to the observatory. These steps were directly outside the laboratory, and Snyder left them at that moment, unlocking the room with the key which remained in the door.

He did not dare turn up the electric light but hunted about the floor for the pieces of glass. It took him a long time to find them. Once he thought he had enough and hurried upstairs to the observatory. But Fischer told him that he must find more—all he could. Otherwise it would not look like a complete glass. So Snyder went back to his task.

Finally it was done. He found practically all the glass. The few crumbs that were too small to carry he brushed out of sight on the floor of the laboratory. Taking it upstairs he and Fischer and Rice scattered the bits about so that they would look as though they had been shattered by being dropped by the dead man. They arranged Hopkins, now shorn of his blankets and just as they had last seen him alive, in such a position as they imagined a man would assume who had taken a drink of poison and fallen to the ground, dead. They had an example to follow in this arrangement, it must be remembered—the memory of how he really had looked, that night in the laboratory.

All this took time. It was fully half an hour before they considered their task complete and stole downstairs into Snyder's classroom, to put their clothing in order and clean away any signs of their work.

"Vell," said Fischer, at last, standing before a mirror and brushing his scant hair by the light of a candle which they had dared use to give some slight illumination. "Vell, gentlemen, I t'ink it is over. If now dere should be any investigation I do not believe dat dere is any t'ing to connect us vid der affair."

"How about Gordon?" asked Rice.

"Nobody believes a man who runs away," said Fischer, "und besides, dey have not found Gordon."

"I hope they won't," said Snyder. "And now, as it is getting late, don't you think we had better be thinking about going home?"

"I am ready," said Fischer. 'Come.'

For the first time since their troubles had made them constant companions, Snyder took the lead. Now that the affair appeared to be nearing its end, he wished to be the first out of it. So, when Rice opened the door, Snyder slipped through in advance.

But the affair was not over, for them. Detective Sullivan, on leaving the Dean's house, which he had done directly after Snyder, Fischer and Rice had started for the cemetery, had gone to Mrs. Hopkins', where he had a short talk with the unhappy woman, begging her to cheer up, but trying to circumspect hints, to prepare her for the worst.

"If your husband is as bad a man as we have thought," he said, "he would be better dead than alive to you, I should think. Especially if he carried any insurance."

"He did," said Mrs. Hopkins. "Here is the policy." I have been looking it over only to-day."

"Thrifty woman," thought Sullivan "Well, may be she will collect on it sooner than she expects."

He left her in a little while and retraced his steps. It was now late, and he thought he might as well pay his visit to the cemetery now as at any time. So he set off rapidly, passing the Dean's house without looking in, and taking the road directed.

He had turned the hawthorn path and was getting away from the village, when he thought he heard voices. He stepped to one side of the road and listened. The voices ceased but he could hear heavy breathing. He was on the alert. In the gloom of the night he could see nothing, but he could hear everything. Finally, just as they passed him—and there was more than one person—he heard a familiar voice. It was Fischer's. It said:

"No, I am all right. Snyder, you run ahead now and get into der laboratory. Dat is all."

"But," came another voice, "I will leave you as we pass the laboratory go in and find the fragments, and rejoin you in the observatory."

The detective felt that his heart beats must be audible to the men. By straining his eyes he could see them now that they had passed. One of them, the German, was carrying a heavy bundle on his shoulders. Hopkins! It could be nothing else. But why were they taking it to the college observatory? Sullivan did not care why. The main point was that they were, and this was his opportunity to trap them. He waited until they were far enough ahead for him to dare follow. Then he crept after them in the dark. He could barely distinguish their movements when they turned off to go up the hill by the ice-pond. Then he turned to the left, rushed down the road and into Dean Quimby's house.

"Quick!" he cried. "Out with you and meet me at the foot of College Hill in two minutes!" He dashed out of the house again and along the road to the residence of Mrs. Hopkins. He dragged the astonished woman, bonnetless, out of her house, and back to the foot of the hill, where the Dean was standing, all aghast.

The Stomach Needs Help

The Liver, Kidneys and Bowels Must Be Kept Active to Ensure Health

DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS

Not one person in a hundred can get along at this time of year, without using something to enliven the action of the liver, kidneys and bowels.

The liver and kidneys are overworked in their efforts to remove the poisonous waste matter from the system. They fail and become torpid and clogged. The bowels become constipated and stomach derangements follow.

There is one medicine which will overcome this condition more certainly and more quickly than any other, and that is Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

This medicine gets the bowels in action at once and by awakening the liver and kidneys ensures the thorough cleansing of the filtering and excretory systems.

With the poisonous obstructions removed, the digestive system resumes a healthful condition, appetite improves, pains and aches disappear as well as irritability and depression.

You cannot imagine a more satisfactory treatment for biliousness, constipation, backache and kidney disease than Dr Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. One pill a dose, 25 cents a box, at all dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

DEPUTATION TO WAIT ON RAILWAY BOARD

Will Urge That the C. P. R. Be Refused Permission to Put Subway at Park Street---Baptist Church Congregation Protest---Meeting at Mr. Braund's Store Last Night.

The adjourned meeting of Thursday night last was continued last night in R. C. Braund's store for the purpose of protesting against the closing line altogether as far as the C. P. R. There were 13 people out to represent the ratepayers of the south end. The failure of those present to do any business was probably due to the fact that an unlucky number predominated. Mr. Braun, at the commencement of the meeting produced some interesting figures to show just how many streets were crossed by steam railroads in Peterborough at the present time. The C. P. R. main line passes over 18 streets within the city limits, while the Grand Trunk crosses 54 streets, four of which are protected by gates. Figures were also given covering the actual amount of traffic crossing Park street between the hours of 5.45 a.m. and 7 p.m. Yesterday they were as follows: 20,037 pedestrians and 153 rigs. This is one of the crossings that would be effected by the new line.

Mr. Braund, in his opening remarks, said that he had consulted his solicitor and had been advised to try and secure the services of a few of the ratepayers and go to Toronto on Friday and interview the Railway Commissioners. The city council had turned down the railroad's proposition at their meeting last night and announced their intention of doing all in their power to prevent the closing of the streets.

It was proposed that a resolution be drawn up and forwarded to the Railway Commissioners, voicing the sentiments of the people in respect to the closing of the streets.

The desirability of securing the Georgian Bay line was also discussed, as without the new line the city would be practically off the main of certain streets by the C. P. R. was concerned. This would only be a side line passing through here in its present form. Railroads were an important factor to the growth of the city. They were an inducement to manufacturers to locate here, and if we would have the railroads, we must bear a certain amount of annoyance.

The proposed deputation which will go to Toronto on Friday to interview the Railway Commissioners will be Mayor Morrow, City Solicitor Hall and Messrs. Duncan and Braund. None of those present, outside of Mr Braund, seemed inclined to join the deputation, so no action was taken in the matter.

A resolution was drawn up and will be presented to the Railway Commissioners by the deputation. It read as follows:

Moved by a meeting of the south end property owners by Joseph Johnston, seconded by Frank Wilson, that we, the property owners here assembled do solemnly protest against the closing of Chamberlain as well as any other street, and pray that the subway be built at Monaghan road, as proposed by the Council.

Attention was also drawn to the matter of fire protection. Should the streets in question be closed, it was shown that it would be necessary for the Fire Dept. to go about one mile further in order to reach some of the boxes on streets, such as Parnell street for instance.

In referring to the matter of fire protection, some of those present took the opportunity of making a few remarks concerning the high efficiency of the present brigade as compared with the old volunteer brigade. They had no desire whatever to show any disrespect towards the old brigade, as they had rendered good service to the city, but the system was too antique to meet the requirements of a growing city like Peterborough. The present brigade had been known to respond to a call in the vicinity of Mr. Braund's store inside of three minutes. Most of them thought that was pretty good going ,especially in view of the fact that the Fire Dept. horses have the reputation of being slow.

After a little more discussion concerning the railroad case, the meeting came to an end.

Rev. W. C. Riddiford of the Park Street Baptist church, will be a member of the deputation which will appear before the Railway Board tomorrow and will submit the following petition:

To the Board of Railway Commissioners of Canada—

Dear Sirs,—On behalf of the Park Street Baptist Church of the City of Peterborough, we have been requested to protest against the proposed sub-way to be constructed by the C. P. R., and also the closing of Park street, as submitted in their plan to your honourable body. While we do not wish to do anything to retard the progress or plans of the C.P.R., whose services to the public we all appreciate, yet we do feel that the closing of Park street, and the construction of a subway at the point proposed, would be detrimental to the work of our church, which has been built in the past two years by the great sacrifice of the working men in the district in question. We feel that the splendid church and grounds which have recently been built, would lose their moral worth to this community and a great wrong would be done to the heroic working men, who have sacrificed their somewhat scanty means for the moral good of the community. Before granting the request of the C.P.R. in this matter we would most humbly pray your honourable body to meet with us at Peterborough and go over the ground and see for yourselves that our protest is both reasonable and just.

Signed on behalf of the Park Street Baptist Church, Peterborough,

Rev. W. C. Riddiford, pastor; Wm Kemp, chairman of the Trustee Board; Harold Foster, Clerk.

"Consumption"

Three Doctors Attended Her. Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup Cured Her.

It has long been known that the balsamic odor of the newly cut pine tree heals and invigorates the lungs and consumptives improve and revive amid the perfume of the pines. Since but few can command the luxury of a visit to the pineries, it will be good news to many to know that the essential healing principle of the pine has been separated, and refined, and combined with other absorbent, expectorant and soothing medicines of recognized worth in the manufacture of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup.

Mrs. Charles McDermott, Bathurst, N.B., writes: "I thought I would write and let you know the benefit I have received through the use of your Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. Three years ago I had Consumption and had three doctors attending me, and they were very much alarmed about my condition. I was so weak and miserable I could not do my housework. While looking through your B.B.B. almanac I saw that Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup was good for weak lungs so I got a bottle and after taking ten bottles I was completely cured. At that time I weighed 135 pounds and now weigh 172, a gain of 37 pounds in three years. I now keep it in the house all the time and would not be without it for anything as I owe my life to it."

MUSIC AND DRAMA

"My Cinderella Girl," William Norris "afrcical play with music" proved a very amusing and entertaining production as played by Franker Woods and a strong supporting company at the Grand last night if the constant obligato of laughter which accompanied the performance can be accepted as a criterion. The audience found the presentation one of the funniest of the season, the many hilariously amusing situations being responsible for a continuous gale of laughter. The action turns around the adventures of Tom Harrigan, captain of the Siwash College ball team. By helping himself to a uniform belonging to a captain of the United States army he obtains admission to a military ball and there meets his fate in the shape of a pretty girl whose slipper comes into his possession in a Cinderella-like manner. The adventure puts him in danger of arrest for theft and his troubles are increased next morning, the day of an important game with a rival college team when his father arrives on the scene. Harrington, senior, has a strong feeling against baseball and labours under the impression that his son is a mathematical genius, while on the contrary Tom knows nothing of the subject and is wrapped up in the game. The efforts of the Siwash captain to deceive his father as to the progress of his studies and at the same time to get into the big game are responsible for many laughable situations and bright lines. There is the usual happy ending of course, Tom winning the game and his girl by a home run in the ninth innings. The baseball scene is well staged and the result decidedly realistic.

Franker Woods made a big hit as the baseball captain carrying off the principal laurels in a breezy manner that won instantaneous favour. The supporting company left little to be desired. Some of the song numbers were very catchy, the favourites being "I'd Rather be a Friend of Your's Than Somebody Ele's Dear," and "Put the Ball Over the Pan, McGann."

with materials and window space by local dealers.

Regarding visiting the plants of the local manufacturers the Secretary announced that the date had been left open and that invitations had been received from various local firms. He urged that those manufacturers who have made the Exhibition a success should receive the attention of the visitors. In regard to visiting the Canadian General Electric plant it was pointed out that no invitation had been received, but an arrangement had been made whereby visitors could be shown through.

On motion it was decided to meet at the Oriental Hotel at 8.30 Thursday morning to visit the plant of the Canadian General Electric Co. and

The report of the Fire Insurance Committee was then read by the Secretary and which will appear in full in the regular monthly issue of the Canadian Hardware and Stove Journal. Mr. Brocklebank, on request, added to the report some valuable information, and handed out the pleasing information that the proposition would mean a considerable reduction in the cost of insurance. After some discussion. Provisional application blanks were distributed among the delegates, with the request that they be filled in by the dealers. Any dealer desiring copies of these may secure them from the Secretary. Members were, on motion, requested to sign these and hand them in not later than to-day at noon.

Mr. C. W. Conn next read the report of the lien note committee, which body recommended a form for estimating plumbing, and that it be printed for sale to the members.

Mr. Brocklebank, chairman of the Nominating Committee, announced that the members would meet in the evening and present their report at the Question Box discussion.

The Resolutions Committee's report presented by Ald. H. Occomore, was taken up seriatim. This report, too

QUESTION BOX DISCUSSION

It was 8.30 last night when Wm. Magladery called the Question Box meeting to order, notifying the members that they might speak only once on a question, with a limit of two minutes.

The first question was: "What should be the total sales on a $5,000 stock?" Jno. Wanless said it should be at least $15,000, and might be $20,000. Locality and nature of stock made a great difference. Mr. Conn thought that it should be turned over at least three times. Some dealers sell a lot of stock that they do not carry, making the turnover large.

"What help would you consider consistent with a $30,000 turnover one-third credit?"

Mr. Lariviere thought that whether credit or cash business made little difference. He thought a sales be sufficient. He thought 7 per cent

H. T. Kirk thought one-third of merchants charged plumbers' and tinsmiths' wages to expense. If you are making a direct profit out of these men they should be charged to a small amount. Others said this item would be part of the selling a proper limit for salaries.

H. E. Wells thought if tinsmith and plumber were kept, 7 per cent. cost.

man, delivery man, and boy would merchandise account.

"What would you do if the business showed a larger turnover but profits were smaller than the year before?"

"Sell out quick," said D. Cinnamon. "I would take stock and find out where the leaks were," added H. Occomore. Mr. Lariviere said the causes might be increase of expense, decrease of profits by selling more unprofitable goods than in former years, or an error in the inventory.

J. W. PEART, St. Marys, Ex-Executive Committee

"The statement that 95 per cent. of merchants fail means that out of 100 who go into business only 5 make a real success," said J. McGregor, Oakville.

"That means," said Mr. Magladery, "that only five per cent. make a huge success, 25 a fair success, while others struggle along, and still others are real failures."

"Do you approve of interesting clerks financially in the business? If so, what plan do you consider the best?"

Mr. Lariviere said: "If you give clerk possibilities of making as much as he can make elsewhere, he will not want to go elsewhere. There is no limit to the salary of the clerk. Has one clerk 20 years, another 14, and another 13. Every month a report shows each salesman all details of the sales and the result is to stimulate zeal of clerk."

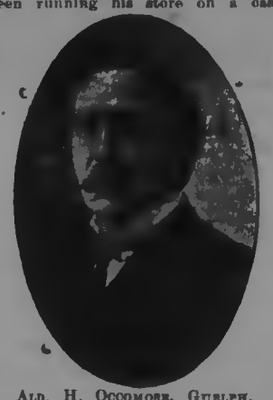
"Is it possible to do a cash business, and does a cash business pay?"

Ed. Wanless, Chatham, said he'd like to do so. He could not see how a workshop could be run on a cash basis. It can't be worked out on the note business. In a hardware store where you know what your goods cost it may be possible, but on an eavestroughing job you couldn't do it.

Mr. Hendershot, Mt. Forest, has been running his store on a cash



ALD. H. OCCOMORE, Guelph, Chairman of the Resolutions Committee, and a coming President

basis for two months and his sales have increased as a result. I have lost some customers, but I have gained others, whose trade will be most profitable for me. My competitors tell me they would like to get on the cash basis also.

"The jobbers are shortening credits and why shouldn't we?" asked Mr. Magladery.

D. McNab, Orillia, said he did not think a hardwareman could do an absolutely cash business.

F. W. Jeffrey, Midland, told of trying to do a cash business, but giving it up. If you do business with contractors, boats, mill men, summer cottagers, etc., you cannot do it. I figure that I don't lose half of one per cent. in bad debts on my turnover.

Mr. Henderson, Niagara Falls, said he would not go back to the credit system on goods sold over the counter.

D. Brocklebank, Arthur, said that every member ought to reduce the amount on their books. "We used to put one-third of our sales on our books. Now we only put about one-twelfth of our business on credit."

J. Dandie, Streetsville, said he only figured on a 20 per cent. margin on stoves, and he had made up his mind to charge one per cent. a month on credit stove sales.

Mr. Magladery said he charged the one per cent. on credit stove sales, although he did not do a cash business. This can be collected in the courts as a part of the contract.

"You can't do that on stove sales in British Columbia," said H. T. Kirk. "Nor in Quebec," added Mr. Lariviere.

One member said his lawyer had advised him that he could not collect more than six per cent in court, even if it is made part of the contract.

"The margin on stoves ought to be at least 25 per cent.," said Mr. Chown.

"Should the clerks and warehousemen attend the same convention? If not, will we have to hold a separate convention?"

Mr. Taylor said: "I don't see how we and our clerks can attend the same convention without closing up, and I swear I won't stay home. The clerks," he pointed out, "could get the information in the Journals."

WORKING WOMEN

Here is a Helping Hand—A Newton Woman's Experience

You know just how it is yourself—when you are tired out perhaps a little run-down, and hardly able to drag around, life is a burden, you are irritable, nervous, depressed and every little task seems like a mountain.

Miss Katharine Burns, of Newton, Mass., says—"About six months ago I was in a run-down condition and my blood was very poor. I had taken several medicines prescribed by physicians, but they seemed to do me no good. Finally Vinol was recommended, and from the first bottle I noticed a great improvement. I have taken six bottles and I feel as well as ever, and I would recommend Vinol to anybody needing a good tonic to build them up and make them strong." (We guarantee this testimonial to be genuine.)

We want to ask every woman who finds herself in this condition to try Vinol, our delicious cod liver and iron tonic, without oil, with the understanding that their money will be returned if it does not help them.

We know Vinol will create an appetite, aid digestion, make pure, rich blood, and in this way build up and strengthen the run-down, overworked, nervous system. You take no chances. Try it.

MR. R. R. HALL'S OPINION OF FARMERS' BANK CASE

In an Interview With the Examiner He Reviews the Evidence Heard in the Conspiracy Charges Before Magistrate Denison---Was No Indication of Wrong Doing.

A representative of the Examiner, called upon Mr. R. R. Hall for an expression of statement and opinion regarding the Farmers' Bank investigation:

"What is the charge against Mr. Stratton and Mr. Warren, Mr. Hall?"

Mr. Hall said it read as follows:

"That in the year 1906 they did, contrary to law conspire, confederate and agree with the Provisional Directors of the Farmers' Bank and others to obtain by false representation, deceit and fraud from or through the Treasury Board of the Dominion of Canada, the certificate required in order to enable the Farmers' Bank of Canada to open for business under the provisions of the Bank Act, to the detriment of the public."

"What is your opinion, Mr. Hall, of the evidence which was given in support of that charge?"

"In my judgment there has not been submitted to the Court one tittle of evidence upon which a commitment for trial should be based, but on the contrary the evidence at the trial entirely exonerates Mr. Stratton and Mr. Warren from any wrong-doing in connection with the Farmers' Bank."

"What are your reasons," asked the reporter, "for forming such a strong opinion?"

"In the first place the only misrepresentation that was made," said Mr. Hall, "to the Finance Minister and the Treasury Board of the Dominion of Canada was contained in a declaration made by Mr. W. R. Travers, then General Manager of the Farmers' Bank, wherein he swore in these words, 'On the 23rd day of October, 1906, there had been actually bona fide subscribed 5,757 shares of the Capital Stock of the Farmers' Bank of Canada, and I have had personal knowledge of the applications and subscriptions and each and all of the said subscriptions is and are on the printed form of application, a copy of which is now produced and marked Exhibit "C" to this my declaration, and that the said subscriptions appear on the stock books of the said Bank and that a sum beyond $250,000 thereof in cash has been actually paid in by the subscribers of the same.'"

"Was that statement wholly incorrect?"

"No," said Mr. Hall, "the evidence showed that there was 5,757 shares subscribed and that the stock-holders had actually paid in on account of their subscription almost $200,000.00 in cash and that Travers personally hypothecated to the Trusts Company certain notes made by the shareholders and raised thereon $80,000.00, which sum, at Travers' request, was paid over openly to the order of the Bank of Montreal, who are the Bankers for the Dominion Government, and the cheque on its face showed that it was to be deposited with the Finance Minister and the Receiver General of the Dominion of Canada for the account of the Farmers Bank."

"Where then," said the reporter, "was there any wrong and concealment on the part of the Trusts Company?"

"There was none whatever," said Mr. Hall. "It is quite apparent upon the face of the transaction, so far as the Trusts Company was concerned that it was engaged in a perfectly legal transaction, because any school boy knows that there is not the faintest objection to lending money upon notes which are made by financially responsible people and the very fact that the cheque was marked payable to the Bank of Montreal, and showed the purpose for which it was intended, shows conclusively that there was not the slightest pretence to conceal from the Treasury Board the source from which the money came.

Had Mr. Stratton or Mr. Warren any knowledge of Travers' false declaration?"

Mr. Hall said: "Travers swore positively in his evidence that he never told either Mr. Stratton or Mr. Warren or any one connected with the Trusts Company that he made a false and misleading declaration to the Finance Department, and that no one in any way connected with the Trusts Company knew of the existence of such a declaration."

"Did the Trusts Company assist him to get the certificate from the Finance Minister?"

"No," said Mr. Hall. "Travers swore positively that neither Mr. Stratton nor Mr. Warren, nor any one connected with the Trust Company had lent him any assistance whatever, with the Finance Minister or his Department and that they had nothing whatever to do with the obtaining of the certificate from the Treasury Board.

"Did Mr. Stratton or Mr. Warren make any profit out of the transaction personally?"

Mr. Hall said in answer to this question, "that Travers swore, and the books of the Bank bear out his statement, that neither Mr. Stratton nor Mr. Warren received one single cent out of the transaction, but that the Trusts and Guarantee Co. received interest on their money and a bonus for making the loan, which in itself was a legitimate transaction."

"What do you think of the result of this investigation?"

"I consider," said Mr. Hall, "that the committment of Mr. Stratton and Mr. Warren on this charge does them a great injustice, and under the circumstances it is nothing more than a travesty of justice, and an unjust attempt to saddle upon them the cause of the failure of the Farmers' Bank, with the management of which they, personally, had nothing whatever to do, either directly or indirectly."

"What is being done with the real culprits?" enquired the reporter.

"Apparently nothing beyond the conviction of Travers. I understand that about a million dollars was looted from the Farmers' Bank. It is incomprehnsible to me why the authorities do not get after the real culprits who looted the Bank, instead of trying to drag into the affair the names of innocent people who did not contribute in the least degree to its failure, nor were in any way responsible for the circumstances under which organization was effected.

Advice Concerning Stomach Troubles and How to Remedy Them

Do not neglect indigestion, which leads to all sorts of ills and complications. An eminent doctor once said that ninety-five per cent. of all the ills of the human body have their origin in a disordered stomach.

A physician who made a specialty of stomach troubles, particularly dyspepsia, after years of study perfected the formula from which Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets are made.

Our experience with Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets leads us to believe them to be the greatest remedy known for the relief of acute indigestion and chronic dyspepsia. Their ingredients are soothing and healing to the inflamed membranes of the stomach. They are rich in pepsin, one of the greatest digestive aids known to medicine. The relief they afford is almost immediate. Their use with persistency and regularity for a short time brings about a cessation of the pains caused by stomach disorders.

Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets will insure healthy appetite, aid digestion, and promote nutrition. As evidence of our sincere faith in Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets, we ask you to try them at our risk. If they do not give you entire satisfaction, we will return you the money you paid us for them without question or formality. They come in three sizes, prices 25 cents, 50 cents and $1.00. Remember you can obtain them only at our store. —The Rexall Store, McDermid and Jury, corner George and Charlotte streets.

BROKEN AXLE

Traffic on the C.P.R. main line was somewhat demoralized during the night and a part of this morning owing to the derailment of a freight car, caused by the breaking of an axle. The accident took place near Kendry, about 7 miles out of town. The early morning expresses were delayed for a couple of hours. A similar accident occurred at Cavan yesterday. The auxiliary from Havelock was summoned and they soon had the line cleared.

ANNUAL MEETING OF CHILDREN'S AID SOCIETY

Reports Were Presented, Officers Elected and Other Important Business Transacted at Gathering Yesterday--Most of Officers Were Re-elected.

The annual meeting of the Children's Aid Society was held in the City Council chambers yesterday. Mr. T. F. Matthews, President, was chairman.

Mr. E. L. Goodwill, Secretary, read the minutes of the last annual meeting, and these were adopted. There was no special business to be done, so the general business was proceeded with, as follows:

Ladies and Gentlemen—I have the honour to present the annual report as secretary of your Society. The year just closed has been one of great activity and can be placed on record as another year of splendid progress. The work of the society has been similar to that of former years, namely, investigating cases of alleged cruelty, and neglect to children, serving warnings upon parents and others having children in charge, and where these warnings have not been followed by improvement in the homes, then having informations laid, and the parties brought before the courts, and generally caring for all alleged and dependent children brought to our attention in this city and County.

Mr. Cochrane and myself have attended all trials before the magistrate, relating to juvenile offences, as well as the investigations and trials of those charged with neglect and ill treatment of children. In this connection I wish to place on record our appreciation of the assistance furnished us by Mr. J. J. Kelso, in having Mr. Gunton, Provincial Inspector and also the Rev. Mr. Miller act with us and strengthening our hands in several important matters. Both of these gentlemen proved invaluable to us, the former in his prompt and efficient manner in investigating with our Mr. Cochrane and prosecuting the Belmont cases and the latter in adjusting certain difficulties concerning certain children that were removed, and of placing so many of the children taken from the district.

The homes containing our wards have all been visited during the year and I have received on the whole very encourasging reports from the Government Inspectors. The demand for children for adoption has been, as in former years, for children from ten years upward, but the majority of the children passing through our hands have been under nine, so that our shelter has been in a congested state almost continuously throughout the year.

Mr. Cochrane has as usual been carrying on an aggressive campaign in all branches of our work, and too much credit cannot be given to him for his efficient services, and in this connection I wish to point out that his work has increased by more than four fold, since the year in which his honorarium was first granted, and I think that the increased demands upon his time should be taken into consideration by the Society this year.

The Shelter has, as usual, been kept up to a high standard of efficiency under the care of Mr. and Mrs. Henry to whom too much praise cannot be given for their careful attention and care given to the children.

I wish also to take this opportunity to extend our thanks to our many benefactors our old ones who have not forgotten us, and we have made a number of new ones. From the very generous response given by the citizens of Peterborough to our Tag Day Campaign it is very evident that our work continues to commend itself.

From my connection with the work of the Society, I consider that the work of your officers would be very materially lessened especially in that branch dealing with juvenile delinquents if the Curfew By-law was strictly enforced, and if Legislation was enacted and enforced prohibiting children under the age of twelve years being present in places of amusement after eight thirty o'clock at night unless accompanied by their parents or guardians, I am informed that it is astonishing the number of boys and girls under school age that are to be seen in the places of public entertainment and on the streets at a late hour at night in this city. I do not wish to be understood as finding fault with the class of amusement furnished by our local places of entertainment, as I am given to understand they all carefully eliminate those objectionable features of which we hear so many complaints from other cities, but I do consider that it is our duty to be watchful and to be on the alert to take action to check any features which may be produced detrimental to our boys and girls.

In conclusion I wish to thank our committee of ladies. The Tag Day campaign would not have been the great success it was had it not been for the untiring work of our ladies. We could not have cared so effectually for so many children in the Shelter had it not been for the faithful work of the sewing department.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

The report was adopted.

The next report was the Treasurer's report, read by Mr. P. C. Campbell. It read as follows:

Receipts—

Dec. 1909, balance on hand ..	$ 82.56
Received during year	3465.81
	$3548.36
Disbursements—
Total payments for year	$1988.24
Balance on hand	1560.12
	$3548.36

The report was adopted.

County Constable Cochrane, agent, by $50. In fact, he thought it was much similar to that of the Treasurer's. He was pleased with the success with which the Society was meeting, and hoped that it would continue so.

Mr. J. H. Burnham thought that it was too bad that such a condition of affairs existed, as that found in Belmont last year, and hoped that things would improve. He thought that in view of the faithful official service rendered by Mr. Cochrane, that his salary should be increased by $05. In fact, he thought it was the duty of the Society to do so. Mr. Burnham then moved, seconded by Mr. Travers, that Mr. Cochrane's salary be increased as stated.—Carried.

Mr. Matthews said that it was an established fact that the work of the Society fell on two men's shoulders—Mr. Goodwill and Mr. Campbell. He thought that their services should be recognized, as he considered that the Society should feel fortunate at having such officers.

Mr Henry reported that the cesspool at the Shelter was too near the building, and that the contents was coming through the wall into the cellar. It was decided to leave the matter in the hands of the Executive Committee. Mr. Matthews suggested that it be attended to at once.

Mr Goodwill said that the eavestroughs at the Shelter were also in bad condition. This was also left in the hands of the Executive Committee.

A number of the ladies of the Board of Management for the last year had left, and Mr. Burnham thought that they should be sent letters of appreciation for the faithful service they rendered while on the Board. This was decided upon.

Election of Officers.

Mr. Cochrane then took the chair and the election of officers for the coming year was proceeded with. The new officers are as follows:

Hon. President—Mayor Morrow.
President—Mr. T. F. Matthews.
Vice-President—Mr. T. F. Matthews.
Vice-President—Mrs. Birdsall.
2nd Vice President—Mr. Travers.
Secretary—Mr. E. L. Goodwill.
Treasurer—Mr. P. Campbell.
Honorary Solicitor—Mr. Goodwill.
Honorary Physician—Dr. Amys.
Agent—Mr. Geo. Cochrane.

Board of Management—All the old members of the Board who remained in the city, were re-elected. It was necessary to elect some to fill the gaps. The new members are as follows: Mrs. Pearce, Mrs. Ruddy, Mrs. Hopwood, Mrs. Gibbs, and Judge Huycke. Mrs. Hopwood and Mrs. Scott were elected to the Sewing Committee.

TEACHER'S NERVES

Teachers often have the reputation of being cross when the trouble is with the nerves rather than the disposition. Mr. A Sutherland, Principal South Bar School Sydney, N.S., writes: "I was nervous and worried, had indigestion and headache and other ills. Doctors failed me. You can depend on me to recommend Dr. A. W Chase's Nerve Food for I believe it has entirely cured me." Tired brains and feeble nerves are soon restored by this celebrated food cure.

Lecture To Be A Treat

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—In your last night's issue I notice the literary section of St. Peter's T. A. S. are to be treated to a lecture by the Rev. Father Fitzpatrick, of Ennismore. His subject being "A talk to young men on how to succeed in life." Knowing the reverend gentleman's ability as a lecturer, I am confident a real treat is in store for those attending. Besides the lecture I am informed a number of gentlemen lately come to our city, with more than average ability, as entertainers, will contribute to the programme, and having had the pleasure of hearing some of their selections, would strongly advise anyone musically inclined, to paste the date, Feb. 24th, in their hat.

READ THE FIRST TIME

MAJORITY OF 124

London, Feb. 23.—Premier Asquith was the recipient of a tremendous ovation from his supporters in the House of Commons last night when the Parliament bill, otherwise known as the veto bill, a measure designed to curtail the power of the Lords, was passed on its first reading by the Government's full majority of 124, the vote being 351 to 227.

The Nationalists first rose in their places, cheering wildly and waving their hats. The Liberal members quickly emulated their example. This exhibition of enthusiasm was repeated a few minutes later as the Prime Minister quietly left the scene of his victory in his initial action against the Lords.

The debate yesterday maintained a good oratorical level, but presented few new points. The dominant note of the Unionist speeches was an invitation to the Government to settle the matter by agreement. Fred. T. Smith, in a slashing attack, accused the Government of outraging the convictions of half of their fellow-countrymen on a matter that could never be settled except by consent. The British people, he said, would support the Opposition in any resistance, however desperate, they might offer to the bill.

Right Hon. George Wyndham also urged the Government to accept the invitation to settle the question by agreement. Otherwise, he declared, sooner or later the Opposition would repeal the bill.

To these persuasions, Winston Spencer Churchill, the Home Secretary, concluding the debate for the Government, replied that the Ministers would not have 50 supporters left if they agreed to enter such a conference now. He contended, as compared with the referendum, the Government's moderate proposals were the veriest Toryism, and no step would be neglected to carry the bill swiftly into law. The Government did not fear the referendum as a check on progressive legislation, but regarded it as a vicious system, especially unsuitable for this country, and its adoption would lead to Jacobinism, Caesarism and anarchy.

Van Horne Doesn't Like It.

"I am too much disgusted to talk about it," he said yesterday. "Just think of it. Our Government returns show that the commerce per capita of the people of Canada is $97 per head, while the commerce per capita of the people of the United States is $33 and some 56 odd cents per head. Naturally they look on us with a covetous eye, and this proposal for reciprocity is theirs. Now we are actually proposing to remove the mill dam, and you know what happens when the mill dam is removed—the waters find a common level. It is humiliating and disgusting to find such a deal as this one proposed by Messrs. Fielding and Paterson being seriously entertained. I won't trust myself to say another word about it. Here, just say that my opinions on the subject are summed up in the following," and Sir William sat down at his desk and wrote:

"Re reciprocity agreement—I am sick and ashamed—to sick and too much ashamed to say anything about the subject."

Russia Is Satisfied.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 23.—The Foreign Office announces that China's answer to four out of the six points in the Russian note relative to the treaty of 1881, is wholly satisfactory, and the remaining two can be easily adjusted. Further pressure on China, it is stated, is not contemplated, and the idea of a military demonstration has been abandoned.

Canadian Navy In Action.

Ottawa, Feb. 23.—The Department of Naval Affairs has received a message to the effect that the new Canadian cruiser Rainbow, while rounding Cape Scott, had caught the steamer Cedric of Seattle fishing within the three-mile limit, and was proceeding to Esquimault with the Cedric in tow.

"SLEEPLESSNESS."

Thousands of people all over this land toss night after night on a sleepless pillow. The eyes do not close in the refreshing slumber that comes to those whose heart and nerves are right.

Some are troubled with weak and smothering spells; others palpitation of the heart; others have their nerves unhinged; but whatever the cause—it comes entirely from a derangement of either the heart or nerves, or both. Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills offer the blessing of sound, refreshing slumber. They do this by their invigorating effect on the heart and nerves and will tone up the whole system to perfect condition.

Mr. H. Jewel, Keswick, Ont., writes: "I am glad to have the pleasure of telling you what Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills did for me. I would have weak spells, seemed to lose my breath, and would have to get up in the night as I could not sleep. I tried many medicines but found nothing good until I used Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. I took three boxes and it is three years ago since I did so, and I haven't been troubled since."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c. per box, or 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Power by End of Week.

Hamilton, Feb. 23.—The power situation here has not changed, and few of the factories are working.

The Board of Control has received an assurance from W. C. Hawkins, the general manager of the Cataract Power Co., that power will be on for everybody at the end of the week. The board will wait until then before deciding upon insisting upon the company securing an immediate introduction of power from Hydro-Electric Commission.

The trouble about the latter is that it is not of the same cycle as the Cataract, and an expensive transforming station would have to be built before power could be supplied that would operate the plants of the local factories.

If conditions do not improve, the erection of this station will be considered.

YOUNG and OLD

Are Attacked

Everyone is liable to be attacked with Kidney Trouble, young and old are seized. Pains in the back and aching limbs are sure signs of kidney trouble. Girls that ought to be bright and lissome are languid and nervous. Women worry and suffer torments. Strong men do not escape the ravages of kidney trouble and disease.

Mrs. N. Good, of 70 Stadacona St., Moose Jaw, Sask., says: "I am pleased to state for the benefit of any person suffering with painful back, that they will find Booth's Kidney Pills a most excellent remedy. I suffered for months with a very weak back and severe pains and aches in the kidneys, and felt very much depressed. There was also a swelling under my eyes. When I learned of Booth's Kidney Pills, I procured a box, and found them the best remedy I have ever used, as they were very quick in giving me relief. The pains have left my back and have restored my health and I am now strong and well."

Valentine Stock's Bill Before Local House.

Toronto, Feb. 23.—Automobile and assessment law amendments held the floor at the Ontario Legislature yesterday afternoon. Toronto members were rather startled by the motion for the second reading of the bill to amend the Assessment Act, as they thought it was not to come up for another two weeks. The actual understanding was, however, cleared up by a Ministerial explanation.

Valentine Stock, South Perth (Lib.), spoke at length in moving the second reading of his bill to require that chauffeurs and drivers of automobiles to convey with them their permit or license, the same to be endorsed upon conviction for violation of the statute and to the Provincial Secretary for cancellation on the second conviction.

Hon. W. J. Hanna said that substantially the regulation called for was already embodied in the present act. He thought the third conviction preferable for cancellation of the permit.

S. Clark, West Northumberland, favored cancellation on the third conviction.

The bill was allowed to go to committee to consider the question of when the conviction should entail cancellation.

W. Proudfoot, Centre Huron, introduced a bill to amend the Railway Act. It provides simply that in cities of over 50,000, where a passenger has to stand, through all the seats on a street car being occupied, the passenger shall only be bound to pay a fare of two cents. Half fare was not proposed because of the half-cent difficulty. The object is to prevent overcrowding by striking at the company's revenue.

S. Charters introduced his bill respecting the control of municipal telephone systems, and A. Studholme reintroduced his bill for the enactment of provincial woman's suffrage.

Hon. W. J. Hanna's consolidation bill with respect to the local improvement clauses of the Assessment Act, was proceeded with in committee. The Provincial Secretary stated that clauses to which objection was made should be allowed to stand.

Smallpox Among Indians.

London, Feb. 23.—The smallpox outbreak on the Oneida Indian reserve is spreading and there are now six cases among the redskins. In addition there are two cases in Westminster.

LOYAL TO EMPIRE

Monk's Resolution Pledging Loyalty Was Unanimously Carried by House of Commons Yesterday

A SUDDEN MOVE

Ottawa, Feb. 23.—The resolution, moved by Mr. Monk, pledging loyalty to the Empire, was precipitated unexpectedly when the House of Commons was about to resume the discussion of the reciprocity agreement yesterday afternoon. For a second time the Nationist leader in the House intervened in the debate in a sudden and spectacular manner.

It brought the leaders on both sides back to the firing-line, roused a spirit of acrimony among members that for a time kept the Speaker busily engaged in interpreting and applying the rules.

The motion was unanimously approved.

"The opponents of this agreement," said Hon. Mr. Fielding in summing up before the motion carried, "have, unwisely and unjustly I think, sought for party reasons to convey the impression that there is a portion of the people of Canada who are not loyal to the institutions of our country and the Empire. I believe that every man of them, and every man on this side, and every citizen of the Dominion is bound to maintain the position of Canada as an integral part of the British Empire. But since my hon. friends opposite think that, in view of their record, it is necessary to make a declaration to that effect, I am going to help them make it."

Mr. Monk sought to trace back the origin of the public feeling of unrest in regard to annexation to alleged secessionist sentiments of many years ago on the part of members of the Government. The charges met with prompt and explicit denials from Messrs. Fielding and Lemieux. Sir Wilfrid Laurier, amid great Liberal enthusiasm, promptly accepted the resolution as expressing a truism which no Liberal doubts, but which might help the Conservatives to harmlessly flaunt their loyalty. Mr. Borden, who was confessedly taken by surprise by his lieutenant's latest move, could only cite in support of the annexation fears he himself expressed isolated excerpts from the recent speech of Champ Clark in the United States Congress.

Sir Wilfrid replied briefly, and concluded with the statement that there was no necessity for this motion. It affirms a principle of which everybody is persuaded, and which no one needed to affirm. But in order to make it doubly sure, in order to affirm not only to this country, but to the other side also, that this discussion in which we are engaged does not mean what has been stated by my hon. friend, Mr. Monk, it may mean, I shall for my part vote for his motion, and I hope all on this side of the House will vote for it also."

Mr. Borden, who followed, stated that the Prime Minister should have brought in such a resolution himself. "I can tell him this," declared the Opposition leader. "that if this proposition means anything, it means commercial union in the end." He claimed that the U. S. House of Representatives had not accepted the proposal on economic grounds, but for the reason that it would lead to political absorption.

W. F. Maclean declared there were annexation germs in the agreement. It was a surreptitious agreement, and removed from Parliament the right to make the tariff. It was concocted by Sir Wilfrid Laurier, "the new czar of Canada, and Taft, the czar of the United States."

Following approval of Mr. Monk's motion, Mr. Ames continued the debate, its adjournment being moved by Dr. Clark of Red Deer.

Recipe for 16 Ounces of Cough Syrup

Make a plain syrup by mixing two cups of granulated sugar and one cup of warm water and stir for two minutes. Put 2½ ounces of pure Pinex (fifty cents' worth) in a 16 oz. bottle, and fill it up with the Sugar Syrup. This gives you a family supply of the best cough syrup at a saving of $2. It never spoils. Take a teaspoonful every one, two or three hours.

The effectiveness of this simple remedy is surprising. It seems to take hold instantly, and will usually stop the most obstinate cough in 24 hours. It tones up the jaded appetite and is just laxative enough to be helpful in a cough, and has a pleasing taste. Also excellent for bronchial trouble, throat tickle, sore lungs and asthma, and an unequalled remedy for whooping cough.

This recipe for making cough remedy with Pinex and Sugar Syrup (or strained honey) is a prime favorite in thousands of homes in the United States and Canada. The plan has been imitated, though never successfully. If you try it, use only genuine Pinex, which is the most valuable concentrated compound of Norway white pine extract, and is rich in guaiacol and all the natural healing pine elements. Other preparations will not work in this recipe.

A guarantee of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this recipe. Your druggist has Pinex or will get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

MULLOY WINS BRIDE.

Blind Trooper Is to Marry a Millionaire's Daughter.

Ottawa, Feb. 23.—A marriage of much interest to Canadians generally will be consummated in the Methodist Church at Waddington, N.Y., on Friday, March 3, when Trooper L. W. R. Mulloy, the blind hero of the South African campaign, will lead to the altar Miss Jean Munro, daughter of a Seattle, Wash., millionaire, and herself the possessor of half a million in her own right.

Trooper Mulloy will be in the novel position of having never seen his bride, as the romance which culminated in the present engagement only began after he received the terrible injuries in the war which resulted in his complete loss of sight, he having met her in London, England, about six years ago.

The trooper himself gave out the news of his intended nuptials, surprising a party of friends by calmly remarking that when they next saw him they would see him "double."

Miss Munro is an accomplished musician and the possessor of a magnificent soprano voice. She has studied in Italy for five years, and was a companion of Madame Tetrazzini, the noted opera singer. Mulloy recently received the appointment of secretary of the Conservative Association of London, Eng., and besides this is secretary of the Imperial Pioneer Association.

It is anticipated that he will now enter politics, and stand in the Conservative interest on his return to England for one of the two constituencies offered him at the recent general elections.

The marriage will be very quiet.

Boards of Trade Protest Against Projected Tariff.

Toronto, Feb. 23.—By a vote of 97 to 18 the Associated Boards of Trade, before the close of their convention in the City Hall yesterday afternoon, passed a strong resolution protesting against the ratification of the reciprocity agreement with the United States.

The resolution was moved by R. S. Gourlay, president of the Toronto Board of Trade, and seconded by Hon. E. J. Davis of Newmarket, a member of the late Liberal Government of Ontario. Mr. Gourlay said the reciprocity question was one that should be discussed by Boards of Trade. He did not wish the members to deal with it in a political way.

The resolution was a lengthy document. It stated, in substance, that the present unexampled prosperity of Canada is the result of the policy pursued in the developments of her trade and natural resources, involving the expenditure of millions of dollars upon railways, canals and other means of transportation between the east and the west.

If the reciprocity agreement went through, further development along these lines would be handicapped and the present expenditure would to a great extent be lost. Reciprocity with the States would greatly tend to check the growth of trade between the various parts of Canada and of the rest of the Empire, and it would be a disturber of trade and commerce generally. There were also the million or more foreigners to consider. If such an agreement went through they would in time become in sympathy with the United States, and it would become more and more difficult to preserve the autonomy of Canada.

Midland Put Whitby Out Of Running

The Whitby team was eliminated from the O.H.A. intermediate race last night when they were defeated by Midland by 4 goals to 2 at Midland, Eddie Gould's team thus winning the round by three goals and going into the finals. Midland was without the services of Rat Hanley, their star defence player and Whitby gave them a hard game. Last night Preston defeated London by 10 goals to 3 at Preston and the lead looks long enough to send them into the finals. They have to defeat Watford first in a sudden death game, but this should be easy. Watford has been given another chance by the O.H.A. following the expulsion of the Chatham team for playing ringers.

The Argonauts and Parkdale teams had a great battle in the senior semi-finals, winding up in a 3 to 3 draw. The Argos made a surprising showing on the fast ice and were ahead at the half 2 to 1 and with a couple of minutes to play had a two goal lead, but the Paddlers rattled in two goals on end and sewed up the game. The second game in the round will be played on Saturday night. If the weather turns soft in the meantime it looks for Argos for the finals, and Eatons will have a merry time beating the beef trust. Jakie Moore, of Peterborough played rover for the Argos last night.

SACRED HEART SCHOOL HAD AN EASY VICTORY

The undefeated Sacred Heart school team added another scalp to those already dangling at their belts, yesterday afternoon when they administered a trimming to the South Central school team in an interesting game at Sacred Heart rink. The score was 11 to 3 in favour of the Sacred Heart seven, who led at the half by seven goals to nothing. They had considerably the better of the play, showing lots of speed and good combination. The Rose Bros. were the stars of the game. Mr. W. Grady was a very satisfactory referee. The teams were as follows:

SAVED HER FINGER.

Mrs. B. E. Bolwell, of 337 Provencher Ave., St. Boniface, Winnipeg, says:—"Some time ago my children took diphtheria, and while attending them the poison entered a small scratch on the second finger of my left hand. This became very sore and blood-poisoning soon set in. For months after the children were quite well I was suffering from a shockingly bad finger. The soreness was caused originally by a pin, and in itself, was not at all serious. The consequences, however, of neglecting this scratch, were very serious to me. When the blood-poisoning set in I tried poultices and a salve I had in the house. These, however, did not have the desired effect. Quite on the contrary the finger became more and more swollen and discolored. It then began to fester, and I had to call in a doctor. He lanced the finger to let out the pus, and you can imagine how painful the finger was! Despite his care, however, it again festered and the ointment, liniments, and other preparations which the doctor gave me seemed absolutely unable to bring any relief.

"The doctor then proposed to go into the St. Boniface Hospital. I feared that if I went to this the finger would be amputated. We were told of a case similar to my own in which Zam-Buk had effected a cure when everything else had failed, and the doctor said that only amputation could save the person's hand.

"We, therefore, decided to give Zam-Buk a trial. A supply was procured, and we commenced the Zam-Buk treatment. It only needed a few days to show the wisdom of this step. The blood-poisoning and inflammation were reduced, the pain became less acute, and it was evident very shortly that the trouble was being reduced to a less and still less area. We persevered with the Zam-Buk and in the end the festering sore was thoroughly cleaned, then healed. In under three weeks from first commencing with Zam-Buk, the finger was entirely well; and had we applied Zam-Buk at the first place, instead of trying ordinary preparations, no doubt I would have saved myself hours and hours of acute agony."

All mothers should note this case. Zam-Buk is a sure cure for blood-poisoning, festering, sores, scalds from barbed wire, bruises, cramps, rashes, ulcers, boils, eczema, piles, bad leg, varicose veins, and all skin diseases and injuries. 50c a box; all druggists and stores or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price. Send 1c stamp for postage of free trial box. Refuse all imitations.

NOW WE HAVE IT

An Important Discovery—Concentrated Oysters, the Purest and Most Wholesome Food Product in the Market

Housekeepers and others having to prepare table delicacies will be glad to learn that a process has been discovered whereby oyster stew can be made better, easier, quicker and cheaper than has ever before been possible.

Superior to Bulk Oysters.

Oysters are about ninety-five per cent water. By the concentrating process the water is all removed and the oysters reduced to a powder, but retain all their original strength and flavour. When oyster stew is desired this powder is stirred into boiling milk, which dissolves it immediately. 2 drams, 15c. worth, makes 1 full pint of most delicious stew.

For clubs, restaurants and hotels, this article is just the thing. It is manufactured by Columbian Concentrated Food Co., of Washington, D.C. and is guaranteed absolutely pure in every respect and complying with all the requirements of the pure food law.

For particulars pertaining to the above article, communicate with the undersigned or call and get a sample. Try it and be convinced for yourselves, that what I say for it is fact. The goods are for sale at the Collegiate grocery, corner of Aylmer and McDonnel street. J. M. DONOVAN Prop.

THE TORONTO CEMENT SHOW MARCH 6TH TO 11TH, 1911

Cement structures—both large and small—came through the recent fire and earthquake of San Francisco practically unscathed, while whole buildings of brick and stone in their immediate vicinity were completely demolished. Solid monolith concrete buildings are fireproof, space saving, sanitary and everlasting.

In order that the public may see for themselves to what wonderful uses Portland Cement can be put, the Canadian Cement and Concrete Association are holding a cement Show in the St. Lawrence Arena, Toronto, March 6th to 11th. The object of the Association is to further the use of Cement and Concrete in the interests of permanent and fireproof construction, and one of the means adopted to carry out this policy consists of holding an annual exhibition at the same time as the convention of the Society. This year's show promises to surpass all previous efforts.

MUSICAL COMEDIES COMING.

Peterborough theatre-goers, who have been lamenting for some time because there have been no musical comedies until last night's presentation of "My Cinderella Girl," will be glad to learn that three superior "tune shows" are now headed for Peterborough. "A Stubborn Cinderella" will appear at the Grand on Friday, March 3. "The Goddess of Liberty" on March 6, and "The Three Twins" on Monday, March 13.

Albert Chevalier.

Albert Chevalier, one of the most famous figures on the English stage, will be seen at the Grand on Saturday, matinee and night, in the appearance here of Albert Chevalier, the celebrated English comedian and singer, whose several visits to this country in vaudeville, have caused a sensation, and who is now appearing in a play "Daddy Dufard," that has been greeted with unanimous approval by the New York critics. The production comes to Peterborough after a long metropolitan run and promises to be one of the events of the theatrical season. To the many English people living in Peterborough Albert Chevalier is a name to conjure with.

Dorothy Arnold Still Missing.

Atlantic City, Feb. 23.—"I am confident that Miss Dorothy Arnold is alive. I have tried to reach her since my return from Europe, but I have failed. I have not given up hope." Geo. S. Griscom, jr., suitor for the hand of the missing New York heiress, made the foregoing announcement here. He spoke through Roger O'Mara, the Pittsburg detective, who for ten days has conducted for the Griscoms the search for Miss Arnold, who is the daughter of a New York millionaire, and has been missing since mid-December.

Is Pool Cornering Rubber?

New York, Feb. 23.—Financiers supposed to be identified with the leading rubber companies of this country and Europe, have formed a bull pool to corner the supply of crude rubber in the United States and Europe. Crude rubber has advanced to $1.80 a pound, a jump of 47 cents a pound since Jan. 19. The syndicate already has taken, it is said, in Wall street, 2,200 tons of the crude Para product out of the market and stored it in Brazil.

Seattle Women Vote.

Seattle, Wash., Feb. 23.—Returns in the City Council election on Tuesday indicate that the majority of the reform candidates were victorious. A large majority of the 22,000 women who had registered voted. The percentage of men voting was smaller.

The first 18 candidates are entitled to run for the final election of a council of nine, which is to rule the city under a modified form of government by commission.

Sentiment Against It.

New York, Feb. 23.—Col. R. Pryce-Jones, M.P., who has been in Canada and the west for several weeks, says that the general feeling in Eastern Canada is against reciprocity, as it is feared that the trade from Western Canada would be diverted to the United States.

In the western sections the farmers generally were uncertain as to the benefits, and Col. Pryce-Jones said he thought that if the matter was put up to a vote at the present time it would be defeated.

Canadians generally, said the colonel, ridiculed the talk of annexation.

Toronto Woman Injured.

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 23.—Mrs. Hattie Weaver of Toronto was injured when a Pere Marquette passenger train leaving Detroit jumped the track on an open switch at Rose Centre, five miles south of Holly, Mich.

The engine and mail car overturned, and the day coach, in which Mrs. Weaver was riding, left the track.

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

THAT eternal question—the servant problem—came up for discussion the other day.

In the group was a woman who is famed in the neighbourhood, not only for being a thorough and economical housekeeper, but for having exceptional maids and for keeping them an exceptionally long while.

The little newly wed lady who had had three servants in her brief span of married life, asked her if she would mind telling how she worked the miracle, and this was the tale she told.

"If I do get along with my servants better than most people, I think the credit is all due to my grandmother. You know, I lived with my grandmother until she died, and grandmother was a model housewife of the real old school. Every morning after breakfast, even after she had to hobble about with a cane, she would go out into the kitchen and hold a conference with the cook. There was a big larder in the pantry where all the supplies were put and to this grandmother always kept the keys.

"Once a day, at this conference, she would open the larder and take out what was needed for the day. The cook would say what she wanted, and grandmother had to be told just what each thing was to be used for, too.

Not because she was miserly or begrudged the eggs—she was quite famous for the bountiful table she set and for her generosity—but because she thought it her duty to know.

"Of course I don't have a locked larder, but I do go out every morning and know everything that is in my ice-chest and pantry, and then, when I find out what's needed, I go down and personally do the marketing. Sometimes I think of using the telephone and then I think how horrified grandmother would have been and so I usually go down town myself.

"After grandmother finished talking with the cook and inspecting the larder, she would always make a tour of the house from attic to cellar. She thought that was a part of every housewife's daily duty, and a wise precaution, too. Almost her last advice to me was this: "Go into every corner of your house every day in the year. If you don't it will soon be a privilege for you to go into your own kitchen.

"I have an aunt who wanted to teach her daughter how to cook last summer vacation. They tried it but soon found that the maid objected to their coming into the kitchen and they had to give it up. You see, grandmother was right. My aunt is a woman who believes in leaving a girl to her own devices as much as possible and now she finds her self shut out of her own kitchen.

"Through following grandmother's advice I am complete mistress of my own house, even the kitchen.

"Do my girls ever resent so much supervision? At first, sometimes, but they soon get over it. I try to compensate by giving them as much time as possible and by being as just and honest with them as I expect them to be with me. I want to be mistress of my house but I try never to be petty or overbearing. Myself, I think a girl really likes a kind but strict mistress better than one who is too easy and indifferent. Grandmother had one maid ten years and I've only had four in the twelve years of my married life, so I guess they don't dislike our methods so very much.

"It certainly wouldn't look so," enviously sighed the newly wed lady who'd had three maids in the very brief span of her married life.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Feb. 22.—At the Canadian Pacific Live Stock Market the offerings this morning were 1600 cattle, 200 sheep and lambs, 1330 hogs and 700 calves. There was no actual change in the condition of the market, prices being well maintained by drovers on account of the fact that the bulk of the stock came from Toronto, for which high prices were paid, consequently sellers could not accept lower bids and get out even. This tended to check the demand some from butchers and in consequence trade was rather slow.

Choice steers, sold at 5¼c, good at 5c to 5¼c, fairly good at 5¼c to 5¾c, fair at 5c to 5¼c per lb. The demand for good fat cows was fair at 5c to 5¼c, and the commoner ones brought from that down to 3¼c per lb. A few good bulls sold at 5¼c to 5½c, and the lower grades ranged from 3½c to 5c per lb.

A weaker feeling developed in the market for hogs and prices declined 25c per cwt., which was attributed to the more liberal supplies and the fact that packers were not anxious for stock, having sufficient on hand for the balance of the week. Sales of selected lots were made at $7.50 to $7.75 per cwt., weighed off the cars.

Calves were more plentiful and cheaper with prices ranging from $4 to $12 each, as to size and quality. The trade in sheep and lambs was quiet and prices were unchanged, with the former selling at 4½c to 4½c, and the latter at 6¼c to 6¾c per lb.

Would Strengthen Garrison.

Kingston, Feb. 23.—During the debate in the Legislature yesterday on the question of organization of a local defence force, one of the chief military officers intimated the probability that the Jamaican garrison would be considerably strengthened by Imperial troops in event of the Panama Canal being fortified.

ALL YOUR STOMACH TROUBLES VANISH

No Indigestion, Gas, Heartburn or Dyspepsia Five Minutes Later

Every year regularly more than a million stomach sufferers in the United States, England and Canada take Pape's Diapepsin, and realize not only immediate, but lasting relief.

This harmless preparation will digest anything you eat and overcome a sour, gassy or out-of-order stomach five minutes afterwards.

If your meals don't fit comfortably, or what you eat lies like a lump of lead in your stomach, or if you have heartburn, that is a sign of indigestion.

Get from your Pharmacist a 50-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin and take a dose just as soon as you can. There will be no sour risings, no belching of undigested food mixed with acid, no stomach gas or heartburn, fulness or heavy feeling in the stomach, Nausea, Debilitating Headaches, Dizziness or Intestinal griping. This will go, and, besides, there will be no sour food left over in the stomach to poison your breath with nauseous odours.

Pape's Diapepsin is a certain cure for out-of-order stomachs, because it takes hold of your food and digests it just the same as if your stomach wasn't there.

Relief in five minutes from all stomach misery is waiting for you at any drug store.

These large 50-cent cases contain more than sufficient to thoroughly cure almost any case of Dyspepsia, Indigestion or any other stomach disorder.

We have examined all books, papers and vouchers, and have found them correct.

W. Hinchcliffe, Auditor.
W. Hill, Auditor.

President's Report.

Ladies and Gentlemen,—In presenting this, my first semi-annual report as president of this society, permit me to return to you very sincere thanks and heartfelt appreciation of the honour you have conferred upon me in electing me to the honourable position which I occupy to-night as your president. And, when I say, "Honourable position," it is with a feeling that it is no small thing to be chosen to preside over such a splendid institution as the C. G. E. Benefit Society, embodying as it does twelve hundred of the citizens of our fair city.

I am pleased to state that ,during this term, just closed, there has been no questions arising of a contentious nature, requiring the consideration of the department of representatives. The term has been a fairly successful one, as you will see upon a study of our treasurer's report. We have been enabled, during the term, to return to the reserve fund, the one hundred dollars ($100.00) drawn out to meet the heavy demands during the previous term and, in addition, we have another fifty dollars ($50.00) to the reserve, giving a total balance of nineteen hundred and thirty-six dollars and fifty-seven cents ($1936.57) to carry on our beneficient work. During the term we have signed one hundred and eight benefit claims for a total expenditure of nine hundred and thirty-one dollars ($931.47) and forty-seven cents; also one death claim of thirty dollars.

We are pleased to state that the society has been called upon to pay only one death claim ,as against three during the previous term.

I am pleased to report that the business of the society has been most carefully looked after by your secretary, Mr. Shannon, and the funds have been most zealously taken care of by your trasurer, Mr. Harding.

And, it gives me great pleasure to add that the society physician, Dr. Marshall, has been most assiduous in looking after the sick during the term, endeavouring at all times to deal fairly between the society and its members, there having been only two cases during the term where members thought that they had not received full justice, caused from a lack of knowledge of the by-laws of the society. And I wish to impress upon the members the importance of a more careful study of our by-laws. A more full and complete statement of the receipts and expenditures for the term is embodied in the report of our treasurer, therefore I will not touch upon them further, leaving that officer to deal more fully with that part of the work.

Again thanking you, I have the honour to be,

Yours faithfully,
W. S. ROBINSON,
President.

CASE WAS POSTPONED

Lt.-Col. Munro Will Appear at the Spring Assizes

TORONTO, FEB. 23.—The trial of Lieut.-Col. James Munro, the former President of the Farmers' Bank, charged with signing false returns to the Government, was called before Judge Winchester this morning, but was unexpectedly postponed, owing to the absence in Florida of F. W. Stair, who owned the premises in which the head office of the Bank are located and was needed as a witness. The case will probably stand over until the spring sessions.

Tea Time Talks

The Healthfulness of Tea

Physicians who often forbid the use of Coffee and Cocoa to the well, prescribe tea for the sick. Of the three, tea is the only beverage that can be drunk for a lifetime without injurious effects. It is a harmless tonic—a gentle stimulant without reaction.

As tea is the most desirable beverage, so "Salada" is tea in its most desirable form.

"Salada" Ceylon Tea comes from tea plant to tea pot untouched by human hands, from the time the leaves fall into the picker's baskets. Its delicate aroma and delicious flavor are perfectly preserved in sealed, air-tight packages.

SALADA TEA

Ask your grocer for "Salada" Tea or send for a free trial package which makes 50 cups of delicious tea. We will mail it to you without charge. Say whether you use Black, Mixed or Green Tea and the price you pay per pound.

BROKEN AXLE CAUSED DE-RAILING OF CARS

Five box cars were derailed as a result of a broken axle last night on the Midland division of the Grand Trunk. The mishap occurred to what is known as the manifest train, which leaves Peterborough about midnight. The accident occurred near Birdsall station. The auxiliary train from Lindsay was summoned and had the line cleared in time to let the Belleville train come in on schedule time this morning.

THE TORONTO CEMENT SHOW MARCH 6TH TO 11TH, 1911

It is a mistake to think that cement is of interest only to the architect and builder. It is of vital interest to every home builder who wants better construction at less cost to every tenant who wants the most for his rental in house comfort and protection against fire, to every citizen who has the country's welfare at heart in sanitary buildings, more beautiful architecture and safer construction. No man abreast of the times can afford to remain unacquainted with the modern use and wonderful forms of concrete.

The Canadian Cement and Concrete Association are providing at the Toronto Cement Show a remarkable opportunity for everyone to see the various ways in which cement may be used in its manufacture and mixing, etc.

A pleasant and profitable evening can be spent with Marathon Lodge, Knights of Pythias, in the Conservatory of Music Hall, Friday evening, February 24th, when Frederick H. Wilson presents the beautiful monodrama, Damon & Pythias. Admission only 25c. 2d-44-4020

WILL GO TO THE SLIDE

St. Luke's Young People Society will go to the toboggan slide to-morrow evening. They will meet at the Post Office at 8 o'clock sharp, on their return they will proceed to the residence of Mrs. Greenslade's, King street, where refreshments will be served.

STEAMER IS ASHORE

Trans-Alantic Liner is Flying Distress Signals

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, ENG., FEB. 23. — There is considerable excitement at the steamship offices here over the report that a large steamer, presumably a trans-atlatic liner is ashore on Scilly Island, south of Lands End. Her funnels are gone and she is flying signals of distress. Lifeboats are on their way out.

LONDON, FEB. 23.—(Later.) — What was thought to be a transatlantic liner ashore at Scilly Island turned out to be the French warship Richilieu, which while being towed to the scrap heap at the navy yard broke away from the tug and drifted away.

MAY RESULT IN A DELAY

Examiner Special:

WASHINGTON, FEB. 23.—On a resolution to-day President Taft was asked to present to the Senate all papers and tariff data that is of possible interest to the country, to assist the discussion on the reciprocity agreement. This may cause delay.

A FEDERAL UNION

Presbyterians Organize a Body With That End in View—Other Sects May Follow Example

MEETING IN TORONTO

Toronto, Feb. 24.—A movement which will undoubtedly take rank a tory of the most important in the history of the churches of Canada for many years, was launched yesterday when at a meeting of about fifty representative ministers and laymen of the Presbyterian Churches of Toronto, and other centres, held in the school room of New St. Andrew's Church, a strong organization, to be known as the Presbyterian Association for the Federal Union of the Churches, was effected.

The movement is the outcome of decided dissatisfaction with the proposed basis for organic union of the Protestant churches and if hopes are realized, similar organizations will soon spring up in the Anglican, Methodist, Baptist and Congregational Churches.

Among those present were: Rev. F. Crawford Brown of New St. Andrews, Rev. B. Strachan, Rosedale; Rev. A. Robertson, St. James' Square; Rev. A. L. Geggie, Parkdale; Rev. D. T. McKerroll, Rev. Dr. McLeod, Barrie; Rev. R. G. McBeth, Paris; Rev. Dr. Smith, St. Catharines; Principal McKay, Westminster Hall, Vancouver.

In the course of the discussion there was revealed an increasing feeling throughout the church against the union of the Methodist, Congregational and Presbyterian Churches on the basis at present proposed. It was felt that one of the strongest arguments against the organic union of these three churches was its limitations.

The view that obtained among those present was unanimously in favor of a federation of all the Protestant churches that would prevent overlapping in the home and foreign mission fields, and that would stand for the ushering in of the Kingdom of Christ as the present movement for organic unity among three denominations merely could not. A strong organization was effected, the name to be the Presbyterian Association for the Federal Union of the Churches.

After considerable discussion a statement was adopted tentatively as an indication of the direction which the movement would take:

"We ministers and members of the Presbyterian Church in Canada, affirming our belief in the scriptures of the Old and New Testament as the primary source and ultimate standard of Christian faith and life; affirming our faith in Jesus Christ as the only head of the church, recognizing the value of the teaching of the great creeds of the ancient church and maintaining our allegiance in the evangelical doctrines of the reformations, desire to proclaim our love for the brethren of Christ's visible body and our assurance that the ultimate unity of the church is being brought nearer with every increase of spiritual life. Because of history, traditions, sentiments and convictions which have become a part of our nature, we do not think the time has arrived when the various evangelical branches of the church of Christ can give up their name and identity and their particular methods for the realization of the kingdom, without much needless injury.

"Yet we herewith proclaim our belief in and our desire for a closer union and a more definite co-operation of all the evangelical branches of the church of Christ in Canada. We propose that these shall form a federal union to conserve and further common interests at home and abroad: that each branch should preserve its identity and autonomy and should be allowed to carry on its work in a way best suited to its genius and outlook.

"In order that each branch of the church may have the fullest liberty and the largest opportunities to realize its ideal and at the same time to make its best contribution to the religious life of the world, there should be a general council, made up of representatives, lay and clerical, from the different branches entering into the federation. This council shall have the advisory oversight of the work of the churches within the Dominion of Canada in all matters upon which the various churches may agree to co-operate, having in mind the principle that the universal church is the divine agency for the establishment of the kingdom, and the various denominations are of value only in so far as they minister to its well-being.

"In the home field, the council shall seek to so arrange the forces of the federating churches that the best interests of the community and the church shall be concerned, that the increasingly complex problem of our national life shall be more adequately dealt with and that all people within the Dominion shall have opportunity of coming into vital contact with our Lord and Christ. The council should address itself as far as possible to the solution of the increasingly difficult problem in our great centres of population.

"We believe such a federation will hasten the kingdom of our blessed Lord and establish a right understanding among all those who are named according to the name of Christ."

It was agreed to defer the election of officers until a meeting to be held Thursday next at 1:30 p.m., in the schoolroom of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

The 6 out of the 60 liquor cases to be tried at Collingwood, that against Mrs. Crothers, was dismissed yesterday.

A dozen men are dead, nine are in hospital and several were imprisoned in the Belmont Mine at Tonopah, Nev., following a fire yesterday.

Several members of Parliament, chiefly French-Canadians, demanded that a French-Canadian officer be given one at least of the leading appointments in the coronation contingent.

Sir Frederick Borden announces that the recommendations of Sir John French regarding the militia shall be carried out as speedily as convenient, and that he has planned to send a team of artillery to Great Britain this summer.

As Governor MacGregor was about leaving Government House to open the Nova Scotia Legislature, he tripped on the sword of one of his aides, and the breeches of his honor's new uniform were ripped from the knee to the thigh.

DON'T BE UNREASONABLE

If You Neglect the Care of the Scalp You Should Not Expect Beautiful Hair

The hair is more exposed and hence more liable to accumulate dust and dirt than any other portion of the body.

In spite of this the hair receives, as a rule, the least attention and no real effort is made to keep it healthy.

If the dandruff germ is allowed to work unmolested and the scalp becomes crusted with dirt accumulations, one may expect the hair to die and fall out. There is no cause for surprise in this phenomenon; it is natural and happens in every instance where the care of the hair and scalp is overlooked.

The one sure remedy which prevents the loss of hair and permits a healthy, luxuriant growth is found in Newbro's Herpicide.

The dandruff germ cannot live on a head to which Herpicide is regularly applied. The germ dies. The hair ceases to fall. The terrible itching stops almost instantly.

That is what Newbro's Herpicide does.

Charles R. Robertson Dead.

Toronto, Feb. 24.—As a result of an attack of pneumonia, Charles Robert Robertson, general manager of the Canadian Associated Press in Great Britain, died at the Wentworth Hotel, Brighton, at midnight Wednesday.

Mr. Robertson was the youngest son of the late John Robertson, wholesale dry goods merchant, Toronto, and only surviving brother of J. Ross Robertson. He was born on Nov. 8, 1840, at the family home in Simcoe street. Mr. Robertson was educated at Upper Canada College, and afterwards entered his father's warehouse and mastered the dry goods business.

A Beekeepers' Association.

Welland, Feb. 24.—A meeting of beekeepers was held in the grand jury room of the county buildings yesterday to form a beekeepers' association for the Counties of Lincoln and Welland. J. F. Dunn of Ridgeway was elected president, and Wilfrid Bowen of Niagara Falls, secretary-treasurer.

Choice of Method of Execution.

Reno, Nev., Feb. 24.—Condemned men in Nevada will have their choice of death by hanging, shooting or poison, if the law compiled by the code commission, which will be presented to the Legislature, is approved. Hydrocianic acid is the poison alternative mentioned.

Express Robber Released.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Feb. 24.—It was learned yesterday that William Dobson, sentenced to four years in Kingston penitentiary a year ago for his part in the robbery of $4,000 from the Canadian Express Co., in November, 1909, was liberated two weeks ago.

Alpine Club Climb.

Montreal, Feb. 24.—At the Canadian Pacific Railway headquarters yesterday the official announcement was received that the sixth annual climb of the Alpine Club of Canada will be held during the last week of July, and the first week in August, in the Alpine meadows above Sherbrooke Lake, and close to the Great Divide.

Three More Judges.

Montreal, Feb. 24.—Information was received yesterday by officers of the Montreal Bar to the effect that three additional judges for the Circuit Court will soon be appointed.

It is the intention of the Government to appoint two judges of the French tongue and one of the English tongue.

2,500,000 May Starve.

New York, Feb. 24.—According to reports received by the Red Cross Society here from China 2,500,000 Chinese will die for want of bread if assistance is not rendered immediately.

This number comprises nearly the entire population of the northern part of the provinces of Kiang Su and Anhui.

Death of Mr. S. Loverin.

Brockville, Feb. 24.—Bethuel Loverin, former owner and editor of The Athens Reporter, and a leading resident of Leeds County, died yesterday morning at Athens, aged 63 years. His wife, one son and one daughter survive.

DELAYING MATTERS

Conservatives Take Two Hours of the House's Time Reading Comments and Protests From Their Districts

DR. CLARKE'S SPEECH

Ottawa, Feb. 24.—The events of yesterday seem to have utterly demoralized the Opposition to the reciprocal trade agreement. The dramatic intervention of Mr. Monk, his frank statement that the economic merits of the proposal had not been called in question, and the unanimous adoption by the House of his resolution declaring Canada's intention to preserve intact the bonds which unite her to the Empire, have confessedly left the Opposition artillery without powder. Yesterday they marked time to the amusement of the Liberals, pending some organized effort to evolve order from chaos.

For over two hours they held up the debate. On the resolution to resume, speaker after speaker was put up to read comments from the newspapers and reports of meetings held to condemn the agreement, many of them several days old.

The ball was started by C. L. Owens (E. Northumberland) reading a telegram from Washington that Senator Cummins would introduce an amendment to the tariff law of the United States admitting all Canadian manufactures free of duty.

On the motion to go into committee E. Guss Porter (W. Hastings) started skylarking. He read a resolution of protest from the strawboard manufacturers of the country.

W. E. Knowles (Moose Jaw) responded with a resolution from the Swift Current Board of Trade, "Viewing with satisfaction that a reciprocal tariff agreement had been reached with the United States," as it would help agricultural interests and bring about closer relations between the two countries.

The Kootenay member, E. S. Goodeve, was next on his feet with protests from the Kootenay Farmers' Institute, and two other British Columbia organizations.

W. E. Middleboro (N. Grey) drew the attention of the Minister of Finance to the resolution of the associated Boards of Trade at Toronto, moved by R. S. Cowlay and seconded by E. J. Davis.

Then followed other interruptions. Members produced more protests. B. B. Law (Yarmouth, N.S.), had one in favor of it.

At this point Hon. Wm. Paterson took a hand. As honorable gentlemen opposite had given the House some information, quoting from newspapers and otherwise, he would like to read an article from The Summerland Review, a fruit publication in British Columbia in support of free fruit. "The subject of the article is 'Sober Second Thoughts,'" said Mr. Paterson, while the members roared.

Geo. Bradbury (Selkirk), also contributed to the procession of protests.

After further cross-firing Mr. Borden said that apparently the Ministers did not understand the agreement with the United States, and had better hand it over to someone who did.

It was five o'clock when Dr. Michael Clarke, the Liberal orator from Red Deer, arose to continue the reciprocity debate. He quoted the president of the Canadian Council of Agriculture, the Grain Growers of Alberta and Manitoba, and the Grange of Ontario, all societies representing many farmers, to prove that the farmers were in favor of the measure.

Touching on the annexation argument Dr. Clarke said that annexation meant revolution. It meant the "melting of the Parliament Buildings, the hauling down of the flag and the removal of the Canadian capital to Washington. Revolution had never taken place except where discontent prevailed. The restriction of trade, as in the case of the United States, had led to revolution.

Mr. Blain charged the Government with "taking away at one stroke of the pen every vestige of protection that the farmers ever had." He read over the free list, comprising live animals, poultry, grain of various kinds, fresh vegetables, etc. "The Conservative party is in favor of protection for the farmer; the Liberals are opposed to it, but are charging a duty on those commodities that the farmers need."

Dr. Molloy (Provencher) followed with a racy western speech, in which he said that western farmers did not propose to be dictated to by a bunch of Toronto millionaires.

Hon. Clifford Sifton moved the adjournment.

A Smuggling Gang.

Windsor, Ont., Feb. 24.—By the capture of a Syrian, Mrs. Rosey of Detroit, Windsor customs officials believe they have got next to a gang of smugglers who have been smuggling goods from Detroit to Windsor and then peddling them through Essex and Kent Counties. Goods to the value of $250 were seized yesterday at the Syrian's house on Mercer street.

Schooner Burton Burned.

Kingston, Feb. 24.—The schooner Burton, formerly the Picton, owned by the Donnelly Wrecking Co., was partially destroyed by fire. It is believed boys set the vessel on fire.

Four more navy recruits have been accepted by the medical officer. They are W. H. Leach, J. E. Leach, A. Bain and A. Aveling, who will enter as artificers.

A HOLLOW MEASURE.

Thus Hon. A. G. MacKay Characterizes Milk Bill.

Toronto, Feb. 24.—Vigorous denunciation of municipal bonusing and Algonquin Park bills, and an animated discussion on the pure milk act, gave zest to the proceedings of the Ontario Legislature yesterday afternoon.

Hon. Col. Matheson, in moving the second reading of the bill to authorize the expenditure of $500,000 for the re-purchase of Algonquin Park limits said that over 300 square miles would be immediately bought back for $200,000. They were at the headquarters of large rivers.

J. J. Craig, East Wellington (Con.) made a fighting speech in support of his bill to prohibit bonuses by municipalities. The City of London, he said, was in danger of losing all her manufacturies by tempting offers from rival municipalities. He would appeal to the Premier to give more backbone to the private bills committee to stop the enactment of special bonus bills, which were an open defiance of the general law and a crying evil. "It is up to the Premier to remove a condition of affairs that is intolerable."

Sir James was promptly on his feet to respond to his supporters' appeal. His tone was vigorous and determined and left no doubt in regard to the Prime Minister's attitude.

The Premier said he was very much interested in what had been just stated. He would be sorry to learn that the private bills committee showed a disposition to countenance evasions of the law. He would do his utmost to stop, as far as he could do so, both for the credit of the Legislature and the province, the passage of bonus bills which should never be carried in any well-regulated municipality in defiance of the laws of the land.

Hon. J. S. Duff moved the House into committee on the pure milk bill.

D. Reed, South Wentworth (Lib.), spoke strongly against the local option allowed with respect to municipalities making a higher standard than the minimum set by the bill. He declared the latitude allowed to municipalities made the bill a "freak" and a case of "checkerboard legislation."

Hon. A. G. MacKay supported Mr. Reed's contention.

W. K. McNaught and W. D. McPherson vigorously endorsed the bill as submitted.

Hon. A. G. MacKay declared it "one of the most hollow bills that had ever wasted the time of this committee."

The committee rose and reported the bill, which was given its third reading.

Dr. Pyne reported for the Department of Education to the members of the Legislature yesterday. The report shows that there were 779 first and second class teachers, with 98 fewer thirds than the year before, as the result of opening three more normal schools and closing model schools.

In urban schools the average salaries of teachers is $1,000 and $532 for male and female, increases of $14 and $16 respectively. In rural schools the salaries were $484 and $399, increases of $22 and $17 respectively. The teachers increased by 189.

The urban attendance increased by 6,078, but the rural schools decreased by 2,897.

Expenditure on the elementary schools was $8,161,423, an increase of $197,597, while the cost per pupil increased 32 cents, all for salaries.

The salaries for high school teachers rose $56 on an average, with an increased attendance of 1,189.

Vote to Shorten Hours.

Toronto, Feb. 24.—The dove of peace reigned over the second temperance meeting of the Canadian Citizens' League in Labor Temple last night, and the temperance workers of Toronto by a large majority endorsed the movement for a reduction in hours as instigated by Alderman McCarthy.

Rev. B. H. Spence, secretary of the Dominion Alliance, still contended that as all the temperance people were not agreed on the method that should be adopted to secure shorter hours, the question should not be made one of municipal politics, but that the Government should be requested to reduce the hours during which liquor should be sold throughout the province.

The resolution moved by Rev. Dr. Hincks and seconded by Rev. R. M. Dickey, was amended to include cities of over 100,000, as it was believed this would make it of effect in the larger centres where local option was not submitted, and it would render it a public bill and the Government would be able to discuss it.

Explosion at London.

London, Ont., Feb. 24.—With a terrific explosion, the sound of which could be heard all over the east end, a retort at the Toasted Corn Works blew the end out of the new large building recently erected here by the Kellogg people.

The explosion happened at 12.45 just when the fifty employes were out of the factory for their luncheons. But two men were in the building when it shook like a leaf. Both of these escaped.

The retort was blown from one end of the building to the other and is now hanging out of the hole in the wall it made for itself. The damage will be in the neighborhood of $2,000.

Veteran Coachman Killed.

Washington, D.C., Feb. 24.—Edward Quade, for nearly twenty-five years coachman for the U. S. Secretaries of War, was killed in a runaway accident here yesterday.

G.T.R. Freight Sheds Burned.

Glencoe, Ont., Feb. 24.—At 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon the G.T.R. freight sheds here were burned to the ground with heavy loss, the buildings being filled with goods. A spark from an engine is believed to be the cause.

CAN'T RAISE THE RATES

The Interstate Commerce Commission Makes Important Decision—Lines Must be Economical

PRINCIPLE LAID DOWN

Washington, Feb. 24.—The Interstate Commerce Commission decides against the railroads in both the eastern and western cases. The decision, eagerly awaited by railroads and shippers alike, was handed down late yesterday afternoon.

The cases are the most important that have ever come before the commission. The decisions were in the nature of a surprise to railroad officials and other experts, who have followed closely the proceedings, a majority of whom believed the commission would grant some increase to the western lines, if not to the eastern.

After considering exhaustively the whole subject, however, from every viewpoint, the commission could not see its way clear to grant any advance in rates, although it concedes that in the case of some of the roads an increased revenue is needed.

In the so-called southwestern cases the commission declines to disturb either the commodity or the class rates, thus in effect authorizing the advances recently made by the roads except as to the third, fourth, fifth and sixth classes, on which the old rates are ordered restored.

The carriers are ordered to cancel the advanced tariffs on or before March 10. If they fail to do this, the commission will order a suspension of proposed advances and fix the existing rates for two years. In the western case the carriers entered a powerful plea for increased revenue, to put into improvements and betterments.

Both the eastern and western cases were brought to public attention in the spring of 1910. Just prior to the enactment of the existing interstate commerce law, which, in part, became effective on June 18, 1910, the railways of official classification territory—41 in all—and those of the Western Trunk Lines Association territory filed with the Inter-State Commerce Commission's tariffs making general increases in their freight rates.

The tariffs filed by the eastern lines increased the first class rate between New York and Chicago points. The proposed advances affected approximately fifteen per cent. of the total freight tonnage and amounted to $27,000,000 a year.

Approximately the same amount of tonnage was affected by the increases proposed by the western lines, but the class rates were not affected in any way.

Commissioner Prouty concedes that the increase in the labor accounts of the eastern roads during the last year has been from five to eight per cent. of their pay rolls, aggregating, for the forty-one lines, approximately $35,000,000 a year. The opinion holds, however, that "the carriers have not, by showing that the increases in wages more than equal the increases in rates, made out the reasonableness of the proposed advance in rates," because, it is indicated, "it appears that during the year ending June 30, 1910, the net earnings of these railroads aggregated $51,000,000 more than during the year 1909." While it is admitted that this is not conclusive against the propriety of the advances, "it does show that we cannot conclusively presume from an increase in operating expense that there should be a corresponding increase in transportation charge."

It is laid down as a principle that "no general advance in rates should be permitted until carriers have exhausted every reasonable effort toward economy in their business," and the opinion is expressed that railroad operators have not given to this subject the attention which it deserves.

Booksellers' Arrested.

Toronto, Feb. 24.—Arthur G. Virtue, 239 Church street, and Albert Britnell, 241 Yonge street, were arraigned in the Police Court yesterday morning charged with offering for sale, selling and circulating obscene literature in the shape of Balzac's Droll Stories, the unexpurgated works of Guy de Maupassant and the Arabian Nights Tales, unexpurgated.

Both pleaded not guilty and were remanded a week.

Wholesale Expulsion of Jews.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 24.—Governor Maximoff has begun a widespread expulsion of the Jews from the Province of Tchernigov, a government in Little Russia. Two hundred and nineteen families in one district, including wealthy landowners and manufacturers, were marched through the heavy snowdrifts.

Minister of War Dead.

Paris, Feb. 24.—Gen. Brun, Minister of War in the cabinet of Premier Briand, dropped dead from a paralytic stroke at the offices of the Ministry yesterday. He was stricken a few moments after he had received the members of his staff in his private office.

Reciprocity Evidence All In.

Washington, D.C., Feb. 24.—Hearings by the Senate Finance Committee on the Canadian reciprocity agreement were closed at 3.45 p.m. yesterday.

The committee met at 10.30 o'clock to-day to consider the question of making a report to the Senate.

Why the Optical Institute Succeeds

There are Optometrists in Canada who do a larger business than ourselves. There are Optometrists and Opticians who do a smaller, but the Optometrist who does better work or gives better value has not pushed his head above the Optical Horizon. A strong statement to be sure, but when we point to twenty years of the best training and experience in both United States and Canada and over 27000 persons fitted to the best possible Eyesight are we not justly proud of our work? We are even adding to our facilities and studying the latest methods. This is why we succeed.

Woman His Victim.

London, Feb. 24.—Felix Frank Alfred Ogilive, who describes himself as a German engineer, is charged with a multiplicity of wives, and with defrauding his victims. Three illegal alliances are alleged.

According to evidence, Ogilvie in 1903, in San Francisco, married a widow named Louth before a magistrate. In a more recent case, it is asserted that he took his bride to a well-known hotel and next day drugged her and decamped with her jewels and cash. To a third victim he is accused of having represented himself as an engineer employed by the Standard Oil at $30,000 a year.

Huge Drydock For Esquimalt.

Victoria, Feb. 24.—Official announcement is made that the British Columbia Marine Railway Co. will build a drydock to cost $3,000,000 at Lang's Cove, Esquimalt. The dock will be 800 feet long and 100 feet wide. It is the intention to equip a modern shipyard for the construction of cruisers and destroyers for the Pacific squadron of the Canadian navy at Esquimalt.

Epidemic Stops Initiations.

Ottawa, Feb. 24.—Until the present typhoid fever epidemic is over, no new members will be initiated into the Independent Order of Foresters in Ottawa. An order has been received by each of the fourteen local courts from Dr. Millman of Toronto, supreme high physician.

This is the first time in the memory of old fraternal men that an epidemic has become so serious as to promot action as above.

A Plea for Rubbernecks.

Be good to the rubbernecks. They are the people who find time to attend the weddings and who make the public opinion that decides if the bride looked pretty or was a fright. They also attend the funerals, and it is through them that busy people learn if the corpse looked natural and if the relatives were as grief stricken as they should have been. They decide if a woman's new dress is becoming, if a girl makes a good match, if a new baby is pretty. They make the sentiment that is favorable or opposed to a girl's singing, her piano playing or her recitations in public. They are the opinion makers. Be good to them.

Death.

Death, the dry pedant, spares neither the rose nor the thistle, nor does he forget the solitary blade of grass in the distant waste. He destroys thoroughly and unceasingly. Everywhere we may see how he crushes to dust plants and beasts, men and their works. Even the Egyptian pyramids, that would seem to defy him, are trophies of his power, monuments of decay, graves of primeval kings.—Heinrich Heine.

"THE INNOCENT MURDERERS"

By Wm. Johnston and Paul West

"Why, Mrs. Hopkins," he said, "what is it?"

"I don't know," stammered the woman.

"Don't ask," said Sullivan, walking between them and fairly carrying them up the steep hill. "Mrs. Hopkins," he said, "this is unpleasant for you, and it's liable to be more unpleasant. But there are things in this world that we can't avoid and this is one of them. Be as brave as you can, and rest assured of one thing. What you are going to see and go through within the next half hour is going to convince you that your husband wasn't as bad a man as you thought!"

"Wasn't!" gasped Mrs. Hopkins, beginning to guess the truth.

They were all three out of breath by the time they reached the college. Sullivan took them around by the side of the building and into the open space at the rear. "I think we will surprise them better that way," he said. "They may be watching and they won't look at this side of the building so much." In the open space he paused, unable to determine just what to do next. There was no sign of life or light about the building. All was silent and calm.

"You wait here," he said to the Dean and Mrs. Hopkins.

"Oh, my poor husband!" moaned the woman. "Look," she cried, pointing at the windows directly above where they stood, "Look! The windows of his laboratory!"

"Hush!" said the Dean, quietly.

Sullivan was tiptoeing to the door. They could hardly hear him move, so stealthy were his steps. He seemed to be listening. Finally they heard the door open, and could see the detective as he leaped back. In his hand something glistened brightly. They heard himery:

"Halt, there! I've got you covered!"

There were frantic exclamations from some persons whom they could not see, and then the detective flashed his pocket-lantern, and its rays were focussed on Professors Rice, Snyder and Fischer, standing with hands raised above their heads, in the doorway of the building, for Sullivan had his revolver pointed straight at them. The Dean and Mrs. Hopkins stood rooted to the spot, the woman limp in his arms. Then they herad Sullivan say:

"Now, march this way!"

Silently Rice, Fischer and Snyder obeyed his command. He walked backward, his revolver still holding them as if by hypnotic power and leading them, shufflingly, on. They came out into the open, near the spot where the Dean and the wife of their victim stood. But the three men did not see the Dean and Mrs. Hopkins. Their frightened, bulging eyes were centred on but one object, the muzzle of Sullivan's revolver.

"Halt!" said Sullivan. They stopped with a simultaneous groan. The detective turned his head slightly. "Dean Quimby! Mrs. Hopkins!" he said. The Dean led Mrs. Hopkins toward the detective. "You see whom I have here?" said Sullivan, flashing the light more fully on the cowering trio. "Take a good look at them, because I'm going to say something else in a minute. Stop!" he cried, suddenly, for Snyder seemed about to make a movement to get away; "Stop, or I'll shoot!"

"Good!" said Sullivan. "Let him lie there. Now, where is it?" There was no answer from Fischer and Rice "You don't need to answer. I know where it is. It is in the observatory. I accuse you of putting it there. I accuse you of—My God in heaven!"

Sullivan was the only one in all the group facing the building now. As he spoke his revolver fell to his side, and the hand holding the pocket light let it drop. But there was light to show the utter consternation on his face. Light enough to make plain the look of horror in his upturned eyes. And the light came from the laboratory window directly over where they stood. Slowly the others turned. What did they see to make them gasp, to make Mrs. Hopkins fall prostrate on the ground?

In the window of the laboratory, standing as though in the act of pressing the electric light button, was Josiah Hopkins!

CHAPTER TWENTY.

Conclusion.

Of all the group, Rice alone maintained any degree of composure. He was by no means calm, but he did not entirely collapse. He looked at the figure in the window. It was Hopkins. There was no question about that. And it was not a ghost. Rice did not believe in ghosts. He did not wait to ask the detective's permission to do what he did next. Sullivan was in no condition to give it. Rice sprang across the courtyard, into the building and up the stairs. In the next instant, he was in the laboratory.

"Hopkins!" he shouted. "Hopkins!"

The figure turned. A sight of it, its clothes stained with contact with the earth to which they had been subjected, the features drawn and gaunt and dirt-covered, almost froze Rice's marrow. But it was alive, for it spoke. It said:

"Well, what is it? What's the matter?"

"Hopkins," again cried Rice, approaching the man, "Don't you know me? I'm Rice. Come, man, give me your hand!" He took the cold, limp fingers of the professor of chemistry in his, and slapped him on the back to try and awaken him to his surroundings. He threw his arms about him, and then he led him to the window, which he threw wide open.

"Look, look! You, Mr. Detective—everyone! It's he, I tell you! Speak to them, Hopkins! Speak to your wife. Don't you see her down there?"

There came a word from the haggard, benumbed man in the window. It was in a hoarse, graveyard voice, but it was a voice. And it said, in the usual tired, disinterested way:

"Well, my dear?"

Then the Dean, like one walking in a dream, led Mrs. Hopkins up into her husband's laboratory—the first time she had ever set foot in it—and they were clasped in each other's arms, while her tears fell warmer than they had been in many a year.

Sullivan was the last to follow into the room. He could not believe it yet. He stood in the doorway, looking in, wonderingly. Could this be some trick to cheat justice of her rights? Were his eyes and senses being hoodwinked in some way?

"What is it? What is it? he demanded of himself but he got no answer.

And then there were two more arrivals. Ernesta Fr—that is to say, Mrs. George Gordon and her husband. They saw the light in the laboratory and didn't know what it was. She dragged her husband into the building and up the stairs. At sight of the detective, Gordon himself took the initiative.

"Mr. Detective," he said, "I have come back to face the music."

"What music?" asked Sullivan in disgust.

An hour later, the Gordons, Mrs. Hopkins, the Dean and Detective Sullivan were gathered in the parlour of the Hopkins house. Professor Hopkins was upstairs in bed. Dr. Whitridge said that he did not think it would be pneumonia, but the patient must be kept very quiet for many days.

To say that the strange occurrences of the last few days with their strange denouement, were explained in that meeting would be to exaggerate. They have never been explained. It is doubtful if they ever will be. Of course, the material aspects of the case were robbed of the veil of mystery that had shrouded them, but the manner of Professor Hopkins' recall to life—for such it was and must be acknowledged to be—was not and has never been satisfactorily cleared up.

In view of his famous experiments since along the line of the application of radium salts toward inducing the suspension of animation, it may be that the general public can find some solution for itself. It is well known that not only Professor Hopkins, but Dr. Neuell of Berlin, have succeeded in exposing the larvæ of the promethea and cecropia moths to the action of radium and destroying all apparent life during a period of more than three months, only to have the life return after the influence has been removed, and moth hatch out as perfect in all details as though the chrysalis had never been tampered with.

Professor Hopkins himself has never given out any statement on the subject. He declines to tell what was the nature of the concoction in the graduating glass which he drank to prevent his colleagues from learning his secret. He declines to say how and when he first felt life returning to him. Was it during the hideous night which he spent in the vault on Cemetery Hill? Was it while Professor Fischer was carrying him, like a meal sack, across the rough roads and up and down hill? Or was it not until they had left him in the observatory, to be found a suicide? As he will not tell how can anybody else?

It is sufficient to say that Professors Rice, Snyder and Fischer found it advisable to resign from the faculty of Graydon College at once, their places for the remainder of the term Professor Hopkins and his wife, as the guests of Mme. Curie, went abroad during the summer, accompanied by Professor Gordon and his beautiful young wife. Detective Sullivan was at the dock to see them off.

It is not stated authoritatively, but rumour has it, that the money lost by Ernesta has long since been made up to her husband by Professor Hopkins, who insisted in repaying it. But then, he could well afford to, as his discoveries have brought him and are still bringing him, much more every year than a mere $5,000.

The Tenderfoot Farmer

It was one of those experimental farmers, who put green spectacles on his cow and fed her shavings. His theory was that it didn't matter what the cow ate so long as she was fed. The questions of digestion and nourishment had not entered into his calculations.

It's only a "tenderfoot" farmer that would try such an experiment with a cow. But many a farmer feeds himself regardless of digestion and nutrition. He might almost as well eat shavings for all the good he gets out of his food. The result is that the stomach grows "weak" the action of the organs of digestion and nutrition are impaired and the man suffers the miseries of dyspepsia and the agonies of nervousness.

To strengthen the stomach, restore the activity of the organs of digestion and nutrition and brace up the nerves, use Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It is an unfailing remedy, and has the confidence of physicians as well as the praise of thousands healed by its use.

In the strictest sense "Golden Medical Discovery" is a temperance medicine. It contains neither intoxicants nor narcotics, and is as free from alcohol as from opium, cocaine and other dangerous drugs. All ingredients printed on its outside wrapper.

Don't let a dealer delude you for his own profit. There is no medicine for stomach, liver and blood "just as good" as "Golden Medical Discovery."

REBUILDING MESSINA

On a Most Lavish Scale—The Great Amount of Money Required

Messina, the beautiful city in Sicily, so recently wiped out by earthquake, is to be rebuilt on a most lavish scale.

Signori Sacchi and Cinfalli, the Italian Ministers of Public Works and of Posts and Telegraphs, respectively, accompanied by Signor Calisano, Under-Secretary for the Interior, and a number of senators and deputies, visited Messina recently to gain an idea of the progress made and the measures yet to be adopted in connection with its rebuilding.

Signor Sacchi made a speech, received with loud cheers, in which he recalled what the Government had already done, and announced its intentions in the future for the benefit of the stricken city. He explained the difficulties that had prevented an earlier start being made with permanent rebuilding.

In the first place, the immediate needs of the survivors had to be met, and for this purpose 40,000 cantonment shelters had been constructed. Altogether, of the 106,000,000 lire ($21,200,000) originally placed at the disposal of the Ministry of Public Works, 76,000,000 lire ($15,200,000) had been spent, and contracts were gradually being entered into for the outlay of the rest. While, Signor Sacchi continued, two years ago only some 3,000 persons remained among the ruins, the city now counted 40,000 inhabitants living in the cantonments, and 20,000 in houses that had been repaired, and the growing development of the public services and the recovery of trade afforded great encouragement for the city's future.

They were now entering on a new phase, the period of stable reconstruction and economic development. The laws specially passed for this purpose had brought the total funds at the Government's disposal, including the advance of loans to private persons, up to 500,000,000 lire ($100,000,000), and it had been possible to do all that without entrenching upon the Treasury's prosperity or the country's credit.

The Government's programme now was the speedy building of new houses, in accordance with rules calculated to minimize future danger. Over a million cubic yards of debris had been cleared away, and now work had to be begun on private property. If private owners did not take the necessary measures within three months, the Government would immediately step in with the most powerful modern appliances.

That would mean that the lower part of the town would be cleared in eighteen months, and the upper part within three years. For its part, the Government was taking active steps for the building of public offices, and would ask Parliament for further funds for that purpose. But they had to think especially of the sea-front and the harbor.

Work on the dry dock was already actively proceeding, and in a few months further harbor works would be begun costing 5,000,000 lire ($1,000,000).

KEEP RECORDS

Farmers Should Not Work in the Dark —Know Profits

Do you keep a record of all the work you do on the farm in order to produce certain crops? Do you keep a record of the value received from such crops? If not you are working in the dark.

The successful business man keeps an accurate account of all his transactions, consequently he knows which are paying lines and which are not. He can then form his plans to discard the non-paying lines and improve on the paying ones.

In the same way the progressive farmer knows, by keeping accurate accounts which operations to follow with a profit, and which to avoid.

If you have not already started a system of bookkeeping on the farm, begin now!

Keep an account of each and every operation around the farm, as well as of results. It matters not how crude the system may be at first, you will improve it from time to time.

WINDSOR BARRACKS

The barracks which have been recently erected at Windsor at a cost of $280,000 are on a luxurious scale. In addition to a separate sleeping cubicle for each man, there are dining halls, billiard rooms, recreation rooms, libraries, and studies, as well as a theatre. In the lavatories hot and cold water is provided for washing, and there are separate rooms adjoining for shaving purposes. There are also baths, as well as shower and foot baths.

A WOMAN'S BACK.

Not One Woman In Twenty Has a Stong Back.

The kidneys are to blame nine times out of ten.

When the blood isn't properly filtered the poisons that ought to be carried off by the kidneys are sent back through the system, and it's hardly to be wondered that backaches and lame backs come to make life miserable.

Doan's Kidney Pills are a specific for all kidney troubles. They begin by expelling all the poisonous matter from the kidneys, and then heal the delicate membranes and make their action regular and natural.

Mrs. A. H. Hutton, Jr., McCreary, Man., writes:—"Two years ago last spring I had a very severe pain in the small of my back. When I would rise it seemed as if my back would break. My kidneys were very badly out of order, and I would have to get up three or four times during the night. I took one box of Doan's Kidney Pills and they effected a cure."

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50 cents per box or 3 for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by the T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

If ordering direct specify "Doan's"

Substitutes are Dangerous

Beware of imitations unscrupulous dealers tell you are "just as good as" Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey.

These cheap concoctions are foisted on the people with the intent to deceive by dealers mindful of their profits only and caring nothing for the health of their patrons. Some go so far as to try to make you believe it is Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey.

When a remedy has been before the public for more than half a century has been prescribed and used by the best doctors and in prominent hospitals, and has carried the blessings of health into as many thousands of homes as Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey has, imitations are bound to arise. But they can imitate the bottle and label only—no one can imitate the contents.

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey is Beneficial

It is an absolutely pure distillation of malted grain. Its palatability and its freedom from injurious substances render it so that it can be retained by the most sensitive stomach. It has been used with remarkable results in the prevention and cure of consumption, pneumonia, grip, coughs, colds, asthma, malaria, low fevers, stomach troubles and all wasting and diseased conditions.

The genuine Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey is sold in SEALED BOTTLES ONLY. The "Old Chemist's Head" is on the label and over the cork is an engraved seal. Be certain this seal is unbroken. Sold by grocers and liquor dealers everywhere, or direct $1.25 a large bottle.

BROKEN ENGAGEMENT

Matrimonial Prospect Shattered Over the Fitting of a Carpet

A singular story of a broken engagement through the purchase of some carpets was told at Bloomsbury County Court. A Mr. Marks was sued by Messrs. Maple for the payment of a number of carpets.

Mr. H. L. Murphy, counsel for the plaintiffs, said that an order was given by the young woman to whom Mr. Marks was engaged, and she was to be called to prove the purchase.

Judge Bacon:—"She is not married to him?"

Mr. Murphy:—"The engagement was broken off."

Judge Bacon:—"Can a young woman pledge her fiancee's credit for these things?"

Mr. Murphy:—"Not without some expressed authority being given."

Miss Goodman said that Mr. Marks gave her authority to purchase carpets.

Judge Bacon:—"Were you limited in any way?"

Miss Goodman:—"No."

Judge Bacon:—"Did he tell you that you could go and purchase an Oriental or Persian carpet for hundreds of pounds?"

Miss Goodman:—"Not quite so far as that."

Mr. Marks said the engagement was broken off on the ground that the "young woman" would go and give orders for things without his authority.

Judge Bacon:—"The carpets were for the flat where you were to live happy ever after."

The defendant was asked if he wished to cross-examine the young woman, but he said he did not wish to.

Judge Bacon:—"If you are not on speaking terms you may do so through counsel."

The defendant said that he did not want carpets made specially.

Judge Bacon:—"Do you intend to say that your domestic happiness was wrecked during the engagement on such a trivial point as the fitting of a carpet?"

Mr. Marks said he could not afford special carpets, but his "young woman" wanted too much. The carpets went back as well as some furniture, but he did not know how.

Judge Bacon:—"It is only a wrangle, and I shall order you to pay. You will then find out where they are. Judgment for the plaintiff for the amount claimed, $30."

SLASHED HIS PICTURE

The Strange Conduct of an Artist at Budapest

A strange scene occurred in the Salon at Budapest the other week. A young man wearing an Inverness cape, the long hair and the slouch hat of the typical artist, was seen to take out a knife and began to slash one of the pictures upon the walls, and before he could be stopped he had not only completely ruined the picture, but cut the canvas to shreds. He was taken before the authorities, loudly protesting, and there the strange story transpired that the destroyer of the picture was actually its creator. The artist had tried for years to get a picture hung, and had at last succeeded. Whether the joy of success unhinged his reason, or whether he acted in this strange fashion to show his contempt for the official art world, is not clear, but probably the latter reason is the true one, as the man's demeanor was sane in other respects.

A KISS IS——

A thing of use to no one, but much prized by two.

That which you cannot give without taking, and cannot take without giving.

The only known "smack" that will calm a storm.

The thunder-clap of the lips which inevitably follows the lightning glance of the eyes.

That in which two heads are better than one.

RUSSIAN WOMEN REVOLUTIONISTS

Goaded Into Anarchism by the Horrors of Czardomism—Carcers of Some Leaders

"Let the Great Powers intervene and insist upon a comprehensive reform of Russian monarchical methods in that unhappy country, and we shall hear no more of Anarchism, of Nihilism, nor of the terror that turns men and women into murderers."

And like the writer of this paragraph, which is quoted from a London newspaper many others, since the terrible Stepney tragedy, have pointed out that a great measure of the responsibility for the presence of Anarchists in England lies at the door of Czardomism. Russia breeds Anarchists and Nihilists—high-minded men and women who sacrifice their freedom and lives because of their hatred of the despots who grind down the common people with prison and the knout, and others who, having suffered cruelty and torture, pursue a systematic course of revenge on all society.

A striking illustration of the manner in which Russians are goaded into Anarchism is to be found in the fact that, according to statistics, 35 per cent. of all Russian Revolutionists and Nihilists are women. Not ignorant, uneducated women, but in many cases women of culture, wealth, and good breeding, who are so stirred by the wrongs suffered by their countrymen and countrywomen that they gladly join the Revolutionists, well knowing that sooner or later they will be forced from a luxurious home and surroundings to a living death in Siberia.

The death was recently reported, for instance, of Vera Sussulitch, a woman martyr, whose work and fate have inspired thousands of followers. She, together with Vera Figner—both young women of high ideals and education—were arrested as Revolutionaries after the assassination of Czar Alexander II. For nearly twenty years they were confined in the solitary dungeons of Schlusselburg, the Russian Bastille in the middle of the Neva, from which no one has ever escaped; and then they were sent to Siberia. Ultimately, when they were aged, grey-haired, and broken in health, Czar Nicholas gave them a pardon and they were released.

One of the most picturesque figures amongst women Revolutionists of Russia is Vera Figner, whose father was one of the distinguished generals of the Napoleonic wars. Betrayed by a traitor, she was condemned to twenty years in the Schlusselburg fortress for alleged participation in every one of the attempts on the life of the late Czar. Those incarcerated in this fortress are considered as buried alive, no intercourse or communication with the outer world being allowed, not even with their own nearest relatives. But Vera Figner survived the horrors of twenty years' solitary confinement and exile in Siberia, and is still working for the enlightenment of ignorant Russians.

Flogged to Death

A name revered by all Russian Revolutionists is that of Mme. Sigida, who, aroused to a frenzy of indignation through seeing an invalid female prisoner in the Siberian colony of Kara, to which they had both been exiled, flogged by a warder, was herself flogged to death because she struck him. In the prison records it is written, "Mme. Sigida committed suicide by poisoning herself," but truth, like murder, will out, and the crime of the warders of Kara has been fully proved.

Terrible indeed were the torture and cruelty meted out to Marie Spiridonova, who three years ago shot Colonel Luzhanovsky, who flogged the peasants when they were unable to pay taxes, or ordered the Cossacks to shoot down the strikers and to torture their wives and children. She was condemned to death, but the inhuman treatment she had suffered before her trial induced the authorities to commute the death-sentence, although it would have been more merciful to have carried out the extreme penalty of the law, for to-day she is working out a miserable existence in a Siberian mine, and is said to be the only chained woman convict in Siberia.

A Princess in Exile

One of the most remarkable incidents in the history of the Russian movement was the sentencing to Siberia of M. Lopukhin, President of the Police Department until 1906, who was accused of sympathizing with the Revolutionists. His wife, born a princess and a friend of the Czarina, followed her husband into exile, and the once leader of fashionable society in St. Petersburg is now a member of a colony of Siberian convicts.

These are but a few of the women Nihilists of Russia, who, in the words of M. Prelooker, "have given up their homes, sold their costly gowns and furs, and have gone bravely out to face death, and worse than death."

Of these women, Catherine Breshkovskaya is the honored leader. She is known as the "well-beloved grandmother of the Revolutionists." For twenty-three years she was incarcerated in various prisons in Siberia, sometimes in solitary confinement, sometimes with a few companions in an Arctic climate surrounded by an eternity of snow, but undaunted in spite of all. "We may die in exile, and our children may die in exile, but something will come out of it at last," she says.

TAXES PAID BY ANIMALS

The natives of the Congo pay their taxes in kind, as might be expected in a territory just beginning to be civilised. The value of domestic animals in that country is such that one wishes it were nearer Canada in view of the high price of meat here. A bullock is valued at about $3.90, a cow $11, a horse $17, a sheep 30 cents. The camel commands the highest price, viz., $26. The custom of payment in kind is not so remote as most persons would think. The reverend the late Professor Flint, of Edinburgh, has stated that during the time he was Professor of Moral Philosophy in St Andrews he was accustomed to receive part of the emoluments of his chair in kind from the farms belonging to the University. This would be prior to 1876, in which year he was translated to Edinburgh.

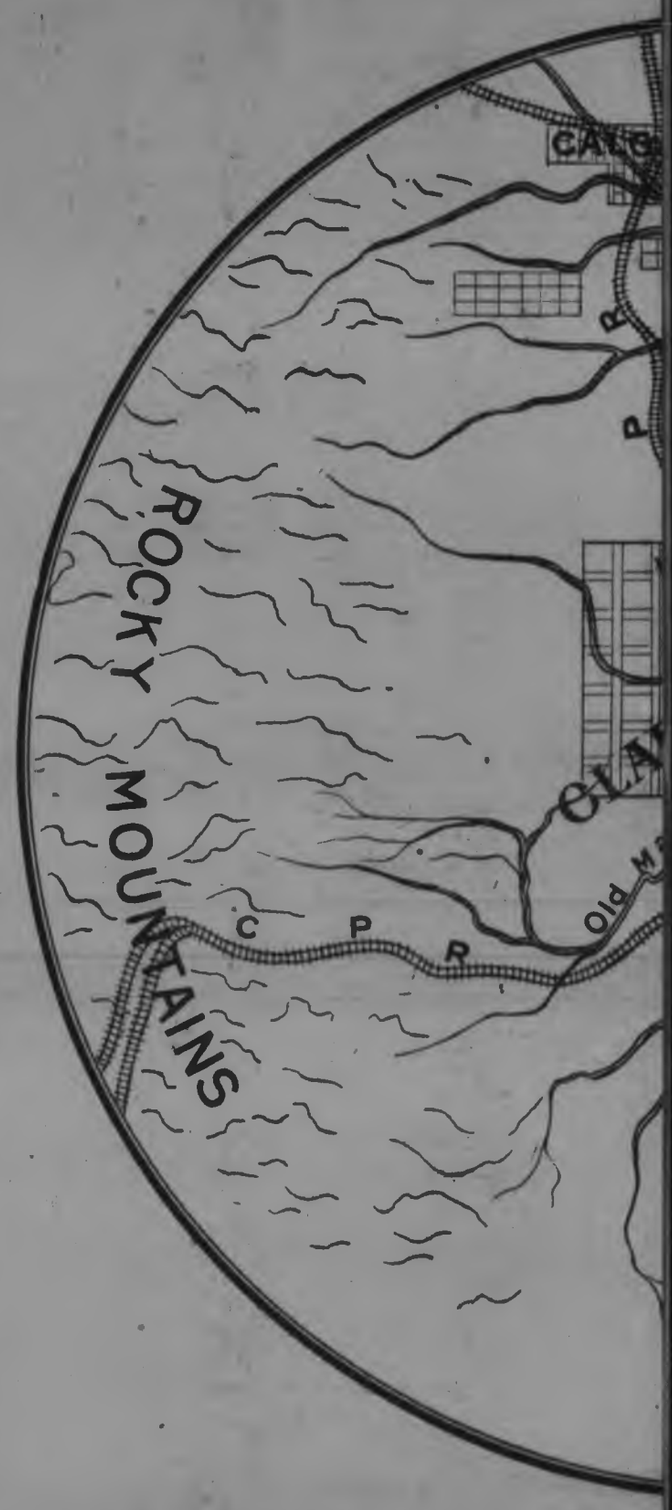
CLARE

THE WHEAT CENTRE



The Present Claresholm

While the opportunities in the "Last and Greatest West" are varied and unlimited and untold numbers of the best investments are overlooked in a mad rush for the goal, the primary principal of successful Real Estate investment is foresight.

Claresholm is eighty-one miles south of the city of Calgary and ninety miles North West of the City of Lethbridge; on the Canadian Pacific Railway, their receipts at this point run from $30.000 to $50.000 per month. The company is building this year, 1911, a new Railway Station and office to cost at least $25.000.

Claresholm, in Sunny Southern Alberta, is surrounded by the best Wheat Land (the best in the province) and in the year 1908 more grain was shipped from this station than from any other point West of WINNIPEG, viz, 1.500,000 bushles, while in 1909 the yield was increased to 2.600,000 bushles.

The unique position of Claresholm both geographically, and topographically assures its continued prosperity, and it will always hold the proud distinction of being "The Leading Grain Town of the West".

Claresholm is the best Town in Southern Alberta, and at present prices, Real Estate will bring large profits to the fortunate investors. Factory and warehouse property will be in great demand. Property on the main street is NOW selling on the Claresholm market of from $150 to $200 per frontage foot.

With the advent of the announcement of two mammoth elevators (making six in all, with a capacity of 600,000 bushles) to be erected this year in addition to the proposed entrance of TWO NEW RAILROADS to assist in transporting the enormous yield of ALBERTA RED, in the famous CLARESHOLM DISTRICT, the possibilities of Claresholm present themselves as the OPPORTUNITY OF THE YEAR.

The Canadian Pacific Railway is unable to handle the grain with satisfaction to the Elevator Officials and farmers and their complaints have been heard with favor by the officials of the new railroads, viz.---Canadian Northern Railway and the Grand Trunk Pacific.

Besides the mammoth yields of grain, the coal industry of the district, which heretofore has practically been undeveloped, will be in operation, supplying fuel for its railways and local industries. To the west of the town, 10 miles distant Ranching has been successfully carried on by old, experienced companies for 20 years. The city of Calgary will have a population of from 75,000 to 100,000, Lethbridge will have at least 35,000, and Claresholm's growth during this period with the many advantageous steps of development will be 10,000 or 15,000, to say the least. Property values, business and industrial franchises will be at a premium. The increase in growth will proportionately affect the the conditions which merited such. Claresholm offers its unquestionable possibilities to you to share in the development of its resources and natural advantages as embodied in the opportunity of the year.

AS IN THE LONG AGO

She Had Not Forgotten and Was True to the Last.

By VIRGINIA L. WENTZ.

Grown weary of his reading, Kent Harding glanced across the deck. There a slender, girlish figure leaning idly over the rails caught his attention. Although the veil of her yachting cap was down and it was possible to distinguish only the vague outline of her profile, something in the graceful poise of her head, in the tip of the shell-like ear and in the lustrous brown hair that gleamed in the red shine of the setting sun made him think of a girl whom he had known in the long ago.

"By Jove! I wonder if it could be?" he speculated, looking at her sharply and blinking through the smoke from his pipe.

Just then she raised her veil and turned. Harding saw that she was, in fact, the selfsame girl. She knew him instantly as he came forward, and they shook hands heartily, as became old friends.

"Of course, when we get back to New York you'll come and see me?" continued Vittoria after they had talked of many things. "You know, when brother married I issued my declaration of independence. It's a dear little box of a house in Greenwich village. All alone? Why, to be sure. That's the principle upon which I made my stand—a woman against the world." She smiled as she spoke, and her teeth glistened prettily in two little rows.

"Sounds more terrifying than it really is," she went on without giving him a chance to throw in, "for the bachelor maid has only to acknowledge to thirty and the world tosses up the sponge at once. It doesn't care to continue a fight after it's ceased to be interesting."

But Harding had put his beloved pipe in one corner of his mouth and was going through an elaborate pantomime of counting on his fingers. "Nine and twenty," he corrected.

Vittoria colored slightly and strummed nonchalantly on the arm of her steamer chair. "What an appalling memory!" said she.

Whereupon they both laughed, and a little silence fell.

"Nine years," observed Harding suddenly. He had been stretched out lazily in his chair, his hands beneath his curly head, his gray eyes staring straight into the glory of the western heavens. "It's a good slice, isn't it, if one hasn't accomplished"—

In the midst of his sentence he saw Vittoria nod to some one. Following the direction of her eyes, he perceived a tall, blond girl, smartly gowned and of rather haughty demeanor, walking briskly toward them. A maid followed more slowly with a steamer rug and an armful of wraps.

"Ah, it's Marion!" he exclaimed, half to himself. And to Vittoria, "Do you know her?"

"Our acquaintance is only a bowing one," volunteered Vittoria coldly. "I met her last month in Switzerland."

"Hello, Kent!" cried Miss Marion Lane carelessly as he rose to greet her. From beneath her inky lashes she glanced at Vittoria indifferently and nodded slightly again. "You can join mother and me when you like—no hurry," she murmured amiably as she swept on down the deck, where her maid deposited her rug and wraps beside an alert looking little widow in black.

"I'm engaged to Miss Lane," Harding said oddly at length. "At least I've asked her to marry me."

"You"— began Vittoria incredulously. Then a change took place in her feminine mind. "And her answer?" she said simply.

"Of course."

"I love her," said he, a bit shamefacedly. "It must seem strange that I—to say this—to you," he stammered.

"No; I think I understand," she said quietly. And then she listened with incredible patience to his foolish rhapsodies. There never was such an adorable creature as Marion—such wealth of tenderness and undiscovered charm.

Shortly afterward Harding took his leave. The twilight was fast coming on, and Vittoria sat for a long time leaning over the rail again. She was looking into the long ago.

Now, there was once a girl, and she was barely seventeen—oh, sentimental, to be sure. And he was a nice boy, home from college on his senior vacation. She had cared for him, for he was a nice boy and had such manly, honest gray eyes. And then one summer day as they had stood alone in the old fashioned garden he had kissed her. Ah, how unforgettably vivid was the background—the gold of the sunflowers and the crimson of the hollyhocks!

And the next day they had walked over to the village, where he got her a foolish little ring set with blue stones, "because blue means true love," said he—just a boy and girl affair. And the next week the boy had been whisked off on a continental tour and had contemplated the university settlement. Finally, however, he had compromised with parental authority by going in strenuously for football.

When three years later they had met again she saw that the episode with the sunflower and hollyhock background was already too remote to occasion even momentary embarrassment. The knowledge that he'd forgotten had hurt a little. Yes; if one must be honest, nine years ago it really had hurt a good deal!

That night in the darkness of her stateroom Vittoria drew out that foolish little ring from its secret hiding place and cried a bit over it. She wasn't so very far removed from the girl of seventeen after all.

Five weeks had gone by and Kent Harding was still waiting for his answer from the unfathomable Miss Lane. In the meantime Vittoria's little "box of a home" in Greenwich village had seen a good deal of him, for Vittoria had proved herself such a staunch and sincere little friend that he had elected to make her the confidant of his passion for another woman. Five weeks, and then gradually she had perceived a curious silence on Harding's part—a constant inclination, when Miss Lane was alluded to, to change the topic of conversation.

One night Vittoria had given a small dinner party. Harding, being privileged for the sake of old times, had outstayed the other guests. He seemed a bit abstracted, and it was a long time before he could get his cigar to draw properly. The silence somehow to Vittoria took on a terrifying tension. She strove for some light thing to say. Suddenly Harding looked up from his cigar.

"Vittoria!" he said and put out his hand and touched hers.

"She was gorgeous tonight, gorgeous," observed Vittoria meditatively. "Who? Why, Marion Lane, stupid!"

Harding gazed at her bewilderingly for a second. "Why, yes, I dare say she was," he admitted.

A day or two later Vittoria was reading a newspaper. Her hand trembled slightly as she laid it down. Then, her dimpled chin in her palm, gazing into the firelight, she passed mentally through a panorama of events.

A man had entered so quietly that she only knew of his presence when he came and bent over her chair. Like a child caught in wrongdoing, her first thought was to rid herself of incriminating evidence. In an instant she was on her feet trying to hide the newspaper which announced Miss Lane's engagement to an army officer.

"I have seen it," announced Harding quietly, "and—I still live, you see."

"Oh!" she exclaimed, stepping back with a little start. In a few moments she excused herself to give some orders to her maid. When she returned Harding met her with a solemn but lightened face.

"It wasn't only Marion Lane who found out something in the time we've been waiting," said he. "I've found out something too."

"Don't!" she cried appealingly, and she put up her hand as if to close him out of her sight.

"I found out that it was you I wanted, not Marion or any one else, but you—you as in the long ago. You haven't forgotten, have you, sweetheart?"

The sunflowers and the hollyhocks in the backround were all gold and crimson. Then the mist cleared as reverently he took her hand and drew it from her eyes.

"No, I haven't forgotten," said she simply. And by her tear wet lashes he knew that it was so.

"I am going to talk to you a little while, children," said the elderly gentleman with the benignant countenance who was addressing the Sunday school, "about the wonders of the starry firmament. Every one of you should be able to name the constellations that glitter in the sky. You should know by sight every planet, of course, but you should also know the name of every fixed star of prominence.

"Go out of doors some calm, clear winter evening and see Orion rising in his majesty, the most magnificent constellation in the heavens. Not far away you will see the beautiful star Aldebaran, of the first magnitude, which— By the way, I wonder if any of you can tell me how that mysterious name, Aldebaran, originated."

"One boy knows," said the visitor, with a gratified smile. "Well, my son?"

"It was named after one of the horses that run in Ben-Hur's chariot race!" said the little fellow.—Youth's Companion.

Broke Out All Over Her Face.

Pimples are caused, almost entirely, by bad blood, and there is only one way to get rid of them, and that is to get at the seat of the trouble by using a good reliable blood purifying medicine.

Burdock Blood Bitters has been on the market for 35 years, and is one of the very best blood medicines procurable. After using it you will find that the pimples have disappeared, and you will have a beautiful clear complexion.

Mrs. Robert McNab, Badjeros, Ont., writes:—"I am greatly pleased to report the benefit I have derived from the use of Burdock Blood Bitters. About a year ago I became so weak and run down I could scarcely walk, and pimples broke out all over my face. I tried one thing after another, but nothing seemed to do me any good. I was advised by a lady friend to try B.B.B., and before I had used one bottle I felt it was doing me good so I used three bottles, and I am now well and strong, and the pimples have all disappeared."

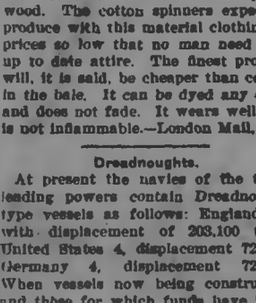
ENGLAND WANTS THEM

Preaching the Gospel of GIN PILLS in the Old Country

Canada's wheat fields are not the only things that are making our country talked about. A well known citizen of North Toronto has set the people of England talking about GIN PILLS, the great Canadian Kidney Cure. The old country has nothing like GIN PILLS and the missionary work done by Mr. and Mrs. Simpson is bearing fruit in the great demand which sufferers from Kidney Trouble are making for our own GIN PILLS.



DAVISVILLE, NORTH TORONTO.

"I have great pleasure in writing and recommending GIN PILLS. We have used them for the last two years and they have never failed us. We took GIN PILLS to the old country some time ago and gave some to relatives and friends and they have asked us to find out where they can buy GIN PILLS over there. Everyone was pleased with the pills and said that only two pills were needed to give relief. Will you let me know if you have any agents in England? I had a few pills left on my way back here and we gave them to a woman on board ship and she was much pleased with them. If I can be of any help to those suffering from Kidney Trouble in spreading this wonderful remedy—GIN PILLS—I am only too willing to offer my services."

GIN PILLS are only mildly laxative. For Chronic Constipation, Bilious Attacks and Sick Headaches, something more active is required. If you feel the need of a gentle yet effective laxative and liver tonic, take NATIONAL LAZY LIVER PILLS. They are highly recommended and guaranteed by the largest wholesale drug house in the British Empire. 25c. a box. 70

Wooden Waistcoats.

Cotton spinners are claiming that the wooden waistcoat will soon be one of the articles of modern attire. Bleached cotton is known to be very nearly pure cellulose. Working, therefore, from this basis, scientists have discovered a method of making a thread from cellulose extracted from spruce wood. The cotton spinners expect to produce with this material clothing at prices so low that no man need lack up to date attire. The finest product will, it is said, be cheaper than cotton in the bale. It can be dyed any color and does not fade. It wears well and is not inflammable.—London Mail.

Dreadnoughts.

At present the navies of the three leading powers contain Dreadnought type vessels as follows: England 11, with displacement of 203,100 tons; United States 4, displacement 72,000; Germany 4, displacement 72,000. When vessels now being constructed and those for which funds have been provided are completed the Dreadnought strength of the three countries will be: England 27, with displacement of 558,000 tons; Germany 17, displacement 357,000; United States 10, displacement 221,650.

Austria's Naval Plan.

As Austria has but a single seaport of consequence, the Austro-Hungarian empire has never been seriously considered as a naval force to be reckoned with. The Austrian government, however, seems determined that for the future the empire will play a more important part in naval matters. Two Dreadnought battleships are already under construction, and five more are to be commenced the next year or two. In addition, Austria has in commission six other modern battleships, so that within a few years she will have thirteen battleships, in addition to several modern armored cruisers in service.—Exchange.

JACK and JILL in FAIRYLAND

1—When Jack and Jill went up the hill, who should they find there but
The man who was all tattered and torn,
Who kissed the maiden all forlorn
Who'd milked the cow with the crumpled horn.
"Say," said Jill, "I'll tell you what we'll do. We'll use him to frighten anyone who's got anything to eat. Then we'll get some goodies."

2—Then who should they meet but Miss Muffett. Then the tattered and torn made a face and she just let out a scream and ran.
Then little Jack and Jill, too, they Simply took her curds and whey.

3—Then they came to little Jack Horner, ready to start on his pie. Well, the tattered man pulled a face again and off went Jack Horner—and left his pie behind. Jill got that

4—Then they came to the Queen of Hearts, making tarts. Then the man pulled a face and she ran, too.
"That's fine," said Jack and Jill with glee.
"We'll eat every tart she has baked, tee-hee!"

5—"But hold on," said the man all tattered and torn,
"These aren't for you, as sure as you're born.
I'll give 'em all to the maid forlorn
Who milked the cow with the crumpled horn."
Then he took the pie, and the curds, and the whey, and the tarts and everything.

6—But that wasn't all. Little Jack Horner's mother came along then and spanked Jack and Jill. And Little Miss Muffett's papa waited till he could start in. And the King of Hearts, too. Everybody was down on Jack and Jill.
Oh, say—that was the day Things didn't quite, quite come their way.

WRITING A BOOK WITH ANOTHER MAN'S BRAINS

HOW Mr. Aquila Kempster, a Nervous Wreck, "Came Back" Through the Mental Ministrations of a Physician and Dashed Off a Novel.

AQUILA KEMPSTER

NOW we have a novel dealing with the existence of the subconscious mind, and actually the work of a subconscious mind inspired and directed by another brain.

A well known literary man and artist, with energy sapped, ambition dissipated and initiative destroyed, broken in health and wishing only to done away, satisfied that the future as well as the past was behind him, fell under the care of an equally well known physician. Under the treatment of this doctor the writer became inspired to work. When he began treatment by the physician he could scarcely walk. He weighed exactly 120 pounds. He began work on the novel in five days. He finished it in two months. He then weighed 175 pounds.

During this treatment ambition was given to him by suggestion. Inspiration came to him in a semi-conscious condition. In the language of the writer, the physician "suggested to my unconscious mind that it was able to supply all the ideas I needed and directed it so to supply them the moment I sat down to write."

Thus the work proceeded. Call the state in which the author was hypnotic, mesmeric or subconscious, the fact remains that the word of the author and the word of the doctor unite in the statement that the book was the joint outcome of the two. Yet there never was a time when the mind of the writer did not act according to his own judgment "and was perfectly free to accept or repudiate any suggestions the doctor made."

No, this is not the novel that is being described. It is the manner in which the novel was written. For the book is now finished. It deals, appropriately enough, with this very problem of the ability of the subconscious mind to be restored to virile activity through hypnotic suggestion and presents one of the most interesting phases of this great question in attractive and stirring narrative.

The book is called "The Cup of Trembling" and deals with a man of courage who became a coward and then became a man of courage again.

The author—that is, the man whose pen put the story on paper—is Aquila Kempster. He was born in Shropshire, England, in 1874. He was educated in private and public schools at Stone and Shrewsbury, England, and at Sir Jamsetjee Jijibhoy College, at Bombay. He lived seven years in India and had an art education at Liverpool, England; San Francisco and New York. He wrote three novels—"The Way of the Gods," Quayle & Warner, 1901; "The Mark," Doubleday, Page & Co., 1903, and "Salvage," D. Appleton, 1906. These books were also published in England, Australia and Canada. His residence has been in Washington, D. C., this winter, but his home is No. 152 West Eighty-ninth street, New York.

The other author that is, the physician who brought Mr. Kempster back from the land of failure and whose inspiration and suggestion of ideas have resulted in the writing of the book—is Dr. W. L. Robins, of Washington, D. C., a well known practising physician and a psychopathic expert, himself a writer of no mean ability.

Connected with the whole matter is the rather practical question, "Can a man come back?" This is answered by Mr. Kempster definitely and in a way that should encourage the most hopeless. Mr. Kempster has been visiting in Washington since the middle of last October and during that time has been under the daily treatment of Dr. Robins. As the case has aroused considerable interest in both medical and lay circles, Dr. Robins was questioned about it by our correspondent, but declined to be interviewed for publication.

"Go and see Kempster," he said. "He was a newspaper man once, and if he wants to talk, all right."

"Why certainly," he answered after we were seated. "I'll tell you anything you wish to know about the case. Of course, Robins couldn't talk; it would be too much like throwing bouquets at himself if he told the truth, for he's certainly made a pretty good job of me." He stood up suddenly and, "Say, old man," he said, "how much do you think I weigh?"

"About a hundred and seventy-five, I should think," I answered after sizing him up.

"Not quite; just a trifle under a hundred and seventy. But last summer I weighed exactly a hundred and twenty and I'm over six feet."

"Pretty good gain," I remarked.

"Yes, and that's not the best of it. But there; I'd better tell you the whole story and then you can fire all the questions you want afterward. Only get it right, because I believe there are thousands of people just about in the case I was who could get help of in the same way if they only knew its possibilities."

Then he seated himself on the table and told his story, while I smoked and listened. This is what he said:

Case Baffled Physicians.

"Of course I'm a neurotic, and about seven years ago I began to steadily degenerate into a hereasthene and life became a decidedly formidable matter. From a natural optimist I soon developed into the worst type of a nervous irritable crank. Neuritis set in after an operation for appendicitis and in about a year I was practically crippled by it. You can probably imagine it if you're acquainted with the ways of degenerate nerves.

"But what's the good? This isn't intended to harrow your readers, so I'll just say that I was pretty far gone. I couldn't write, I couldn't draw, ideas wouldn't come. Everything I touched I failed over—spoiled. Instead of resting, which neurasthenics hardly ever do, I tried to forget myself in an orgy of fruitless work and so exhausted my brain with the strain that there seemed every chance of my ending in an insane asylum. I went to doctor after doctor, splendid men, fine, scientific men, who gave me the best treatment that professional skill could devise. I joined a gymnasium, did everything, in fact, that seemed to promise possible help; but I grew steadily worse, till I found the first symptoms of paralysis settling in.

"I don't care to go into details; they're not wise, and I'm a well man and an optimist again now and have very little use for those memories save as they only show some helpless one that there is always a chance. One detail, however, is necessary.

"While in this State I was obliged to have a major operation for throat tumor. The late Dr. McCosh, of New York, diagnosed the trouble and told me that an operation within ten days was necessary or I would not require it at all. Interesting for a half crazy neurasthenic, eh?"

"Dr. McCosh declined to operate himself and sent me to Dr. Blake. I came out of the Roosevelt Hospital a month later the worst looking wreck you'd care to imagine. My chance of final recovery seemed slimmer than ever then and finally I got away to the quiet of a psychopathic sanitarium, where I lay in a hammock in the sun day after day waiting for whatever might come.

"Now comes the real point of the story: You see, I have a long line of professional religionists behind me, and I presume this ancestry has made me temperamentally interested in psychic matters. Many of the possibilities of suggestion I had studied during my years as a medical student in a Bombay college, and later I had used autosuggestion more or less successfully in my daily life and work. Now, as I lay in that hammock day after day my thoughts turned naturally to the ideal, the spiritual, as a relief from the troubles of my worn out body. And finally out of this mental attitude an idea grew. I knew something about the psychic possibilities of fasting as practised in the Orient and I determined to test the power of the psychic, subconscious side of me definitely once for all.

"So, despite my wretched physical condition I fasted absolutely for fourteen days and during the fast kept my thoughts as much as possible away from all material things and set my mind quietly but firmly in the desire for right guidance in my immediate present and, if there were to be one, my future. As I lay there I gradually began to realize great peace and calmness, my body seemed to be the power of troubling me till I tried to walk, when it objected strenuously. After the first ten days I had no desire whatever for food and was really in no pain. In fact, after the first unpleasant weeks I seemed to have drifted into something resembling a state of general well being. About my bodily condition—no worry—no fear.

"I had come to a point where I was practically without desire of any kind, neither life nor death concerned me much, so much so that I might just continue to be still in the sun. But gradually a quiet confidence grew in me that a way would be shown to me by and by.

"It was while I was in some such condition, drifting quietly in a sea of negative thought, that Dr. Robins—a visit to whom, by the way, he had sent to the sanitarium, discovered and interested himself in my case. Then gradually he waked me up; berated me severely for the egregious folly of the past in my already weakened condition. Finally, after I had left the sanitarium and returned to New York, I consulted him during some friendly correspondence about my health. This resulted in an invitation to spend the winter in Washington, to put my health and work in his hands, he promising to build up the one and inspire the other.

"So I came here as soon as I could crawl, though I was still so weak I thought I would collapse during the journey. Now, as you may observe for yourself, Dr. Robins has kept his promise, not only regarding the building up of my health but regarding the inspiring of my work, for I started and finished a novel, 'The Cup of Trembling,' during the first two months I was here."

"Two months!—that was quick work, wasn't it?"

A Medical Man Himself.

"I took over eight months on 'The Mark,' my longest novel, but I think my average time before has been between five and six months. You see, I was simply unable to loaf while writing this last one; it kept demanding expression night and day, and I couldn't rest till I'd got it out of my system."

"May I ask some questions now?" I inquired as he stopped.

"Go right ahead," he answered as he pushed the cigar tray toward me.

"Did I understand that you are or were a medical doctor?"

"Yes; I was in the medical department of the Indian army."

"Ah, an Englishman, of course?"

"Yes; though I have an American wife and my small son considers he has an inalienable right to blow the roof off the universe every Fourth of July."

"Well, what I was going to ask was about that fast. Would you advise such a radical course?"

"Certainly not!" he broke in hastily. "I realize now that it was a most foolhardy thing to do—that is, from a physical standpoint."

"You mean that from what you call a psychic point of view it wouldn't be foolhardy?"

"Yes, that's an entirely different matter. From that standpoint I consider it was a fine success, for I got what I asked for—inspiration regarding my future course. Personally I should never hesitate about fasting again, but I wouldn't advise it for any one else except under expert advice and guidance. Under those conditions I consider it to be one of the finest disciplines in the world. There was a rather interesting point about that fast of mine. After it was over I found that my tastes in many ways, and my habits in still more, had changed. I used to drink temperately and to smoke quite a good deal. I can't do either with any real pleasure now. Other similar habits that I had tried and failed to overcome smartly seemed to fall away of their own accord. I didn't have any further interest in them."

"How do you explain that?"

"I believe that in those long days of mental and physical relaxation my higher psychic self gained control of my whole organism and discarded all those habits of the senses that offended it."

I whistled softly and Mr. Kempster laughed.

"Pretty hard to swallow, eh?" he asked. "Well, I confess I was surprised myself the first time I took a drink of whiskey and lighted a cigar. I sniffed at the whiffs of the cigar and tried to imagine I enjoyed it, but I didn't, and I tried in vain. The whiskey simply made me feel stupid without exhilarating me at all.

Then at my request Mr. Kempster went on to describe the treatments given by Dr. Robins that appear to have worked such wonders.

"First," he said, "you must remember that I was absolutely in sympathy with the doctor's methods. I have, as I said, studied and used suggestion, both with others and myself, though in my then weak and condition I was not able to suggest strongly enough to build up my own physical organism. So I gladly accepted the doctor's help. Now the daily process is as follows:—

"I go into a darkened treatment room off Dr. Robins' office, lie upon a couch, close my eyes, and as quietly and as perfectly as possible relax my whole body. For the first ten or fifteen minutes while doing so there are soft selections from a musical cabinet vibrating in the room. Dr. Robins sits at the head of the couch and at first helps the relaxation by pressure on my limbs and hands, telling me at the same time to relax and—mind you, this is important—to keep my mind on the music and not on what he is saying."

"What is that for?"

"Why, you see, he speaks to my subconscious mind and he desires to keep my ordinary conscious mind engaged with the music so that it will leave the subconscious open to the impressions he desires to make. Then after I am relaxed into a quiescent state bordering on sleep he begins to drone out monotonous suggestions about, first, my health, going into all kinds of physiological details and, later, about my literary work. These suggestions are repeated so monotonously that I usually go to sleep before the music ceases. In fact, most days I take several naps, waking to catch the drone of his voice talking about my digestion, my liver action or something equally interesting, on which I promptly go to sleep again. The length of these treatments varies from two full hours to one-half hour, they gradually growing shorter, as, day by day, my physical health re in which the subconscious mind is peculiarly susceptible to suggestion. But there was never an instant during the last three months' treatment, save when I was normally asleep, that my own judgment did not control the situation and was not perfectly free to accept or repudiate any suggestion the doctor made. In fact, on several occasions I did question the suggestion, and later argued the matter out in a friendly spirit with the doctor. No, there has been no mental coercion whatever, only an intelligent co-operation."

"But this particular idea of suggestion isn't new, any way, is it, Mr. Kempster?" I hazarded.

"New? Oh, dear, no! Imagination and suggestion, acting and reacting on each other, have been the creators, the miracle workers of all ages. They are the basis of all faith healing, Christian and mental sciences, new thought, the explanation of all the Bible miracles, and, in fact, the cause of all evolutionary progress, only the modus operandi has hitherto been so hidden, misunderstood and involved in symbolism and mystery that simple practical demonstrations and intelligent explanations have been rare and appear as something startling and new."

"And this book, 'The Cup of Trembling,' is intended to put these things on a clear, practical basis, as I understand you?"

"Yes. Though, unfortunately, in such a novel, addressed to a general public, the author is naturally limited, and the best that can be hoped for is to incite interest, perhaps inquiry, into a subject vitally important to the race. For I know that suggestion is the key to all health, happiness and progress, and it remains for us to decide whether we shall be controlled by it blindly as heretofore or shall ourselves understand and control it to our own betterment."

"And am I right in inferring that you and Dr. Robins are opposed to giving drugs?"

"Not at all; please don't make that mistake. Drugs have served in the past and are still serving a most necessary and helpful purpose in the scheme of life, and the average doctors I regard—and so I am sure does Dr. Robins—as among the most advanced benefactors of the race. Speaking for myself I simply believe that this old-new remedy, suggestion, is at present more potent in a number of diseases, principally those of the nervous system, than drugs. Also I believe that in time, as the race grows more sensitive, it will take the place of drugs entirely, while as an educational factor it is at present, when rightly directed, a power hardly possible of overestimation."

"If all this is so, Mr. Kempster, how do you explain the fact that so many of the medical doctors whom you recognize as intelligent professional men repudiate suggestion in the issue between it and drugs?"

"Well, of course, evolution is slow; their patients demand drugs; drugs themselves are intensely suggestive to the ordinary patient, and, besides, drugs do undoubtedly produce effects, and to the extent that they do they justify their use. But you remember, surely, how loath the allopaths were to admit the existence of any good in homeopathy. Yet I think to-day the most intelligent physicians of both schools are using either principle according to the exigencies of the case. So you may be sure suggestion will also grow in favor as it is better understood and its supposed limitations are steadily extended. There should surely be no quarrel between the medical doctor and the metaphysician; their work rather should be most harmoniously complementary."

Plot of the Story.

Now as to the novel, "The Cup of Trembling." Here is the outline of the plot at a glance:—

Geoffrey Lorain, himself a writer of books, made courage the keynote of his work. His heroes were real, fearing nothing, and he himself was the apotheosis of all that was brave and strong. Yet a curious thing happened. Just a short distance from the float at the yacht club a boat overturned and two little children went overboard. Lorain, despite the fact that he was the best swimmer in the club, stood paralyzed. Others went to the rescue, while he, seemingly dazed, walked into the club house. From that day Geoffrey Lorain was a changed man. Upon this incident pivots the story.

It is in the regeneration of the man whose unexpected and unexplained cowardice had changed his whole being, transforming an athlete into a physical and mental wreck, that the authors have found the motif for their work. No man can awake to the fact that he is ostracized and an outcast without having his mentality affected. It was when Lorain was sinking into the lowest depths that his case was brought to the attention of Dr. Chevereaux, a New York physician, who believed and knew that there were ways of ministering to a mind diseased beyond the mere prescription of soothing drugs. He treated mind with mind. His methods brought him money and fame, although there were a few who affected to despise his theories, even while they admitted his success. Dr. Chevereaux took Lorain in hand and with psychopathic treatment gradually removed his obsession and made him view himself and the world with clear vision.

Of course the novel is a love story. While he is in the depths of his despair Lorain meets a dancer, "La Silene," who patiently and lovingly aids him to become himself. In his gratitude he engages himself to marry her, but in the meantime he sees a photograph which haunts him. He finds the picture reproduced in a newspaper and he carries it around with him, finding in it an inspiration. It [illegible] hold of his subconscious mind and in the [illegible] of the night he hears a voice which breathes to him encouragement and love.

At last there comes to him an opportunity to show his courage. There is a runaway and at the risk of his life in crowded Broadway he stops the frightened horse. The woman he saves is the woman of the pictures—a girl friend of his early youth. She, too, has been subtly attracted to him during all the months of his regeneration and to her has come the messages which Lorain's mind had sent out into the unknown.

The reincarnation of the actress and the blending of the harmonious souls mark the conclusion of the story. Incidentally there is much in the book concerning the development of the subconscious mind, with interesting bits of conversation concerning the things which the psychologists have discovered regarding the human mind.

NESTOR OF JOURNALISM.

Robert Murray, LL.D., for fifty-five years editor of The Presbyterian Witness, for length of time and for excellence of service, perhaps without parallel, passed from his home at Studley, Halifax, N.S., to his larger inheritance in the spiritual realm.

Dr. Murray possessed many gifts and all of a high order. During his entire practical life, he found employment for these varied talents, first in the editorial department of a religious journal, and outside of this just as continuously and efficiently in general labors, benevolent and religious. He took an active and appreciative interest in education from the primary school to the university.

The system of free schools and the higher education of Nova Scotia, for more than half a century, had in the editor of The Presbyterian Witness a most intelligent, constant and effective helper.

Confederation, of contemporaneous birth with the system of free schools, like that great undertaking, was from the first, clear to the penetrating vision of Dr. Murray.

His eye was even upon the civic interests of Halifax, moral and otherwise, upon the political character of the Dominion, upon its leaders and guides. He avoided the spirit and work of the partizan, but ever cultivated that of the true patriot and faithful citizen. Wherever he saw truth and worth, he praised them, irrespective of names or parties. Otherwise, his pen gave a note of warning and remonstrance.

The great temperance reform has had for the past half century in Dr. Murray, a moderate, firm helper. He never failed to cheer the professional and unprofessional workers in their heavy and praise-worthy labors. In the last half century, no false note on this subject ever sounded out from The Presbyterian Witness. In the editorial column, Dr. Murray's eye was always on the horizon, helping the true and the good, and condemning, with righteous displeasure all that he saw menacing the best interests of his fellow men.

Dr. Murray's reading was carefully selected and of a wide range. Labors, urgent, inside and outside of the editorial sphere, were ever on his hands; but he never hurried. He seemed to have time for everything. Certain it is, that he found time for reading many magazines, many newspapers and many books. For him, ecclesiastical history, biography, philosophy and theology had special attractions. He knew well the history of his own church and the men who had adorned it. But his study was not confined to the history of the Presbyterian body. To him it was only one of a number of ecclesiastical forces, operating in christian and heathen lands. The union of the Methodists with the Presbyterians, now at a forward and hopeful stage, was first seen and advocated by the editor of The Presbyterian Witness.

Dr. Murray was taken suddenly ill, the attack being immediately diagnosed as of pneumonia. In view of his advanced age, seventy-nine years, slight hope of his recovery could be held out, but friends were hopeful that the native Scottish strength of his constitution might pull him through. However, it became apparent that he was rapidly failing—that the loosing of the silver cord was very near at hand, and death came at 7 o'clock in the morning.

Born in Earltown, Colchester, the son of Alexander Murray, a Scotsman, Robert Murray possessed in large measure the typical Scottish strength of character—an "infusion" which has contributed to Nova Scotia's fame as a mother of able men.

He took his theological course in the old Free Church College, Truro, but was not ordained, taking, at the close of his college course, the position of editor of The Presbyterian Witness, holding it for a life-time as has been stated.

On Dec. 28, 1905, he celebrated his golden jubilee as editor of The Presbyterian Witness, and the occasion gave the community, as a whole, an opportunity which it eagerly embraced to express its recognition of him as a moving force for whatever was good.

The synod, the Evangelical Alliance of Halifax, and the Nova Scotia press, paid their tribute, and there were presentations of gold and other gifts.

BURNING COAL.

The writer has tried most of the schemes to keep coal from burning. Experience has convinced him that the only way to get out of coal the heat units that are in it is to burn it. It's cold coal when you keep them in.

An old engineer showed the writer more about burning coal to get the most possible heat out of it than ever was dreamed of by those who think up schemes not to burn it. His rule was burn it, but don't burn it without getting heat. Pile dead coal two feet deep on the live coals in the bottom of the furnace and for two hours, while the flame is burning through, your furnace is a refrigerator and your house a cold storage plant. Then, when the flame has eaten its way through to enable the mass to send up some heat, most of your coal is gone and the heat it contained has flown up in gas and smoke through the chimney. The family is frozen stiff.

A locomotive fireman watches his live coals with a jealous eye. When he sees the fiery red of them in any spot turning grayish he showers that spot lightly with coal; the coals there and all around it burn the fresh shovelfuls into instant flame and then fierce coals—all heat. Never does he smother his grate bars and live coals with a thick blanket of dead coal. If he did the locomotive would stop making steam and the train would stand still. Keep your furnace fire going by burning coal, but burning it as it is burned in the locomotive, a little at a time, where it is needed to continue the constant supply of live, red, heat giving coals.—New York Press.

An Old Maine Blockhouse.

One of the historic landmarks of the town of Freeport is the old blockhouse on Torrey's hill. This blockhouse was built by William Bartoll about 165 years ago to defend himself against the Indians. The blockhouse was built from masts cut from Freeport pines and rejected by the English government as not good enough for use. The corner posts are large oak posts with grooves cut in them, and the logs have tongues that fit into the grooves to hold them in place. In these logs may be seen the holes through which one could shoot or watch for the Indians. The house is located on a high hill and gives a fine view of the surrounding country and the river toward South Freeport. No one has lived in it for more than thirty years, and it is just beginning to decay.—Kennebec Journal.

Modernizing Jerusalem.

David Yellin, a member of the municipality of Jerusalem, says that the authorities in the Holy City are considering the provision of an adequate water supply and the installation of a modern system of drainage. People in Jerusalem are beginning to realise that a greater influx of tourists, on whom the inhabitants principally depend for their livelihood, can only be expected if things are made comfortable for them by the provision of proper accommodation, the lighting and paving of the streets, the freeing of the city from dust and improvement of travel facilities.

The King of Hemlocks.

The largest hemlock tree in the world so far as is known stands on the bank of McCoy creek in Lewis county, Wash., and as it is included in the Rainier national forest it may add centuries to the several hundred years which it has been growing. The tree, which measures twenty-three feet in circumference and seven and one-third feet in diameter, has a clean stem to the first branch 100 feet from the base and is perfect in every way. The king of hemlocks stands among others of its species four, five and six feet in diameter and lifts its crown 250 feet into the air.

Other Tolstoys.

William Penn labored in much the same direction as Tolstoy. His personality was less striking, his intellectual gifts less powerful, but he had a more practical mind. He founded his society, and he made a mark on the world which is still visible. With a doctrinal message infinitely less attractive, but a still greater capacity for organization and "missionary" work, General Booth has influenced his contemporaries more effectively than either of them, and in some form or other his work may possibly last for some generations.—London Truth.

His Golf Shoes.

"I am always careful to call things by their right names," remarked a business man to his friend at the club, "and I pride myself on never calling a window shade a blind or an extension telephone a branch. But I got a new one on me today when I took my buckskin golf shoes to be repaired. I told the clerk I wanted new soles and heels and asked how soon I could have them.

"The salesman picked them up and looked them over. 'New golf bottoms,' said he. 'Not before Friday.'"—New York Sun.

The Pump in Winter.

Thawing out the pump is a winter pastime you will not need to indulge in if you will drive a couple of tacks under the check and plunger valve, leaving the heads so that they project about one-eighth of an inch. This will raise the valve enough to let the water run out after the pump is used, so that no water will remain to freeze, and still the pump will do the required work, although it will, of course, take a little longer time to start the water each time the pump is used.—Country Life in America.

NIGHTINGALE COLONY.

Canadian Pacific Railway's Big Reserve for British Settlers Only.

Five thousand Canadians have crossed the Atlantic to spend Christmas in Great Britain. Among these is Mr. J. S. Dennis, of Calgary, Alberta, a Canadian by birth, but of Irish extraction, who occupies a remarkable position in Western Canada, since he is in charge of an estate almost as large as Wales. This estate is in the provinces of Alberta and British Columbia, and is owned by the Canadian Pacific Railway, which, in addition to being a railway, is also the largest landowner in the British Empire.

In one of the corners of Mr. Dennis's estate is a block of land, three million acres in size, on which an irrigation system is being constructed containing three thousand miles of canals. A new town comes into existence on this estate every third day. But what interests Mr. Dennis most of all at present is the ready-made farm scheme, which Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, the president of the railway, has inaugurated for the benefit of British settlers in Western Canada. Until this scheme was introduced the settler on the western prairies had to live in a tent and suffer many inconveniences till his house was built.

Quite half of his first year was wasted in preparing his farm for occupation. But now the railway is preparing ready-made farms, with house and barn built, with the fences made, the well dug, and the ground ready broken up and seeded. Two parties of settlers under this scheme will leave for Canada next March, and others will follow later. Mr. Dennis will make the final selection of the applicants for these farms, and will make arrangements for a very much larger number in the following year.

The Canadian Pacific Railway is spending $5,000,000 upon this scheme to start with, and if it proves successful will spend many millions more. It is reserved at present for British settlers only, and these settlers must be married men with a capital of $1,000 upwards. The farms are paid for in ten yearly instalments, and if through no fault of the farmers the crop is a poor one the payment for that year is remitted.

The first colony under this scheme was settled last spring, and has proved a great success. It is called Nightingale, after the late Florence Nightingale.—News of the World.

His Mighty Voice.

Many cases are still a standstill in the courts because the Macedonian call of the British Unionists came to Mr. George Tate Blackstock to hurry heroes and help them. During the past couple of years, Mr. Blackstock has been one of the most conspicuous figures at the Ontario Bar, and he has taken part in most of the really important cases. Once seen in court, he is not readily forgotten. His lean body, his long tapering fingers, and the way in which he wears his hair combine to make him look more like an artist than a lawyer. He possesses a naturally deep bass voice, which he rolls with thunderous effect, and in the old days it was a very amusing contrast to hear him arguing against the light treble of the late Christopher Robinson.

Now the average newsboy has a complete knowledge of "Who's Who" on the streets of Toronto, and he generally knows something about the various men of note. One lad who does business near the corner of King and Yonge streets demonstrated a short time ago for the benefit of several passers-by that he had heard Mr. Blackstock in court. It was just at the hour when the boys are almost wrecking their voices to call attention to the evening editions, and the lawyer strolled by. The lad watched him with envious eyes and remarked to a business rival, "Look at that guy. Well, I bet yer he would have everybody in this city skinned a mile if it came to a hair-cut."

Stumbling Schoolboy.

A Toronto printing foreman tells of an experience he had with a schoolboy, which will make interesting reading for the business men who often complain that the city public schools turn boys out with much less education along practical lines than should be expected.

When this foreman was a proof-reader, one of the people who held copy and read for him was a lad of about sixteen years. The boy stumbled over such words as "necessary" and "massacre," and, on being questioned, said that he had reached the senior fourth book in a certain Toronto school.

"It can't be a very good school, is it?" asked the proof-reader.

"Good school?" repeated the boy enthusiastically. "Say, last year we won the junior football championship, and our girls' basketball team won the championship in their series."

Where Is the Potash?

TWO ACTORS OF DISTINCTION.

Torontonians In Red-Tape Play Seemed Rather Nervous.

Two well-known Torontonians whose talent for acting has been allowed to lie dormant all their lives made their debuts a few days ago. Mr. Lawrence Solman, the manager of the Toronto Ferry Co., will always be able to say that they appeared in the original production of Rupert Hughes' farce, "Excuse Me." It was given a reading here in order that the owners might copyright it in England, as the law requires a red-tape performance, and the stage manager had a very varied array of talent at his disposal.

Mr. Garwood appeared very much at home in the role of a clergyman, who was trying to disguise while on a holiday, so that no one would recognise his profession. Mr. Solman had the part of an Easterner who was crossing the continent in order to be married, and it appeared to make him very nervous. The nervousness may have been assumed to fit the part; it may have resulted from an effort to keep track of his lines and also occasionally answer the 'phone in the grant office, but a casual observer would have said that Lol Solman had stage fright.

The audience was very small and select, and the way in which they applauded seemed to disconcert some of the less experienced actors, though the members of the professional company did not mind. Half way through the second act, a large section of the audience interrupted. His remarks did not suggest perfect satisfaction, but he may have been over-critical. "I may not have paid anything to get in," he said, "but just the same I think I have a right to demand a rain check."

He Looks Good.

Arthur Gilbert, the Athabaska farmer, who was the corpse upon which the naval post-mortem was held, and the man solely responsible for all the trouble, was promptly sent to Coventry, when he made his appearance in the House, but judging by the looks of the agriculturist from Sir Wilfrid's home riding, he is not the kind of chap to let a little thing like that worry him. He stands six feet high, sports a heavy black moustache and a Prince Albert coat, and has the appearance of being well able to take care of himself. And by a strange turn of the wheel of political fortune, the very first vote he cast in Parliament was with Sir Wilfrid Laurier, and his followers, against the amendment of Mr. Borden, calling for the submission of the Government's naval policy for the endorsations of the people. And to show the fickleness of politicians, when the new man with the soil of his Athabaska farm hardly off his boots, rose to register his first vote the roar of cheers from the right caused a blush to flood the visage of him who met the foe on the battle ground of his own choosing and laid him low. Those cheers sounded strangely, especially as a few moments later a chorus of jeers was substituted, when Mr. Gilbert voted for the Monk amendment this time with Mr. Borden. But those who would take the same Mr. Gilbert for a political dullard are apt to be fooled ere long. He has the look of a man who knows his own mind. His maiden speech was modest and unassuming, and even hide-bound party men paid him a little tribute after it was over. Gilbert may be anti-navy, the campaign which gave him a seat in Parliament may have been anti-British, but unless all signs prove misleading, the same Gilbert's career will be worth watching. He looks all right.—Saturday Night.

Bearded the Governor.

Capt. Dan Macauley, a Newfoundlander engaged many years in sealing, had an adventure at the Commanderofski seal rookeries some years ago, which was as daring as it was cheeky. It was a dull April morning when his schooner Beatrice—she afterwards became the Duchess of Bedford when used by the Mikkelsen Arctic expedition and was wrecked in the Arctic—anchored off the seal rookeries and the Russian guard of the governor and ten men did not see the sealer in the fog.

There were twenty-four men on the sealing schooner and fifteen of them landed with rifles and went direct to the little fort near the seal rookery. Capt. Macauley went in to see the governor of the island, and presented his compliments. He told the Russian that he had come to raid the sealing ground. He informed the governor that ten men were no good to drive out his twenty-four men, and they might as well look at the matter in a proper light.

He had brought some whisky ashore anyhow, in the hope that the governor might accept his hospitality. The Russian sat down at one side of the table, the sealer at the other, while his crew was engaged on the sealing grounds clubbing and skinning the valuable fur bearers. For several days Capt. Macauley remained on the rookery loading his schooner with pelts. Then he sailed away.

Opening for Boy Scouts.

Why not have the Boy Scouts' idea on the farm? Instead of the poles, they could carry hoes or hay forks, according to the season, and among their duties would be: Hunting for concealed eggs in the barn and barnyard; breaking up encampments of Canada thistles and other agricultural enemies; apprehending stray detachments of chickens; doing entrenchment work along rows of potatoes and around corn hills, and stalking and bringing home cows.—Canadian Courier.

FISTICUFFS IN HOUSE.

When Members of British Commons Have Fought.

Vigorous hand-to-hand struggles are uncommon at St. Stephen's, but they are not by any means unknown. As a matter of fact, fights have taken place at the House of Commons ever since the time of Cromwell, when his soldiers had to clear the House at the point of the bayonet to prevent bloodshed and wholesale destruction.

Perhaps the most remarkable scene of this description within modern times happened on July 27th, 1863. Mr. Chamberlain was speaking against the late Mr. Gladstone, and at ten o'clock, when the closure fell, someone shouted out "Judas," and this very unparliamentary epithet was reported to the chairman, who, however, declared that the offensive expression had not been heard by him. He ordered the division to be proceeded with, whereupon several members of the Tory party refused to leave their seats. A few seconds later war was declared by a Conservative seizing an Irish member by the coat-collar, and within a short time there was a regular free fight in the House, in which Colonel Saunderson was rendered hors de combat after he had scientifically "floored" one or two of the "enemy." John Burns, it is said, helped to pull the combatants asunder until the arrival of the Speaker put an end to the unseemly proceedings.

Col. Saunderson took part in many disputes at Westminster. He fell out with Mr. William Redmond one day, and it looked as if the pair would settle their differences with blows. The Colonel, it appeared, had commented very strongly on Irish violence, and Mr. Redmond took each and several of the comments as a personal insult, suggesting that the redoubtable colonel should meet him in the lobby after the sitting. The Speaker, becoming aware of this, sent a note to the chief of police at St. Stephen's asking him to take up a position in the lobby and prevent a fight between the hon. members. The expected, however, did not happen, for when Mr. Redmond and the Colonel met in the lobby they calmly talked matters over, and finally wished each other a cheery "Good day."

Some years back, when the House happened to be in committee, the Irish members refused to go into the lobbies for division. The chairman sent for the Speaker, and that gentleman promptly "named" the offenders, and their suspension was moved and carried. The Irishmen refused to budge an inch until a body of police walked into the House. Even then it was as much as the constables could do to "move them on." As a matter of fact, the police and the Irish members had a regular fight before the former conquered and carried the latter bodily out of the House.

During the debate on emancipation in the Commons, Mr. Brougham, afterwards Lord Brougham, turned towards Mr. George Canning and bitterly exclaimed, "You have exhibited the most incredible specimen of monstrous truckling for the purpose of obtaining office that the whole history of political tergiversation could furnish." Canning replied, very quietly, "It is a lie!" A deathly quiet reigned in the House for some minutes, and one could have heard a pin drop. Presently, however, a lively debate took place between the members present, some of whom advised Mr. Brougham to withdraw his remark and apologize, while others requested Mr. Canning to do the same. Finally it was suggested that the couple should be committed to the Sergeant-at-Arms. The necessity for this gentleman's intervention happily did not arise, for the two disputants settled the matter between themselves and peace was once more restored.

Never Too Late to Marry.

A romantic story of the marriage of a couple receiving old-age pensions comes from Birmingham, England. The bride is a widow named Swann, and her groom Charles Wright, a widower. They have been neighbors for years, but the acquaintance which has ripened into a second essay at matrimony only commenced a year ago. Mr. Wright was then 71 and his sweetheart 69. It is a union of many branches. The bride has six children living and 19 grandchildren. Her youngest son, a stalwart soldier of over six feet, gave her away. The bridegroom brings a contribution of eight children, 23 grandchildren, and one great-grandchild.

The Call to Action.

The curtain had just fallen on a really creditable picture of the Death of Nelson, shown to slow music, says The Planet. "Keep your seats, please," said the stage manager. "We're much obliged for your kind applause, ladies and gentlemen, and we're going to give you the Death of Nelson over again." "Oh, are yer," came from a friend of the man who was playing the chief part. "Then, if you'll tell Nelson 'is kitchen chimney's afire, and 'is wife's jest had a couple o' fits, p'raps 'e won't die so blessed lingerin'."

How Crockett Scored.

Amongst popular present-day novelists whose work was condemned in the first place by publishers is Mr. S. R. Crockett, of "Stickit Minister" fame. When he offered his first volume to a Scotch firm it was returned with a polite note assuring him that there was no market for that sort of thing. The letter was marked "No. 496b." In later years when the same publishers asked him for one of his manuscripts he politely requested them to refer to their previous correspondence with him marked "496b."

THE HARDWARE CONVENTION IS OVER R. C. CHOWN IS THE NEW PRESIDENT

SOCIAL LAST NIGHT

The Hardware Convention is over. The Exhibition in the Armouries was closed at noon to-day, and this afternoon the exhibitors are busily engaged in dismantling the booths, and taking away the displays.

The concluding business meeting of the convention was held yesterday afternoon, when the officers for the year were elected and it was decided that the next convention should be held in Guelph.

Last night a most enjoyable social was held in the Assembly Hall of the Collegiate Institute, at which most of the members, travellers and exhibitors were present. The newly-elected president of the Association, Mr. R. C. Chown, was in the chair, and an interesting programme was given, featured by an address on "Price Maintenance," by Mr. P. M. Maxwell of the Iver Johnston Arms Co. of Fitchburg, Mass. Mr. Maxwell proved himself an entertaining, convincing speaker, with a firm grasp of his subject, and the ability to present his ideas clearly and forcibly, and his well-prepared address was followed with close attention by the gathering.

An orchestra, led by Mr. Rupert Gliddon, provided a delightful musical programme, and Mr. Harry M. Bennett of Toronto, the well-known entertainer, was heard to advantage in several numbers that brought down the house. His first number was "If I Hadn't Have Been so Shy" and as an encore he sang the amusing number "For Months and Months." Later in the evening he was heard in a couple of Harry Lauder songs that were capitally rendered. Mr. Jas. Hossack of the Lufkin Rule Company, recited one of Dr. Drummond's songs "Johnnie Courteau" in excellent fashion.

Refreshments were served by Mr. T. H. Hooper, who catered for the occasion in his usual efficient manner.

At the conclusion of the programme Mr. Louis Mendel took a flash-light photograph of the gathering. A feature of the evening was the singing of Convention songs.

At yesterday afternoon's session the report of the nomination committee was adopted unanimously, resulting in the following officers being elected for the incoming year:

President, Mr. R. C. Chown, Belleville; 1st Vice President, M. S. Madole, Napanee; 2nd Vice Presidents, H. Occomore, Guelph; Executive, W. F. McPherson, Prescott; R. H. Blackmore, St. Thomas; Wm. Magladery, New Liskeard; W .W. Bennett, Gananoque; C. W. Conn, Tilsonburg; D. McNab, Orillia; W. Wrigley, Secretary, Toronto; John Caslor, Treasurer, Toronto ;S. M. Burt, and J. W. Peacock, Auditors, Toronto.

Retiring President Cinnamon expressed his pleasure in vacating the chair in favour of President Elect Chown, who was then installed and took charge of the meeting. The latter, who is the youngest President the Association has ever elected asked for the co-operation of all the members. He thought the hardware retailers had not participated in the advance of the country's profit as had the jobbers, manufacturers and agriculturists.

Retiring President Cinnamon moved that Col. McLean, proprietor of "Hardware and Metal" be elected a life honourary member of the Association, seconded by Ald. Occomore, of Guelph and carried unanimously.

It was decided that the convention of 1912 be held in Guelph.

The meeting concluded with a vote of thanks to the retiring President.

THURSDAY'S SESSION

Because of the usual inadequacy Regular business was carried on for a few minutes instead of immediately handing over the meeting to the exhibitors as arranged.

The meeting was then put in charge of the exhibitors, with Mr. Bittuse, managing director in Canada of Gillette Safey Razor Co., wielding the gavel. With appropriate introductory announcement, Mr. F. M. Tobin was introduced as the first speaker, to present the views of practically all the exhibitors.

He expressed the thanks of the manufacturers for an opportunity of meeting so many of them in so short a time. The manufacturers, he said, naturally did not get to know the dealer personally without coming to see them. During the meet, he said, the manufacturers perhaps developed such high pressure that he might want more of the dealers' time. He said a suggestion had been made that the dealers do not give the salesmen the treatment he should get Realizing the many travellers that call on a dealer until he is simply "pestered," the speaker said it is possible to turn down a traveller and yet satisfy him

CARETAKER APPOINTED FOR NEW ISOLATION HOSPITAL

Property Committee Met Last Night---Tenders Open for Insurance Companies---Lighting of Hospital to be on Meter---H. Sowden Gets the Appointment.

The City Property committee met in the committee rooms last night with Ald. Duncan in the chair. Aldermen Brown, Morgan and Duncan were the only members of the committee present.

They met principally to consider a tender from the Peterborough Light and Power Co., for the lighting of the Isolation Hospital. Ald. Morgan moved, seconded by Ald. Brown, that the tender be accepted and that the lights be on meter, also that the Company begin at once and put in the line.—Carried. They thought they could try it on meter for a year, and if they wished to change to flat rate at the end of that time, they could.

Tenders for caretaker were also to hand. One from Mr. and Mrs. Sowden, and one from Mr. and Mrs. Andrews. Ald. Morgan and Ald. Brown were in favour of waiting for a week or two and advertising in the press for tenders. They thought that by doing this they would get in touch with people that might be more suitable, than those already in.

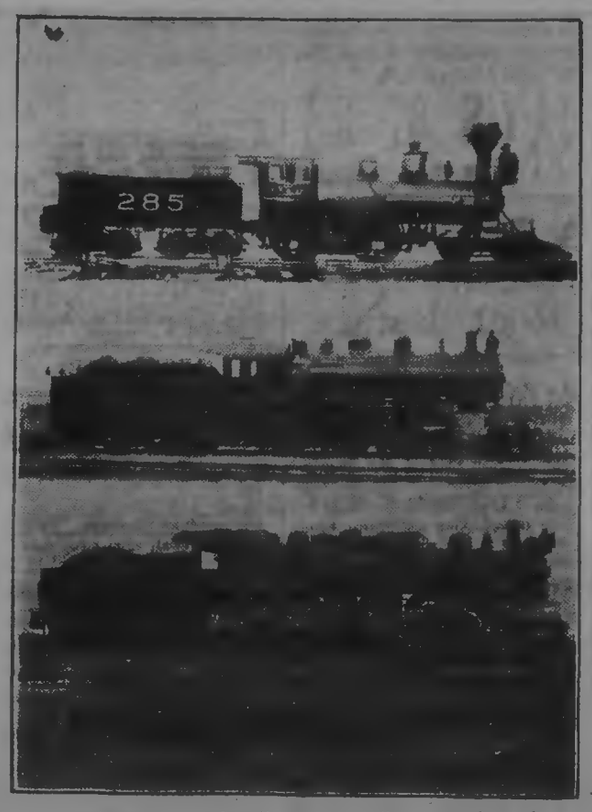
Ald. Duncan objected to the delay, so the present tenders were considered.

Moved by Ald. Brown, seconded by Ald. Morgan, that Mr. Sowden be appointed as caretaker, duties to begin on March the first, at a salary of $400 a year.—Carried. The committee thought that they would appoint Mr. Sowden for a year, and at the end of that time a change could be made if desired.

Ald. Duncan was of the opinion that insurance should be put on the furniture of the Isolation Hospital, as soon as it was put in the building. It was moved and duly seconded that insurance be put on the furniture at the time stated. Tenders are now open for insurance companies.

A communication was received from the Fire Underwriters' Association regarding the re-wiring of the city buildings. The insurance company had put on 15c. extra insurance and it was deemed advisable to take action at once. They, however, left the matter of re-wiring over for future discussion. The defects in the present wiring were read, as found by the inspectors.

DEVELOPMENT OF THE GREATEST RAILWAY SYSTEM IN THE WORLD



The development of the Canadian Pacific Railway can almost be measured by the huge increase in the size and hauling power of its locomotives. The above cut shows three engines that have been used on the C. P.R. lines. The top one is the first engine built by the Company, and at that time was considered a very powerful locomotive. It is now on exhibition in Winnipeg. The second picture shows the engine in general use on the C.P.R., and while it is one of the most powerful of its kind used, it fades into insignificance beside the huge Mallet "Articulated Compound shown in the lower picture. This is the latest production of the Company and is by far the most powerful engine now being operated in Canada. It weighs over 130 tons without the tender and has a hauling capacity of about twice that of the ordinary locomotive.

These engines are being used on the company's Rocky Mountain lines and have been found very serviceable for hauling freights on the heavy western grades.

A LIVE CORNER OF THE HARDWARE DEALERS' CONVENTION

There is something going on all the time around the Gillette Booth in the Armouries these days. This is partly because the Gillette display of razor parts in every stage of manufacture, as well as of finished razors, is more than usually interesting—and partly because the founder of the Gillette business in Canada, Mr. A. A. Bittues, is in charge, assisted by three of his best salesmen.

Mr. Bittues has been one of the prominent figures in the almost phenomenal growth of the Gillette Safety Razor business throughout the world. He established the Gillette factories in Paris, Berlin, and Leicester, Eng., as well as the Canadian factory in Montreal, which he has managed so successfully.

To every member of the Stove & Hardware Dealers' Convention this year he is presenting a unique souvenir which illustrates the bold and original methods of designing which have made the Gillette what it is.

From a handsomely decorated bronze shield project two curved horns, and from them hangs a genuine badger-hair Gillette Shaving Brush. The shield is attached by a soft link to a bar, so that the recipient can wear it as a badge during the Convention. Then, when he goes home, by merely spreading this soft link he can detach the shield and hang it from a tack in his bath-room as a neat, convenient and sanitary brush holder. This, whether he uses a Gillette or not.

If the hardware men of Ontario do not go home thoroughly posted on, and enthusiastic about the Gillette it will not be the fault of Mr Bittues and his salesmen.

TRUSTS AND GUARANTEE CO. MAKES STATEMENT ABOUT THE FARMERS' BANK CASE

Explains in Clear, Straightforward Manner the Dealings With Manager Travers and With the Farmers' Bank ---Shows That it Was an Ordinary Business Transaction

The Trusts & Guarantee Company have issued this statement in connection with the Farmers' Bank:

While we have no desire to comment on the transactions which have been the subject of investigation before Col. Denison, we may say that the loan made to W. R. Travers, personally, in the fall of 1906, was made on legal security, which ultimately realized far more than the amount loaned, and that the loan itself, principal and interest, was fully paid some months after the advance.

In reference to the matter of loans to the bank, the facts are:

That three years after the personal loan to Travers, when the bank was apparently in a prosperous condition, its paid-up capital being over half a million dollars, its general manager came to us for a call loan of $75,000. This was about the end of January, 1910. Travers said that another bank had enticed away his manager at Haileybury, and that the latter had diverted about $50,000 of de posits. He further said that he had taken care of this, but he wanted a loan from us so that if there was a sudden demand he would be prepared, pending a realization of the bank's securities. He assured us that the bank was in sound condition, but claimed that he was being subjected to unfair competition from other banks. Following this application, on February 5, 1910, we made a loan of $75,000, at six per cent. per annum, to the bank from our capital account on adequate security.

Leagued Against Bank.

Nothing further developed until July, 1910, when Travers came again He said his Lindsay manager had been enticed away by another bank, that he had diverted many thousands of dollars of deposits and that evidently there was a conspiracy against him because of the success that had attended his efforts in bringing out a new bank. He asked for a further loan so as to be ready for any further eventuality, and after due consideration on the 30th of July, 1910, we advanced $100,000 more, at seven per cent. per annum, on adequate security. We also had a deposit with the Farmers' Bank, which, under the terms of the call loan agreements, covering the loans above mentioned, was secured by the collateral upon which the loans were made. This collateral was ample to secure both the loans and the deposit.

On November 2nd, 1910, a further advance was made, and further security obtained.

We do not make such loans as these from our trust funds. These are invested under the provision of the statute. We have, however, a large capital and surplus, amounting to over a million and a half. Frequently sums are on hand in this account, and therefrom call loans are made to brokers, financial institutions and others, but always on adequate security.

Believed Bank Sound.

Until the disclosures of the Lindsay trial we were absolutely unaware of the condition of the Faremrs' Bank, as then disclosed. We knew it was a young institution, but we believed it was sound, and that it being well and conservatively managed by Mr. Travers.

When the bank suspended we wrote the curator, saying that we were in no need of the moneys due us, and that we would co-operate with him in any reasonable way, so as to secure the greatest realization for shareholders of the bank. After giving the matter consideration, he evidently thought it better to handle our securities in connection with the other assets of the bank. An arrangement was made under which we have been paid off in full, and we have handed over our securities to the liquidator, he reserving the right to look into our legal position.

Between the time of the suspension of the bank and the making of the above arrangement, we collected many thousands of dollars on our securities, and there is no doubt but that we would have repaid ourselves in full within a short time longer.

In an interview yesterday Mr. Matthew Wilson, K.C., who has been summoned with Mr. Morden of the Trusts Company for obtaining an undue or unfair preference for the Trusts Company over the creditors of the bank, stated that he had no personal interest in the matter, but that he acted only as a solicior for the Trusts Company when it made a new and larger loan to and took additional securities from the bank, and this security has since been redeemed and the Trusts Company paid in full by the liquidator of the bank.

Knew of No Illegal Purpose.

In cross-examination Tuesday the chief crown witness, W. R. Travers, admitted that Mr. Warren did not know that any illegal act was in contemplation with the loan to Mr. Travers. He further said that Mr. Warren was neither party nor privy to the misrepresentations or fraud made or practised on the finance department which led to the issue of the license to the bank to do business. Mr. Travers also said that when he introduced the business to Mr. Warren he showed Mr. Warren testimonial from Mr. Thomas Fyshe, general manager of the Merchants' Bank, certifying to Mr. Travers' integrity and ability as a banker.

CHARGED WITH THEFT BUT SENTENCE IS SUSPENDED

Earl Schwiers Appeared Before County Magistrate Edmison To-day---Boy Who Has a Bad Record Was Advised to Turn Over a New Leaf.

Earl Schwiers appeared before his Worship Magistrate Edmison, in the County Court this morning, charged with stealing some tobacco, a pair of pinchers and a few articles of clothing from Mr. Thos. Dixon's camp, Smith, on Friday, Feb. 17th. He pleaded not guilty. The evidence was strong against him, but the Magistrate allowed him to go on suspended sentence, and also made him promise to report to him on the first of every month, beginning on April 1st. Messrs. Wm. Murrey, T. Dixon, and John Dixon, gave evidence, which agreed in every particular. They stated that on Thursday night Schwiers came to the camp and hired as cook. They were all up early on Friday morning, and all but one man left the camp at 7.30, and that one left about 9.00 o'clock. When he left he told Schwers to carry in some wood and to have dinner ready. When the men returned there was no person there, but everything had been done that had been ordered. In giving his evidence the boy stated that he left because he did not want to stay alone, and that he could not stand the swearing. He also stated that when he was going away, as near as he could judge, it was 9.30, that he met a man coming off the railway. This would be about three-quarters of a mile from the camp. He stated that the man looked like a tramp, but he did not watch to see where he went.

The Magistrate, after giving his decision in the matter, strongly advised the boy to turn over a new leaf, and get a position that would give him steady employment. He expressed his regret at having to sentence any young man to prison. The young man has a very bad record, having spent some time in gaol and in the Reformatory at Mimico, for theft. He, however, promised to lead a better life.

THE SENATE MAY TALK THE TREATY TO DEATH

Special to The Examiner:

WASHINGTON, D.C., FEB 24.—The Committee on Finance of the Senate to-day washed its hands of the Canadian Reciprocity Bill, by reporting the same to the Senate without a recommendation, by a vote of six to seven. This was a rather surprising development, but is understood to be necessary to prevent the smothering of the Bill altogether by that body. It is now possible to get the bill under discussion in the entire house, where it now will appear just as it left President Taft's hands. The possibility now is that the Senate will talk the bill to death, owing to the early dissolution of the present House.

NEW HAREM SKIRTS CAUSED A BIG RIOT

Examiner Special:

PARIS, FEB. 24.—Riots followed the appearance of a number of women in new Harem skirts on the streets today. Owing to the jeering of the pedestrians at the strange costumes, traffic was stopped and finally a cordon of police charged the mob inflicting severe injuries, and making several arrests. Word has been received here that the Pope has placed his ban on the Harem skirt, because it abolishes the sex distinction of the wearers.

FOR BALD HEADS

A Treatment That Costs Nothing If It Fails

We want you to try three large bottles of Rexall "93" Hair Tonic on our personal guarantee that the trial will not cost you a penny if it does not give you absolute satisfaction. That's proof of our faith in this remedy, and it should indisputably demonstrate that we know what we are talking about when we say that Rexall "93" Hair Tonic will grow hair on bald heads, except where baldness has been of such long duration that the roots of the hair are entirely dead, the follicles closed and grown over, and the scalp is glazed.

Remember, we are basing our statements upon what has already been accomplished by the use of Rexall "93" Hair Tonic ,and we have the right to assume that what it has done for thousands of others it will do for you. In any event you cannot lose anything by giving it a trial on our liberal guarantee. Two sizes, 50c. and $1.00. Remember, you can obtain Rexall Remedies in this community only at our store.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unparalleled"

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 24, 1911

STICK TO THEIR KNITTING.

What about the cry which Mr. Whitney has so often emitted with the soft-pedal delicacy of a thunder clap, against federal interference in provincial matters? Mr. Whitney, forgetting his tirades against this, has concentrated his eloquence into something stronger than thunder. This time it is "dynamite." He has accused Hon. Messrs. Fielding and Patterson of bringing back from Washington a charge of dynamite, and exploding it under the unsuspecting chairs of the people of Canada. The trade agreement is something that the Dominion Parliament has to deal with, and the Provincial legislators have no more right to "but" in than they have to meddle with the Dominion budget. Isn't provincial invasion of Dominion rights as bad as Dominion invasion of provincial rights? It doesn't, however, matter much, one way or the other, only it shows how far the Whitney government is prepared to sacrifice consistency to the promotion of party advantage. Premier Whitney and his finance minister, Mr. Matheson, condemned the trade agreement when they could not have given an intelligible answer to two simple questions like these: What is the agreement? In what way is it unfair or injurious to Canada? How in the name of common sense can it promote annexation? The Ontario government has quite enough to do in minding its own business; it has plenty of room for activity in doing something to promote the interests of agriculture in Ontario, which one of the most prominent Conservatives in Toronto declares is not doing half the work that is to be done, not realizing half the results attainable. It has enough to do in rescuing our rural schools from the low state in which lack of teachers has placed them. It has its own work to do, and that demands all of even its great ability. It can do better than in meddling in Dominion politics and trying to discredit an agreement designed to promote the interests of farmer, to provide farmers with an enlarged market at their doors, thus giving them the advantage of three good markets, the home market, the British market, and the United States market. That is the intention of the trade agreement, and though it may temporarily pinch some interest, it is in the main, designed to promote the general advantage of the country, so far as that advantage is represented by enlarged markets and freedom of trade.

"SICK AND ASHAMED."

(The Globe.)

Sir William Van Horne, who, it is stated, has "just returned from Cuba," says regarding the reciprocity agreement: "I am sick and ashamed too sick and too ashamed to say anything about the subject."

We do not wonder that Sir William is ashamed. He has been spending his time in Cuba, just like any other absentee landlord, and on his return finds that the tenants on the old estates are getting outof hand. They have not yet reached the stage of insisting on wintering in Cuba, but they do insist on what is likely to prove the "farthest south" for most of them, an occasional trip to Buffalo or Detroit to dispose of a load of hogs or try their luck at swapping horses with some adventurous Yankee.

And on whom must the blame be laid for this unholy desire to do business with the people to the south? Sir William recognizes himself as one of the culprits. He does well to be ashamed. He and Sir Edmund Walker and Sir William Mackenzie have been making the path to the south straight and level for the farmer and the lumberman. Sir William some years ago took to Cuba a part of that ample fortune of his—"made in Canada"—and his splendid abilities as a railway administrator, and joining with him a number of United States capitalists whose fortunes had not been made in Canada, he built the Cuban railway, of which he is quite properly President and proud. A Canadian bank is treasurer of the railway, and it is reasonably certain that a good deal of Canadian money followed Sir William's lead.

Then there is Sir William Mackenzie. This broad Dominion is not broad enough to keep that doughty railway Knight on east and west lines. He has been a chief factor in the creation of the great railway, light and power systems of Rio Janiero and Sao Paulo in Brazil and of the City of Mexico. Thousands of Canadian investors have forgotten all about the east and west theory of development, and have followed him and E. R. Wood and the rest of the new discoverers of South America.

Then there is Sir Edmund Walker. He is truly a sinner above all that dwell in Jerusalem. For he is the controlling spirit in a great bank that gathers the savings of tens of thousands of Canadian farmers and does business on north and south lines on a very large scale. It is generally understood that Sir Edmund's bank has a good deal to do with the moving of the cotton crop of the southern States and makes a good thing out of it for the Canadian stockholders in the bank. But it is tainted money, for no real patriot would use Canadian farmers' savings to move crops north and south instead of east and west.

Sir William Van Horne is right. The men who, forgetting the sanctity of boundary line, have used fortunes made in Canada and funds drawn from Canadian depositors to do business in Cuba and Brazil and Mexico and Porto Rico and the southern States, may well be ashamed of themselves. They have unwittingly aroused in the farmers of Canada the belief that they, too, might be able to do a little business south of the border without imperilling the future of their country.

Sir William Van Horne can show the true spirit of repentance by stopping his flirtation with Cuba, Sir Edmund Walker by closing all his branch banks in the United States, Sir William Mackenzie by withdrawing from his South American ventures. We have simply got to keep business flowing in east and west lines or go to everlasting smash.

RESTRICTIONIST TACTICS.

(Toronto Star.)

The Conservative majority in the Manitoba Legislature has declared against the reciprocity agreement and in favour of Imperial preference and the free extension of trade within the Empire. The expression "free extension of trade" is somewhat ambiguous, but it must mean at least much freer trade, and that involves a radical reduction in the duties on British goods—a change which would be feared by the protected manufacturers of Canada far more than the reciprocal agreement.

The motive underlying this enthusiasm for British trade is quite apparent. The Manitoba Conservatives are eager to strike a blow at the reciprocity agreement, and to convey the impression that it is unpopular among the Manitoba farmers, who would derive so much benefit from freer access to the American markets. But they dare not oppose the agreement without offering the farmers a sop. They, therefore, offer them something which it is very well known will not materialize. The people of Great Britain are resolutely opposed to duties on food, without which no preference to Canada could be granted. The manufacturers of Canada are equally resolute in their opposition to free trade within the Empire, or anything approaching free trade. The Conservatives in the Manitoba Legislature say to the farmer, "If you will abandon something you can get to-day, we will give you something which you may get about the year 1960, and probably will never get at all."

But while the resolution in this respect is a transparent humbug, it has its value as an indication of the strength of the free trade sentiment among the farmers of the West. The farmer wants two things — increased liberty to buy, and increased liberty to sell. The agreement now under consideration gives the farmer much freer access to a market of ninety-two million people, while it does not interfere with the free market of some fifty-three millions which he now enjoys. All kinds of efforts are made to steer the farmer away from this clear advantage. At first he was told that it was sordid and disloyal to barter away his British birthright for a few cents a bushel on wheat. Now he is told that he will get these few cents if he will only wait for the long delayed fruition of Mr. Chamberlain's plan.

The latter attitude is assumed in Manitoba, where it is known that free trade sentiment is strong. In this part of Canada the opposition to reciprocity is every day taking shape more clearly as a defence of the protective system. The Toronto manifesto expresses a fear that if there is free trade in natural products, free trade in manufactures will follow. The farmer is asked to give up the great advantage of free access to a market of ninety-two million people, not for the present defence of the protected interests, but in order to safeguard protection for all time to come. And this in view of the fact that the farmer obtains little or no benefit from the protective system, and that under the agreement even the pretense of protection will be abandoned.

Compensation For Railway Men Injured In The Discharge Of Duty

(Ottawa Free Press)

The question of compensation to the victims of railway accidents, which has long been discussed in the Federal arena, seems to have reached a point where it is possible to predict that before long the Federal government will be called on to pass some legislation which will give compensation to the employees of railways, which are subsidized by the Federal government.

It is true that this question of compensation to workmen is largely a matter of provincial jurisdiction, but in view of the remarkable developments which have taken place in regard to the granting of Federal charters, it does seem necessary to emphasize the remarks of the Minister of Labour upon the bill of Mr. Miller, to require an investigation into every accident upon railways.

Hon. Mr. King, who is probably the man most conversant in Canada with the subject, gave an array of statistics which showed that there was undoubtedly need for Federal legislation to secure compensation for railway men injured in the course of their duty. He said that the statistics showed that Canada's mortality in this regard was a very serious item in the total of deaths for any year, and he proved it by reading the following tables:

Statement showing the number of railway employees of all classes for one killed:

	Canada	United States.	Great Britain.
1909	650	576	....
1908	499	422	....
1907	478	369	1221

Statement showing the number of railway employees of all classes for one injured:

	Canada	United States.	Great Britain.
1909	132	20	..
1908	91	17	..
1907	106	19	29

Statement showing the number of trainmen (engineers, conductors, firemen, baggagemen, brakemen) for one killed:

	Canada	United States.	Great Britain.
1909	172	205	....
1908	168	150	....
1907	136	125	1084

Statement showing the number of trainmen (engineers, conductors, firemen, baggemen) for one injured:

	Canada	United States.	Great Britain.
1907	26	8	35

Summarizing the figures, it would appear that the total number of railway employees killed in Canada in the past three years has been 633, the total number injured 3,134, making a total of 3,767 fatal and non-fatal accidents in this period.

Giving the figures in another form of the 19,448 trainmen in Canada in 1909, 1 out of every 172 was killed, and one out of every 28 injured. In 1908 the proportion of killed was one out of every 168, and of injured one out of every 23. In 1907 the proportion of killed was one out of every 136 and of injured one out of every 26.

Mr. King paid a deserved tribute to the efforts and energies of the officials of his department in trying to produce a complete record of the number of men maimed or injured:

I think it is worth the while of members of this House and of other legislators in the country to consider whether or not there is a necessity for remedying in some shape or form that circumstance. We can say with certainty at this moment that a year hence another 2,000 lives will be swept off the list of workers in Canada, and in another two years there will be 30,000 men whose industrial efficiency will be permanently impaired as a consequence of the callings in which they are engaged. We know that loss of life is incident to a calling itself. If that is so does it not appear that in some way the industry itself should be made to bear what is inevitable to it? Take the case of a railway company with its cars; they allow so much for broken cars or for repairing damages done to cars. I am just throwing out this thought or suggestion because it is a large subject, and it would involve much consideration before anything in the shape of legislation could be based upon it, but is it not worth considering whether human life is not entitled to the same amount of protection as is afforded to what is part of the rolling stock of the company and whether in some way the industry could not be made to bear part of the cost of its inevitable loss of life and limb with the result that those who are left behind, those who belong to the family of the man who may have been killed outright, shall not, in consequence of his death, be put in the position that in order to get some compensation for the loss of life they must enter upon litigation and add to the distress which they already have?

The problem brought up by the Minister of Labour, that of compensation to workers, is a big problem. It is a big problem because it involves a conflict of federal and provincial jurisdiction. We can, therefore, but emphasize its importance, and urge the careful consideration of both the provinces and the Dominion. It is just possible that the final result of the discussion, which is inevitable will be something on the basis of that which is now a cardinal principle of federal railway subsidy acts: that is, where railways receive federal subsidies they shall give compensation therefor in the manner of free transport of mails, etc.

And there does not seem to be any reason why the Federal Subsidies act should not be amended in some such way as to secure to the employees of such railways compensation for accidents, without in any way prejudicing the rights of the provinces under the Confederation Act.

It is a big question, but Hon. Mr. King seems to have got hold of the "right end of the stick." It is no use, in a matter like this, to go into the provincial arena with a club. The best principle is to secure co-operation and co-ordination; and these two seeds will, in the course of co-ordinate legislation, secure compensation for the workmen upon federal enterprises.

Human life is our greatest and most precious asset. Provincial rights and Dominion claims have to take second place when human life is the factor; and though there may be considerable objection the Free Press ventures to hope that the present session of Parliament will not close without some legislation such as that foreshadowed by the Minister of Labour on Monday night.

So long as the duties remain, even if they are of little or no use to the farmer, it is possible to describe him as one of the beneficiaries of protection, and to treat him as a partner in a policy which is intended to benefit all classes of the community. He may not be convinced, but it is at least possible to make a show of argument in addressing an audience of farmers. But if the duties on farm products are removed, even the semblance of an argument will be gone, and the farmer will begin to ask awkward questions, and to regard the tariff as a piece of class legislation.

But while the manufacturers may see this danger ahead, those who undertake to speak for them are not making matters any better by asking the farmer to surrender the present and obvious benefit of a great enlargement of his market, for the sake of the future safety of a privileged class. It is not wise to tell him that, for the sake of portection, he must be restricted not only in his liberty to buy, but in his liberty to sell. If the farmer is willing to take his chances in a free market, asking for no favours, it is not fair for the favoured classes to interfere with his liberty, and deprive him of a great opportunity to better his condition.

ENNISMORE PARAGRAPHS

Death of a Well Known Resident of the Township

ENNISMORE, FEB. 20.—We regret to chronicle the death of Mrs. William Geary, one of the best known and most highly respected residents of Ennismore. In many ways Mrs. Geary was a remarkable woman, but the great virtue of charity seemed to shine out resplendently in every action of her life. No one was ever known to hear an unkind, or uncharitable word escape her lips. In sickness, or trouble of any kind, Mrs. Geary was sure to be on hand, and loss of sleep, or labour of any sort, was seeming pleasure to her. A better neighbour, a more loving wife, a truer or more affectionate mother, could scarcely be found. Though advanced in years, and for some time unable to be around, she will be greatly missed, not alone by the members of her own family, who were strongly attached of her, but also by a large number of friends and neighbours, who always enjoyed the company of this truly Christian woman.

St. Martin's T.A.S. has been most successful so far this season, not alone in their friendly games of cards but also in their debates, having won out against St. Peter's T. A. S. and also the T. A. S. from the Sacred Heart.

The first debate, resolved, that liquor has been more destructive of human life and national resources than war, was ably debated and keenly contested between John A. O'Donohue and P. J. Scollard, of Ennismore, for the affirmative, and Jos. Begley and J. J. Duffus of St. Peter's T.A.S., for the negative.

Rev. Father Galvin, of Kinmount, acted in the capacity of judge, and gave his decision in favour of the affirmative.

The second debate, resolved "that unrestricted reciprocity with the United States would prove detrimental to the interests of the Canadian people," was argued by Mich. Perdue, ex-Reeve of the township, and P. J. Scollard for the negative, and J. J. Lynch and J. Shaughnessy for the affirmative.

The following were appointed a committee to decide the debate: Mr. P. Young, Jr., Young's Point; Mr. Stephen O'Connor, of Ennismore; Mr. M. J. Carroll of Peterborough T. A. S., and Mr. McNicholl of Sacred Heart T. A. S. The debate proved most interesting and instructive, and although the Committee decided in favour of Ennismore, owing to the long array of facts and figures produced, principally by Mr Perdue, still the superior eloquence and strength of argument by the Peterborough debaters, captivated the audience, and won for these young men rounds of applause. We hope to have the pleasure of hearing both of them again before the close of the season.

The subject of debate for next week is: "Resolved that for the ordinary young man, a college education does not pay, when St. Peter's and St. Martin's T.A.S. will again try conclusions.

The C. O. F. of Young's Point, to the number of twenty, played St. Martin's a friendly game of euchre last week at Ennismore, and came out victorious, the score standing 40 to 58 in favour of Young's Point. Fr. Phelan accompanied the Foresters, and was an interested spectator during the evening. Two weks before Ennismore vanquished the same team on their own grounds—in their snug and commodious hall at the Point. These social gatherings are not devoted entirely to cards, as music, songs and speeches form an important portion of each evening's entertainment.

Next week Ennismore will again meet their opponents at Young's Point, when they hope to redeem past losses.

Mr. John P. Flood, at present attending the dairy school at Kingston, is expected home next Saturday.

The new Township Council seems determined to improve our roads, and as a consequence immense piles of the best gravel are located at different points throughout the Township. Right you are, gentlemen, we need nothing worse than improved roads.

Mr. Cowley's report of the work done in the Continuation Class, sent to the trustees last week, is most favourable, and speaks volumes for the good work done in this institution by Mr. O'Donoghue, and his able and energetic assistant, Miss Ryan.

Children's Scalp Sores Are Healed by Zam-Buk

Mothers are well aware how frequently children contract scalp sores, ringworm, etc., at school. Some little sufferer is sent to school with a sore of this nature. At play, the children change caps, and right there the infection is spread—the damage done.

Some children are particularly liable to scalp sores, etc., and often these break out with annoying frequency. Such a case was that of the daughter of Mrs. Albert Gaedlike, of 485 Amherst St., Montreal. Mrs. Gaedlike says: "My little three year old daughter suffered frequently from scalp disease, and try as we would, we could not rid the little one of this. We tried everything we could think of, but failed to effect a cure, until we were advised to try Zam-Buk. This balm seemed entirely different to anything we had ever tried before, and from first applying it there was a marked improvement. The sores became less inflamed and less irritable. After a few days, they ceased to trouble the child; and in less than a fortnight from first commencing with Zam-Buk, they were completely healed. In view of these facts I feel it my duty to let mothers know how beneficial Zam-Buk is."

There is no doubt that for scalp sores, ringworm, ulcers, abscesses, cold cracks, chapped hands, frost bite and similar sores, Zam-Buk is absolutely without equal. It is just as good for piles, varicose sores, poisoned wounds, cuts, burns and scalds. Rubbed well in over the affected part, it cures rheumatism, sciatica, etc. etc., and rubbed into the chest it relieves the tightness and feeling of weight due to contracting a bad cold. All druggists and stores sell at 50c. box, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price. Refuse imitations.

ENJOYABLE "AT HOME"

Successful Event Last Evening at St. Alphonsus Lyceum.

A most enjoyable time was experienced by a large crowd at St. Alphonsus' Lyceum yesterday afternoon and last evening when an "At Home" and Linen Shower was held under the auspices of St. Peter's Ladies' Aid. The proceeds of the "At Home" went toward the expenses of the St. Vincent's Home. During the afternoon, games were played and a general good time was indulged in, and refreshments were served. In the evening, dancing was the feature, also games of different sorts were played. An unusually large crowd was in attendance, a feature which always tends to brighten such an occasion. The ladies of the Aid are to be congratulated upon the brilliant success of the event, and deserve credit for the pains they took to make everything pleasant for those who attended. The Sisters are also deserving of much credit for the very active part they played in the preparation.

The ladies wish to thank the public in general for the liberal offering of clothing that they brought.

SUDDEN DEATH IN HASTINGS

Special to The Examiner:

HASTINGS, FEB. 22.—A very sad death occurred on Monday at the Royal Hotel, when a bright young life was suddenly brought to a close by that deadly malady, membranous croup. The victim of the disease was Miss Kathleen Burns, sister of Mr. J. Burns, proprietor of the hotel, and was just in her seventeenth year. She was a great favourite with her young associates and will be much missed in the circle in which she moved. Her illness was of short duration and much sympathy is expressed for the sorrowing relatives.

The local lodge of C. O. F. held their annual "At Home" on Tuesday evening in their hall here, when a good crowd congregated to enjoy a social evening together. A good programme was rendered and choice refreshments served by the ladies, and all present went away feeling pleased with the outing.

Mr. Thistlewaite occupied the pulpit of the Methodist church on Sunday morning, Rev. C. W. Barrett being unavoidably absent.

Mr. I. T. Huycke has been on the sick list for a few days during the week.

Mr. and Mrs. Colville are rejoicing over the birth of a son.

A wedding of local interest was solemnized in the R. C. Catholic church on Tuesday, the principals being Miss Coveney, town, and Mr. M. O'Shea, of Asphodel, the nuptial knot being tied by Rev. Father Bretherton. After the ceremony the company repaired to the home of the bride's parents, where a sumptuous wedding breakfast was served. The happy couple drove to Norwood where they boarded the afternoon train for a short honeymoon trip west.

Mr. and Mrs. O'Shea have a host of friends whose best wishes follow them for a long and prosperous wedded life.

A number of our people have been to Norwood through the week profiting by the great broker's sale now going on in Mr. G. Mills' store.

The concert on Wednesday evening under the auspices of the Fire Brigade was a grand success, every available seat being taken. Miss Cheate, violinist of Peterborough, Mr. Asa Huycke, soloist, Peterborough, Mr. Cameron, elocutionist of Toronto, and Miss M. Anderson, town, assisted in the programme, each one giving their individual numbers so acceptably that they had to respond with an encore. The proceeds go to the treasury of the brigade.

The literary meeting in connection with the Epworth League was held in the basement of the Methodist church on Friday night, when a good programme was presented under the direction of the literary vice-pres.

The teachers and officers in connection with the Presbyterian church treated the children to a sleighing party on Friday evening, which was much enjoyed. After the sleigh ride refreshments were served in the school room and a very enjoyable time spent together. Rev. D. A. Thompson, pastor, Mr. Howard Fife, secretary of Sunday school. The programme was given by friends of the school.

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Metcalfe spent Sunday with the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. McConnell.

Miss Bella Fife has been visiting in Otonabee at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. Carter.

Miss Stella Burgess spent Saturday and Sunday at her home in Norwood.

Mr. Ad. Humphries spent Saturday in Peterborough.

Mrs. J. Hess was in Norwood on Saturday.

It is rumoured that Mr. Pelton, barrister, etc., is contemplating a removal to western Canada.

Mr. Robt. Collins has been confined to his home suffering from an attack of la grippe.

Mr. D. Fife spent a few days in Peterborough during the week.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Oliver and Miss A. Stinson spent Saturday in Norwood.

A team from Campbellford came up on Thursday for a game of hockey and spent a lively time.

The Ladies of Peterborough May Now Have Beautiful Hair. The Warne Drug Store Has the Article and Guarantees it to Grow Hair, or Refund Your Money.

The Warne Drug store, backed up by the manufactures of SALVIA, the Great Hair Grower, guarantees it to grow hair.

SALVIA destroy Dandruff in ten days.

The roots of the hair are so nourished and fed that a new crop of hair springs up, to the amazement and delight of the user. The hair is made soft and fluffy. Like all American preparations SALVIA is daintily perfumed. It is hard to find an actress who does not use SALVIA continually.

Ladies of society and influence use no other.

SALVIA is a non-sticky preparation, and is the ladies' favourite. A large, generous bottle, 50c. The Scobell Drug Co., St. Catharines, Canadian distributors.

BENSFORT BREVITIES

Examiner Special.

BENSFORT, FEB. 15.—The storm of Monday, Feb. 6th was the worst of the season. People stayed strictly in shelter. Nevertheless the mail from Centreville came through. Mr. Jas. Lucy deserves credit for the manner in which he fulfills his contract.

The concert held in connection with Christ church, Bailieboro was a success in every way. Much credit is due the artists for the fine programme rendered.

Mr. Peter Dodds who has been very sick, is able to be around again.

Messrs. H. Kerr and Jas. Whittingdon are temporarily laid off from the roads by la grippe. La grippe is almost an epidemic.

Mr. David Chambers will shortly move to Bailie boro where he has purchased the blacksmith shop business from Mr. Fred Maycock. Owing to failing health Mr. Maycock is going out of business and is removing to Toronto.

Mr. Chambers and family have been residents of Bensfort for a number of years and will be greatly missed.

The telephone lines are still adding subscribers to their lists. Head offices will soon be necessary.

The canvassers for seed peas are meeting with very poor success, the pea crop being a failure last season. A good many farmers are not growing any at all this coming season, mostly on account of the pea aphis.

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

"YES, my dear, after all I did for her in introducing her to those people and trying to do everything in my power to make her vacation pleasant, she never has shown me the slightest gratitude. Isn't that trying? I declare, it has taught me a lesson."

So said the lady on the seat in front of me in the car. Now please don't accuse me of eavesdropping for I assure you that her tones were so forcibly audible that I should have had to put my hands over my ears or get under the seat to avoid hearing her.

Just there I reached my destination and got off the car, so I wasn't given to hear what the lesson was—if indeed, the lady elucidated that matter.

I rather suspect she left it to the intelligence of her hearer to grasp that the lesson was that it didn't pay to do things for people because they were so apt to be ungrateful.

I wonder if there is any weakness of human nature more common and more unconscious than this greedy demand for gratitude for services done on the part of people for their generosity in performing said services.

Isn't it queer that more of us aren't logical enough to see that the moment we demand an equivalent in gratitude that moment we invalidate our bill for unselfishness?

To do good deeds because one wishes to bask in the graditude they call forth is no more meritorious than to do kindnesses because one expects favours in return.

The only merit is to do kind things because one knows they should be done, and because one wants to help the world along.

I know a woman who seldom misses a chance to help people but who, to my mind, loses all title to generosity by always being ready to say sharp things about her beneficiaries, unless whenever they meet her they metaphorically fall on their knees and assure her, "Oh, Mrs. L., I don't know what I should have done if it hadn't been for you. I don't know how I can ever thank you," or something equally fulsome.

As for myself I haven't any use for her kind of generosity.

Real generosity inwardly shrinks from thanks and accepts them only because it knows that thanks may be the natural outlet for the recipient's state of mind and that it is cruel to deny him the opportunity to express them.

Everywhere there are people on boards and committees who do much work without pay and who take great credit to themselves for this generosity, but who all the time are exacting a continual toll of gratitude and praise, and who if this it not promptly paid get in a huff and resign or at least relax their efforts.

What funny self deceiving folks this planet is people with, isn't it? Present company always excepted, of course.

Ruth Cameron

Allaying the Germ Scare.

American Medicine soothingly declares that many people are unnecessarily disturbed over the danger of infection from laundries, money and postage stamps. It says that "some one has been alarming us because he found a few bacteria on gummed postage stamps, though he should have been astonished if he had not found them." This medical authority adds that "common sense tells us not to put dirty money in the mouth, for it may have recently been tucked away, in a very dirty place, yet its germs are mostly dead, and we can lay very little disease to its agency. Its evils are of another sort. Our clothing is boiled in the laundry and does not spread infection."

Nearly Hanged as a Spy.

Perhaps the most remarkable incident in the career of Senator Elkins, who has just died, occurred when, as a young man, he was fighting for the Union in the Civil War. He was captured by a guerrilla band, and would have been promptly hanged as a spy had it not been for the intervention of a member of the band, who recognized him as a boyhood friend. Many years later, when Senator Elkins was rich and famous, he heard that the man who had saved his life was serving twenty years in prison for robbing a bank, and he used his influence to bring about the release of his former benefactor.

Her Attractiveness.

Mr. Nervey—Miss Roxley, I adore you. Will you not be my wife?

Miss Roxley (haughtily)—The idea of your proposing to a girl in my station! You should know better.

Mr. Nervey—I do know better, but no richer.

They Blind Themselves.

Intentional blinding to escape conscription for the army is still met in Egypt. The means employed are either the placing of a hot needle on the cornea, producing a dense white leucoma, or a puncture often involving the loss or by the introduction of lime or an irritant vegetable juice in the eyes.

By Way of Suggestion.

A pewholder once came from his parish church to the bishop with the complaint that a stranger had introduced into his pew. He said, "I would not disturb divine service by ejecting him, but I took the slight liberty of sitting on his hat."

In Dread of Something

You Can Scarcely Tell What—It May Be Hysteria, Insanity, Nervous Collapse

DR. CHASE'S NERVE FOOD

When the nervous system breaks down you live in a constant dread of something terrible about to happen.

Physical suffering cannot be compared to the mental agonies of the nervous wreck who fears that his mind may give way or that his body may be paralyzed.

In this condition you must suffer alone for friends cannot understand or sympatize with you. They tell you to cheer up or that it is only imagination.

You can only throw off this depression when the nerve cells are restored to health by such treatment as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. Your digestive system has failed to supply proper nourishment to the nerves and you are compelled to seek aid from other sources.

It will take some patience and persistent treatment, but there is no way by which you can so certainly restore health and vigour as by the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Do not time to restore the nervous system is long before such a critical condition is reached. Such symptoms as sleeplessness, headaches, nervous irritation, muscular weakness, loss of memory and power of concentration, irritability and discouragement tell of a failure of the nervous system and warn you of the approach of serious trouble.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food 50 cents a box, 6 boxes for $2.50; all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

NO DISORDERED KIDNEYS

or Weak Back If You Take a Few Doses of

ANNUAL MEETING

The annual meeting and election of officers of St. Luke's Woman's Auxiliary took place yesterday afternoon in St. Luke's Sunday school room. The president, Mrs. T. Gaskins, was in the chair and opened the meeting with devotional exercises, after which the reports were presented by the respective officers. A comprehensive view of the work of the year was thus given. A feature of the meeting was the presentation of a life membership to Mrs. E. A. Langfeldt. The election of officers resulted as follows:

Hon. Pres.—Mrs. E. A. Peck.
Hon. Vice-Pres.—Mrs. J. Phillips.
President—Mrs. S. Gaskins.
1st Vice-Pres.—Mrs. E. A. Langfeldt.
2nd Vice-Pres.—Mrs. T. Moore
Corres-Sec.—Mrs. J. Butcher.
Recording-Sec.—Mrs. J. J. Turner.
Treasurer—Mrs. J. W. Hickey.
Dorcas—Mrs. Jamieson.
P.M.C. Covener—Mrs. E. Turner.
Supt. of Juniors—Miss L. Stewart.
Secretary of Babies' Branch — Mrs. Phillips.
Organist—Mr. Moore.
Executive—Mrs. Gibbs. Appointed by the rector—Mrs. R. J. Scott and Mrs. J. Heap.
Delegates for the annual meeting—Mrs J. J. Butcher, Mrs. J. W. Hickey.
After the meeting refreshments were served.

CELEBRATED ANNIVERSARY

Pleasant Evening Spent at Home of Mr. and Mrs. Londerville—Fifty Guests

The home of Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Londerville, was last Tuesday evening the scene of a very happy event, when Mr. and Mrs. Londerville celebrated the fifth anniversary of their wedding. The occasion was honoured by about fifty guests. Mr. and Mrs. Londerville were made the recipients of many beautiful and costly, as well as useful presents, which evidenced the esteem in which they are held by their many friends. During the evening music and singing was indulged in, but progressive euchre was the feature of the games, the prize going to Mr. M. Sharpe and Miss M. O'Connel. A sumptuous and dainty repast provided by the hostess, was served, and a most sociable and enjoyable time in general was indulged in. The assembly dispersed after wishing Mr. and Mrs. Londerville many happy returns.

POST CARD COLUMN

STILL THEY COME.

To the Editor of The Examiner

Dear Sir,—I see by your issue of lastnight that we are to have another list of sermons given on Sundays, on a great question which is agitating the minds of a few that I would call fire brands, or religious agitators, and from which I fail to see would be at all conducive to that good feeling, which should exist between members of different creeds. I would like to ask are the teachings of that wonderful library, the Bible, run dry? Are there no more lessons to be drawn from that great book than those which will have a tendency to stir up strife. I am of the opinion there is. Is our Protestant religion in such a state that it has to be bolstered up by such means as are being used by these so-called religious agitators? If such is the case the teachings of the various sects or denominations must have been very loose for the past 300 years. If these religious gentlemen and the pastors of the various denominations would explain how they drifted away from the one Catholic and Apostolic church, founded at Jerusalem, A. D. 33, by the Divine Teacher himself, it would be far better and let other creeds work out their own salvation. It was in 1572 that the English Presbyterian Church was founded. In 1633 the general Baptist was founded and all of these various denominations have been founded by laymen. I would say, quit this means of stirring up strife and let us get down to the teachings of the Sermon on the Mount. I am perfectly persuaded that that sermon has yet many good lessons to be drawn from it, and let us live, or try to live, in peace and harmony with all men.

Yours respectfully,
LABOUR.

THE HIRED MAN AGAIN.

(Toronto Star)

When I was a boy at school, there used to be a fellow called Hank Kelly who had every boy anywhere near his own age scared to death, and he kept it up so long he imagined he could lick any of us with one hand tied behind his back. So one day a little, skinny, young codger took him at his offer and basted the life out of him, not only with one hand, but gave him both. Henk never amounted to a cuss afterwards. I also remember a fellow who used to come to Orono and get about two drinks of whiskey in him, and then do up the town. He kept it up for years, until he ran up against a quiet fellow who had never ben in a fight in his life. But you ought to have seen that little fellow lam that big bully all over the road until he just hollered to be allowed to go home. I had a little fox terrier dog a few years ago that I did not know could fight at all, and there was a shoemaker here who owned a little snarling brute that was fighting everything in sight. Say, you ought to have seen that terrier grab him one day and shake the life out of him. I was telling the boss about the above the other day, and he said it put him in mind of the Tories down at Ottawa. "Dang 'em!" he says. "They're always hollering loyalty, and would try to make you believe they're the only ones that know how to fight. And," he says, "now that all us farmers want reciprocity, their only argument is we're not loyal to King George." Mr. Editor, tell Laurier and Fielding to stick to reciprocity and us farmers and hired men will stick to him.

THE HIRED MAN.

WHY SLEEP IS NECESSARY.

During sleep Nature restores the cells and tissues wasted by the activities of life. Without sleep physical bankruptcy is quick and certain. Mrs. J. Derocher, 455 Bethune street, Peterborough, Ont., writes: "I can say for a certainty that Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Food is a splendid medicine, for besides steadying the nerves, it built up my sleep wonderfully and enabled me to sleep and eat well."

MEETING WITH GREAT SUCCESS IN MONTREAL

Rev. W. S. Major, Former Rector of All Saints' Church, Has Been Doing Great Work in His Charge in the East.

IS APPRECIATED

The February number of the "St. George's Monthly" the parish chronicle of St. George's church, Montreal, contains some very pleasing references to the work of the Rev. W. S. Major, former rector of All Saints' parish in this city.

The annual report of the St. George's Men's Bible Class which was formed in December, 1909, and has steadily increased in numbers, zeal and helpfulness, speaks warmly of his work in this particular. When the class organized, a constitution by which it was to be governed was drawn up by Rev. Mr. Major, to the satisfaction of the members of the class, the objects of which are, "Bible Study, Christian Culture, Mutual Helpfulness and the Extension of Christ's Kingdom throughout the world." Mr. Major was chosen to guide the class in the Bible Study which choice the secretary affirms was "the master of our work," as under his able guidance the study has proved most instructive and beneficial and has been the means of enabling the members to better fulfil the other objects for which they are banded together.

"The Men's Association met in church last Wednesday evening, for an impressive ceremony. Eighteen of their number, grown men, were being confirmed by the bishop, receiving the apostolic rite of "laying on of hands that they might receive the gift of the Holy Ghost." It is a further indication of the spiritual growth in that Association and most heartily do I congratulate their president, Mr. Major, on this result of his intercourse with them. He deserves all the affection which they have for him. And now this gives him a higher satisfaction and reward.

J. Paterson Smyth.

NEW CANDIDATES

The regular meeting of Duke of Manchester L. O. L. No. 50 was held last evening. W. M. Bro. Barrie presiding. There was a large attendance of members and two candidates were duly initiated into the mysteries of the Orange degree. Bro. Clarke, of Kenora, gave an address. Considerable business was done for the welfare of the lodge, which is in a flourishing condition. Wor. Master Bro. Barrie was elected as delegate to represent the lodge at Grand Lodge meeting of Eastern Ontario to be held in Smith's Falls the third Wednesday in March.

CONTRACT LET

Messrs. A. Blade and Sons Will Supply Plants for Parks

A meeting of the Peterborough and Ashburnham Horticultural Society was held last night in the office of the City Engineer. The principal business taken up was the letting of the contract for the supply of plants and flowers for Victoria and Central Parks during the coming summer. The contract was given to Messrs. A. Blade and Sons, who looked after the work last year and who gave every satisfaction.

(ORMOND & WALSH OLD STAND)

He thought it unfair to the traveller to have his business interrupted. "You are sufficiently advanced in intelligence to learn from every salesman." The successful salesman, he said, was the keynote to business. The largest and most successful jobbers in Canada and the United States gave the traveller the greatest attention, he affirmed.

In regard to the kindness of the Association in receiving the manufacturers, he said "We are pushing the slogan 'Made-in-Canada', and we are going to make it warm enough to appeal to your most tender spot, your pocket book."

Mr. A. J. Barnett, of Iron Age Hardware, from New York, was then introduced, this being his first visit to a convention of the O.R.H. & S.D.A. Mr. Barnett declared that he came as a listener and not a speaker. The question box feature, he said, had been mostly relied upon to make the conventions in the United States of interest, rather than by the reading of papers. At the Ohio Convention next week, he said, the Question Box would be the main item of the programme. The next number of his paper, he said, would be a Canadian number containing much Canadian data that he believed would be of interest to United States trade.

Mr. T. B. Williamson of H. S. Howland Sons & Co., who was next called upon, said his being called upon was a joke of Mr. Bittuse, and being a Scotchman he did not see it. "It is up to the manufacturers," said he, "to create the demand. A jobber, he said, is essentially a distributor of goods, and it is a question to-day which is the cheaper way for the dealer to buy goods. In regard to catalogue houses which, are not much heard of in Canada, he said he had been told it costs catalogue houses forty per cent. to market goods.

The bringing up of advertising by the dealer and competition of catalogue houses by Mr. Williamson, he thought a valuable consideration.

Mr. Charles Smallpiece of the Taylor-Forbes Co., was the next speaker called upon. He thought that retailers did not always look as closely into the lines being ordered as they should.

The emphasizing of quality, he thought sometimes neglected by salesmen. He expressed disappointment that in the majority of large buildings in Ontario and Quebec much of the hardware was being imported. "In Canada," he said, "we manufacture as good hardware as any in the world." In concluding, he told the dealers to emphasize "Made in Canada," when buying.

Mr. Bittuse advised the dealers to make the United States manufacturers come over here with their plants and their money. He then called upon Mr. A. S. Howe of the Dover Mfg. Co., an American house, manufacturers of Asbestos Sad Irons.

Mr. Howe said the Canadian trade had received Asbestos Sad Irons most warmly and assured the delegates that quality in their manufacture would not be sacrificed. Mr. Howe concluded with the statement that his firm purposed coming over to Canada to manufacture.

Mr. T. W. Caley, of the Peterboro Lock Co., said he had spent 36 years in the manufacture of builders' hardware, and that it was by accident he came to Canada. It was on the understanding that the sole object was Canada for Canadians. "Canadians," he said, "could manufacture just as good goods in Canada as in the United States." German and British goods he quoted as the chief competition. He pointed out that in England the buying power of a dollar is one-third more than in Canada and in Canada wages are 100 per cent. higher. To live and grow in this country, the manufacturer must have the support of the Canadian jobber and retailer.

J. J. Turner, of J. J. Turner & Sons, to whom the Association is much indebted for assistance in connection with the arrangement of the exhibition also spoke, referring to his business career in Canada.

No change since we were boys. That oft-quoted proof of those ne'er-to-be-forgotten puddings is still, as of yore, not in reading the recipe, but in——. And when your local man, or your friend, attempts to tell you "it doesn't stand to reason" and about all the "other things you must learn" etc., etc., the real reliable evidence of our ability to qualify A1 stenographers with 25 to 35 days' study is, not in argument, or theorizing, but in thousands of real living men and women, who have done it and are today holding splendid positions, in the face of keen competition. Our catalogue and Free Lesson may interest you and a few hundred names of local graduates or employers may convince you. Moon College, 282-286 Yonge street, Toronto.

POLICE COURT

A well known local young man appeared in the police court this morning charged with assaulting his uncle. A good deal of evidence was taken on both sides, but the plaintiff withdrew the charge, upon the advice of the magistrate. It appears that the young man and his mother are living in a house which formerly belonged to the plaintiff, and he (the plaintiff) thought that he still had a claim on the property and it is said was constantly raising a row about it. On the present occasion, it is stated he came to the house and created such a disturbance, that he had to be ordered off the premises. He went out on the sidewalk and continued, and it is alleged, called his nephew some very offensive names. This was apparently too much for his nephew and he gave the old man a "right hander" on the jaw, which resulted in the case in court this morning. In giving his evidence the old man denied calling his nephew the names, and said that the blow he had got, hurt so bad that he could eat no breakfast. The case was dismissed without costs.

BACK IN THE OLD DAYS

PESSIMISTIC REMINISCENCE OF ONTARIO FARMING.

Joe Clark Draws a Picture of the Isolated Family In Winter Time That May Recall a Familiar Scene to Those Who Remember Less Scientific Farming Than We Have Nowadays.

Discussing the early days on the farm in Ontario, Joseph Clark says in a recent article in The Toronto Star: A great change has come over the scene since those early days. In the older-settled parts of Ontario today one would see little that corresponds with the picture drawn. Yet there are points where something similar may be met with. Even yet one may find an occasional farmer in Ontario who seems to have wandered away from early Illinois.

On one occasion I spent two or three winter days on a farm in Ontario. I slept upstairs—and never slept sounder—under plenty of blankets and quilts, but in the morning found snow drifted in streaks all over the attic or loft. Arising at daylight, I learned that the farmer had left, two hours earlier, for the bush, to haul a load of wood to town. Long before daylight, in zero weather, he had arisen, waded through deep snowbanks, to his stable, roused his sleeping horses and cows, and fed them a meal which nature never meant them to have. Why should a horse or a cow want to be roused up in the night to eat? It is doubtful whether a hog ever could be fattened if disturbed in its slumber to eat swill in the night. When I argued with the farmer about this, he said that he had to get up early that way to feed the stock, and, although I claimed that the stock didn't want to be fed so early, unless where they had had the habit forced on them by their owner, he took refuge in the reply that he fed his stock no earlier than his neighbors.

While he was out at the stable, his wife arose in the dark and prepared his breakfast, and the whole family was astir long before the sun. The man had gone to town with a load of stove-wood, but there was no supply for his own house. A log buried under the snow was scraped into view by the oldest boy, and from it he hacked enough wet and green chunks or chips to meet the momentary demands of mother. There was no kindling stored up anywhere, although the house stood within three hundred yards of a cedar swamp, from whence ten a day in mid-summer a year's supply for that house could have been secured. Except for taking out an occasional load of wood to sell in town—or dragging a log from the bush to the house, for cut wood was too valuable for home use—there was no work done in winter, except in feeding the stock. Yet the whole family arose two hours before daylight each morning, and thereby lengthened the idle day, utterly devoid of interest, except when some sleigh passed along the distant road. As a rule, there was in the stove a stick of wood too long to permit the door to shut, and, as the wood was green, a certain amount of interest attached to watching the end of the stick from which the sap bubbled and hissed. There appeared to be no books in the house, and no newspaper was subscribed for. The family, cooped up in a small house with snow yards deep, with no intercourse with neighbors, with nothing to read, without music of any kind, engaged in no domestic industry, except preparing meals and clearing up the mess—what could these really excellent people do with time and their talents, except cultivate a great weariness of each other.

The head of the family having started before daylight to deliver his load of wood at a house in town where he had agreed to deliver it, was home again by noon, and performed no other work that day. In that case, why was it necessary to arise in the night in order to do that day's work?

Having said that this family seemed to spend the day with nothing to interest them except when somebody drove along the distant road in a sleigh, let me add that at such times everybody ran to the window, and began guessing whose turnout it was. Very seldom could they all agree as to the identity of the horses and the driver. Each was willing—even anxious—to argue at length in support of his or her contention. Even after the subject had been worn dry and dropped, somebody, would remember something, and revive the dispute, somewhat after this fashion:

"Say, look here, if that was Sam Keller, where was his dog?"

"Where was his dog?"

"Yes, where was his dog? You know as well as I do, that Sam Keller hasn't been seen for two years, winter or summer, without that dog tearing along ahead or behind him."

"He could leave the dog at home, couldn't he?"

"But he don't leave him at home, you know as well as I do——"

"Maybe he had him in the sleigh, there. Sam thinks a heap of that dog, and on a cold day like this——"

"Cold day like this! A heap Sam Keller thinks of cold days. Long's he's got his own fur coat on, a heap he cares about his dog or a human, for that matter."

"Well, anyway, that was Sam Keller, dog or no dog."

"No it wasn't Sam Keller neither."

"Oh, stick to your opinion, right or wrong."

"Yes, I'll stick to it, for I know I'm right. And you stick to yours, that'll be time to me stickin' to our opinions."

"All right, all right."

"Yes—well—all right, too." Then turning to me: "He's so set in his opinions. Once he says a thing, it's got to be so, whether it is or not. He's just——"

"Oh, let up on it. What difference does it make whether it was Sam Keller or Christopher Columbus, the man's unknown by now, whoever he was."

Cause and Effect.

"He's a poet of passion, isn't he?"

"Yes; I've seen him fly into one when his verses were returned."—Boston Herald.

MARKET REPORTS.

Liverpool and Chicago Wheat Futures Close Lower—Live Stock—Latest Quotations.

CHICAGO, Feb. 23.—For the first time in nearly three years May wheat to-day sold under 90c a bushel. The market verged on demoralization. Disappearance of buying power was the chief cause. Decidedly nervous feeling prevailed at the close, which was at a net decline of 1⅛c to 1⅜c to ½c. The end of the day left corn ⅝c to ½c to ⅝c to ¾c down; oats off ½c to ⅝c to ⅝c, and hog products at 2½c to 5c to 15c to 17½c advance.

The Liverpool grain exchange closed ⅝d to 1d lower than yesterday on wheat and ⅜d to ½d lower on corn. Antwerp wheat closed 1½c lower, Buda Pest 3½c lower and Berlin 1½c lower.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Toronto Live Stock.

TORONTO, Feb. 23.—Receipts of live stock at the City Market as reported by the railways were 67 carloads, consisting of 650 cattle, 2806 hogs, 298 sheep and lambs and 76 calves.

Butchers.

Prime picked lots of butchers' cattle, of which there were few, sold at $5.80 to $6; loads of good, $5.50 to $5.75; medium, $5.20 to $5.40; common, $4.65 to $5.15; cows, $3 to $5.25; canners, $2 to $2.75.

Milkers and Springers.

Receipts of milkers and springers were liberal, selling at $40 to $70, and a few reached $80 per head.

Veal Calves.

Veal calves sold from $3.50 to $8.50, and one or two new milk fed geeals of extra quality at $9.

Sheep and Lambs.

Prices for sheep and lambs were easier. Sheep, ewes, $4.50 to $4.75; rams, $3.50 to $4; lambs, $5.90 to $6.35, and a few selected light weight lambs sold at $6.50.

Hogs.

Hog prices were steady at $7.20 for selects fed and watered, and $6.90 to drovers for hogs f.o.b. cars at country points. Hogs over 220 lbs. each were culled out at 50c per cwt. less than the above quotations. On Wednesday there were 900 hogs on the Toronto market bought by Mr. Harris, out of which he culled 250, which made many drovers feel sore.

East Buffalo Cattle Market.

EAST BUFFALO, Feb. 23.—Cattle, no receipts. Market, steady. Prime steers, $6.50 to $6.75; butcher grades, $5.05 to $6.25. Calves—Receipts, 150 head. Market active and steady. Haroun-al-Raschid to Charlemagne.

The only sovereign of the time who could compare with Charlemagne was the famous Haroun-al-Raschid who as the head of the Moslem world sent the keys of Jerusalem to the head of the Christian world, besides a striking clock, an ape and an elephant—things which impressed the imagination of those times as typifying that Charlemagne had been invested with the sovranty of Jerusalem and the lordship of the world.—T. A. Cook in "Old Provence."

Good Form

Hostesses at dinner must put guests of honor at the right of themselves and the hosts even if the usual sitting places are changed to suit the occasion. When a married woman entertains at dinner she puts at her right the husband of the woman whom they so wish to honor, and the wife must be at the right of the host. To place the guests of honor in any other position is to deprive them entirely of the distinction intended.

With a round table the matter of seating guests becomes simple, for there is no head and no foot, and the desired position arranges itself without change. Frequently the hostess does not have a seat directly opposite to the host, but in a circle this is not conspicuous.

With an oval or square table and eight guests the arrangement becomes complicated. Three persons on a side means that the hostess must abandon her usual place or she will have two women together and two men, than which nothing could show greater ignorance. There is nothing for the hostess then to do but to change her position, leaving her husband in that which he always occupies.

The woman guest of honor then goes at his right, and, if possible, the husband is put at the right of the hostess on the side of the table. When all the guests are married couples even the husband of the honor guest cannot be at the hostess' right, though she has abandoned her regular seat.

An English Custom.

The very sensible English custom of mentioning the date of departure in writing invitations for visits has become almost universal in this country, the exception being in the homesteads south of Mason and Dixon's line. There a friend or relation is asked to come and stay as long as convenient, and the stay sometimes stretches over months or years. There are always relations who are disposed to overlook any little discomfort that such a visit brings as well as the positive inconvenience they may be causing their hosts, and such is the courtesy of the people of this part of the country that the visit only ends at the visitor's will. Instances could even be given in which the visits of poor relations or friends have lasted the rest of their lives, the greatest courtesy and consideration being shown to them by host and hostess even where they became helpless invalids.

At the Dance.

A woman waits to be sought by her partner. When the music for the dance which she has promised him strikes up should he fail to seek her out she may expect an apology and plausible explanation for his delinquency.

If a man is doing duty as an escort on coming from the cloakroom he awaits his companion's appearance somewhere outside the ballroom door, at the head or the foot of the stairway or in the hall, having agreed with her beforehand just where they are to meet.

Before he fills his dance program with other names he asks a dance or two of the woman in his charge. He also holds himself in readiness to accompany her to the supper room if he sees that no one offers to serve as escort in that capacity.

On Letter Writing.

The girl who has a correspondence of about half a dozen or so of her schoolmates has formulated the following rules concerning her letter writing, to which she adheres:

Write name and address legibly and correctly on each envelope.

Write your own name and address in the upper left hand corner.

Place on each the correct amount of postage.

Before sealing see that in each envelope you have inclosed the correct letter.

Keep as close a duplicate of every letter as it is possible to do.

Never write personalities.

Clever Idea.

A girl who has just returned from a long visit, during which she collected a number of spoons which are souvenirs of the various places visited, recently made them the key to a table talk at a little luncheon. Beside each plate were two spoons bearing pictures or seals of various cities, and during the luncheon the guests were asked to tell some interesting fact about that particular city. All the guests declared that it was not only a unique method of directing the conversation, but the means of making the occasion most interesting.

Hint For Speechmaking.

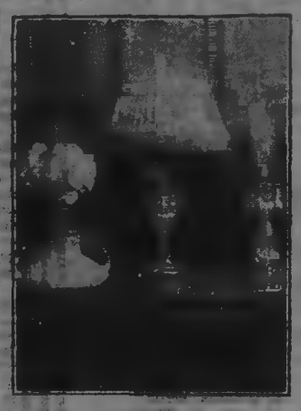
The frequent reason of failure in so called impromptu speeches at wedding breakfasts is the fact that the speaker is not brief in what he says. It is far better to utter only a few sentences, stopping while the others would have a person go on, than to occupy much time in which guests might be talking to each other were they given the opportunity. Then, too, if there are other speakers to follow the evening grows boresome if all talk for many minutes.

The Penalty.

Jinks—How much do you think a minister ought to get for marrying a couple? Fitkins—Well, if wholly unacquainted with them, perhaps he might be let off with six months.

THE HOME BEAUTIFUL.

Charming New Art Lamps Give an Artistic Effect.



SOME OF THE NEW ART LAMPS.

Gas, oil and electric lamps in the very newest and most approved style are here illustrated. Perfectly fascinating is the banquet lamp of crystal, with an empire shade of pink silk. And the bedroom candlesticks, which, by the way, may be fitted with electrical attachments if one wishes to sacrifice the colonial effect, are very new, with their wind shield for the flame and glass prisms.

The artistic housewife studies the lighting of her home as carefully nowadays as she does the preparation of her menus, for she knows that as much of the comfort of home depends upon suitable lights as upon matters thought to be of more essential importance.

New Woman's College in Egypt.

The new woman soon may be an important factor in old Egypt. A woman's college has been started in Cairo along the same general lines as an American or English college for girls. The institution was started as a part of a university founded two years ago by Prince Ahmed Fuad Pasha, uncle of the present khedive of Egypt. The prince is enthusiastic about the new project, and, speaking of the school for Mussulman women, he said: "It was an experiment which I resolved upon after mature consideration, with, I confess, some little misgiving. For an oriental country, where the women are not emancipated and where, of course, they still wear the face covering called a yashmak, this was rather venturesome, but I am thankful to say that by the blessing of Providence people were very little scandalized, and so success was assured. The young ladies are ordinary members of the community who are not intended for any profession. In fact, we have not as yet any degrees either in law or in medicine, although that will come before long, I hope, with a suitable increase of the means at our disposal. Lectures on the history of womankind, on motherhood, on household life, on hygiene, and so forth, are the staple items in the teaching on the female side, and those on motherhood I consider of vital importance, more particularly in a country like Egypt."

Blue Horsehair Chair Covers.

There are no pale blue horses outside of dream books, but there are several pale blue horse chairs in Continental Memorial hall, in Washington, furnished and designed on historical models by the Maryland chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution. The chairs are after a pattern still extant in the Hamilton Fish family of New York. The frames are of deep mahogany, and all have great glass claws and well carved pedestals. The sideboard is of dark, carved mahogany, and on each side are big mahogany receptacles for knives, forks and spoons. There are roomy settees, and the table no doubt will furnish the model for the housekeeper who inclines to the most graceful and useful model of the colonial banquet hall. The drapings are to be of blue, in colonial prints, hung from the massive lambrequin frames which were so dear to the ancient dames of the republic.

Good Way to Mend a Rug Fringe.

If your rug has a torn fringe do not put it in the attic, but mend the fringe. It is very easy to do and well worth your pains.

Cut off all the fringe, get a piece of pasteboard four inches square and wind around it yarn of a color to match the rug. Wind the yarn one way around the pasteboard five or six times and slip it off. Then put one end of the yarn through the end of the rug and pull the other end through and clinch it. Keep this up until you get all the way across the end of the rug. If only a little torn and you can match the fringe exactly you do not need to cut off all that is there. This method, of course, is equally good for any fabric fringe.

When Guests Appear.

For a good old fashioned treat when guests come in some winter evening try serving them with crullers and apple cider and see how they will like the combination.

To make the dainties core some good apples, fill the centers with any kind of preserved fruit and bake carefully. Serve sprinkled over with a little confectioner's sugar and a spiced prune on the top of each.

Cookery Points

Pare, quarter and core one dozen good cooking apples, steam over hot water until just tender, then finish cooking with three-quarters of a cupful of sugar and a grating of lemon peel and just enough of the lemon juice to keep the apples from sticking. When quite dry beat to a pulp. Melt four tablespoonfuls of butter and cook in it four tablespoonfuls of cornstarch. Add gradually the apple pulp and the yolks of four eggs, beaten slightly. Cook over hot water until the eggs are set, then put aside to cool. Shape into cylinder croquettes, dip into egg and crumbs and fry in deep, hot fat. If you do not wish to use so many eggs, three will do by substituting more cornstarch, a tablespoonful for each egg, or if you have stale sponge cake or macaroons or toasted biscuit substitute these for the eggs and cornstarch. The mixture should be as soft as you can handle conveniently. These are delicious served with a roast of pork or goose.

Spanish Nougat.

Ingredients are one and a half cupfuls of brown sugar, one-half cupful pale sirup, one-half cupful water, white of one egg, one teaspoonful vanilla, one cupful chopped mixed nut kernels. Boil sugar, sirup and water, stirring gently occasionally. When cooked sufficiently to reach the "soft ball" stage remove the mixture from immediate heat and beat the white of the egg to a stiff white froth until it can be cut through with a knife without breaking. On to this pour gently half the above mixture, beating it up constantly. The other half of the sirup still in the pan must now be boiled until on dropping some into cold water it becomes brittle, then beat this also into the half with the egg mixture. Now add flavoring and nuts. Have ready a pan lined well with waxed paper and into this pour the mixture and allow it to get cold before cutting in cubes.

A Good Dessert.

Souffle of Apples With a Border of Rice.—Prepare the rice in cream, etc., as for rice cake, and keep it of a strong, solid substance. Dress it round a buttered dish about three inches high; give it a nice shape, level and smooth. Have ready an apple marmalade, very thick. Mix with it four yolks of eggs well beaten, a small piece of butter and a pinch of salt; warm it upon the stove; then take the whites of four eggs well whipped, mix very lightly with the marmalade, put the whole in the middle of the rice and set in a moderately heated oven. When the souffle rises high send in to table at once or it will fall. Some cooks hold a salamander over it just before taking into the room.

Filled Cookies.

Cream together one cupful of sugar and two-thirds cupful of butter, add one egg, two-thirds teaspoonful cream tartar, one-third teaspoonful soda, four teaspoonfuls sweet milk, one teaspoonful vanilla, flour to make stiff; chill, roll very thin, put filling on one cooky, lay another over it; bake in quick oven.

Date Filling For Filled Cookies.—Stew one half pound dates and one-half cupful of milk and water together with one-half cupful sugar and one-half cupful shredded cocoanut till dates are soft. Cool before using.

Fine Peanut Wafers.

One quart of peanuts, one-half cupful of butter, one cupful of granulated sugar, one and one-half cupfuls of flour, two-thirds of a cupful of milk and one teaspoonful of vanilla. Chop nutmeats rather coarsely, cream the butter, add the sugar gradually and beat until very, very light. Add milk and flour alternately, then the vanilla, beating continually. Drop on greased tins from the end of a knife, placing them very far apart. Do not bake more than six at a time, as they are to be doubled over while hot, and they harden quickly.

Devil's Food.

Boil one cupful of bitter chocolate, one cupful of sour milk, one cupful of brown sugar and set aside until cool. Beat to a cream one cupful of granulated sugar, one scant cupful of butter; add three eggs, well beaten, and one cupful of sour milk. After this has been beaten add your cold chocolate, one teaspoonful of vanilla, two and one-half cupfuls of flour, sifted, with a teaspoonful of baking soda. Be sure to use baking soda and not baking powder. Then beat all together. Bake in layers in a hot oven.

Rocks.

One and one-half cupfuls of brown sugar, one cupful of butter, three eggs, two and one-half cupfuls of flour, three-fourth cupful of raising, one cupful of chopped walnuts, one teaspoonful of soda, one teaspoonful of cinnamon and two tablespoonfuls of molasses. Drop in teaspoonfuls.

Used Instead of Bonbons.

Joy For Johnny.

Johnny's mother was telling Johnny stories from Bible history. And Johnny for a long time was very silent. At last he sighed and looked up questioningly into his mother's face.

"When I get to heaven shall I know every one?" he asked.

"Yes, indeed," answered his mother.

"Certainly, dear!"

"Well, then, mother, if I'm very good—if I'm ever so good and ask him ever so nicely, do you think that David will let me touch his slingshot—just touch it—once?"—Philadelphia Times.

Got the Train Stopped.

When the late Robert Bonner purchased Maud S. he sent her to Charter Oak park to be trained. One day a friend of Mr. Bonner left New York to visit him at the park, but found that the train did not stop at that station. The conductor was polite, but said that he could not go against orders. At New Haven a halt was made, and Mr. Bonner's friend tried to bribe the engineer with a ten dollar bill, but in vain. He was then told that Charles P. Clark, the president of the road, was on the train, and he went to him.

"Why don't you see the conductor?" asked Mr. Clark.

"I have, but he will not disobey orders."

"Why not then go forward and bribe the engineer?"

"I tried bribery at New Haven, but it would not work."

The absence of evasion was the best policy. Mr. Clark not only gave orders to have the train stopped at Charter Oak, but promised some day to see Maud S. He had witnessed the attempt at bribery, and the frank confession of the offense seemed to please him.

Preparing For a Journey.

Jerome K. Jerome recalled with reverence a habit of his methodical uncle, who, before packing for a journey, always "made a list." This was the system which he followed, gathered from his uncle's own lips:

Take a piece of paper and put down on it everything you can possibly require. Then go over it and see that it contains nothing you can possibly do without.

Imagine yourself in bed. What have you got on? Very well; put it down, together with a change. You get up. What do you do? Wash yourself. What do you wash yourself with? Soap. Put down soap. Go on till you have finished. Then take your clothes. Begin at your feet. What do you wear on your feet? Boots, shoes, socks. Put them down. Work up till you get to your head. What do you want besides clothes? Put down everything.

This is the plan the old gentleman always pursued. The list made, he would go over it carefully to see that he had forgotten nothing. Then he would go over it again and strike out everything it was possible to dispense with. Then he would lose the list.

Chicago the Danger Line.

"Speaking of fishballs," remarked an ardent New England admirer of that form of food who was eating in a Dearborn street restaurant the other day, "I will tell you a sad, sad truth about them.

"If you order them in Boston they are practically all fish. Yes, sir—solid, bona fide fish. Move west a bit—to Albany, say. What happens? The amount of fish in each fishball has dwindled. Proceed to Buffalo. A certain self assertiveness begins to be apparent with the fish. On to Cleveland! Fishballs there are half potato, half fish, with the accent on potato. On to Chicago! There potato has the upper hand!"

He groaned.

"How is it in the far west?"

He leaned forward.

"I've never dared travel farther west than Chicago!" he whispered hoarsely.—Chicago Tribune.

Country Without a Millionaire.

That's the boast of New Zealand. "Sounds good," you say, "but they can't have any railroads, or telegraph, or telephone, or modern utilities of any kind, can they?"

Well, no, they couldn't, except for one thing—the fact that the nation itself has some people and property, hence some credit on which to raise a little money now and then and do things.

PETERBOROUGH CURLERS BEAT THE ALL STAR RINKS

Visiting Hardware Men Took a Hand at the Roarin' Game Last Night and an Interesting Match Was the Result

One of the most interesting matches played at the Peterborough Curling Rink this season took place last night when five rinks selected from the delegates to the Hardware Convention and representatives of every section of the province played a match with a similar number of Peterborough rinks. The homesters won by four shots on the total, winning three out of the five games. Campbellford, Barrie, Bracebridge, Orillia, Manvers, New Liskeard, Aurora, Newmarket, Galt, Smith's Falls, Bobcaygeon, Arnrior, Preston, Warsaw, Hamilton, and Drayton were all represented. The scores and rinks were as follows:

CURLING

The contest for the Peterborough-Lindsay cup played yesterday at Peterborough and Lindsay was peculiar in the number of one-sided games that were played and the size of the scores rolled up. When the four Peterborough rinks playing at home wound up with a lead of thirty-five shots it looked as if the Cup was coming to Peterborough, but alas, while the Peterborough skips at home were trimming the invaders, the Lindsay home skips were doing even worse things to the four rinks from Peterborough and the result was Lindsay won on the round by 127 to 115. SOME HOCKEY HAPPENINGS

With a lead to overcome on Kingston ice to-night the Oshawa juniors will have a hard row to hoe to get into the final with the Preston-Orillia winners. Should Preston and Kingston meet in the final round, as they did last year, the games should be worth going a long way to see.

A Kingston despatch says: Manager James T. Sutherland is quite agreeable to an exhibition game in Toronto between Frontenacs and an All-Star junior team, to show the Queen City residents the stuff his boys are made of and the brand of hockey they can play. He will not entertain the idea, though, until the season is over.

The Japanese Umbrella

A Chinese Episode and Its Horrible Effect

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Copyright, 1911, by American Press Association.

A whole year passed after Nelson's return from Asia before he found himself again treading an oriental street and rubbing elbows with slant eyed, blue blonsed Chinese. His present position in the custom house made it necessary that he should visit a well known silk importer, whose place of business lay in the heart of San Francisco's reconstructed Chinatown.

Jay Nelson had been glad enough to eliminate all memory of his last year in China. There had been one horrible incident from which he had fled, but whose shadow had lurked in the background of his daily life since his return to America. In broad daylight he had laughed at the fears that pursued his first sleepless, fear haunted nights. After awhile the fear gave place to a sense of security fostered by the practical workaday happenings of his busy life.

Today, however, as he passed along Dupont street and turned into a narrower thoroughfare there burst upon him the significant fact that this part of a great city was but a fragment of the old eastern world after all.

He had to pause once or twice and inquire his way, for the house of the importer was set in the heart of the web of streets and alleys. Then when his goal lay but a few yards ahead there sprang into sudden view, bobbing along in the crowd before him, a certain green and gold paper parasol, the meaning of which was all too clear to Jay Nelson. He had a vague realization that this emblem of an old horror might have been evolved from his own morbid fancy.

He pressed forward, eager to stretch forth his hand and prove that the Japanese umbrella was a thing of air, was an optical illusion. But always it danced before him like a will-o'-the-wisp, now showing a glint of gold and green and then melting into a dozen illusive tints.

Where it went there he too must follow until he could prove by actual contact with its surface that it was a creation of his fancy and not the dreaded emblem of the White Brotherhood.

It drew him on down into the very bowels of the earth.

The paper umbrella collapsed and was cast aside, while the bearer turned to confront Nelson. Then the latter awoke from his trance-like state and stared first at the strange face that confronted him, then about the small dungeon-like room, empty of furniture and reeking with foul odors and lighted by a single swinging oil lamp. Nelson's gaze came back to the face of the Chinese, and he shivered slightly, for the face was that of a member of the dreaded order—the sign was written on the man's brow.

Instantly Nelson whipped off his coat, holding it before him as a shield and backed to the stairway leading upward.

"Hold a moment," said the Chinese in the Cantonese dialect; "I am not alone."

"Who else?" demanded Nelson sharply in the same tongue.

"The brotherhood—at each stair head they await your coming if you contemplate flight," returned the Chinese imperturbably.

"What do you want with me?"

"Command of the big brother that you be brought before him for trial."

"He came on from Hongkong to seek me?"

The Chinese cackled shrilly. Then he spat contemptuously. "The brotherhood is everywhere, Captain Leeson—wherever there are offenders there also will be found a tribunal of the brotherhood."

"Why do you call me by Captain Leeson's name?" questioned Nelson warily.

"Because you are he."

"Suppose I am not?"

"You are!" asserted the man roughly. "The brotherhood does not make mistakes."

"You blunder this time. I am Nelson."

The other laughed derisively. "I was told you would claim that name. Nelson died that night."

"Ah," cried Nelson suddenly, "you are the big brother! This is the tribunal. You are alone; you thought to fool me; see you later, Tai Lao!" He started to leap up the stairs and then stopped short.

Tai Lao made no move to arrest his flight. He merely folded his long claw tipped fingers into either capacious sleeve and smiled widely.

It was this smile that halted Nelson's departure, the smile and a certain hissing whisper that sang down the stairway and bore warning on its breath.

Again he turned to the Chinese. "Have it over with—this court of yours! Be quick, for I have business to attend to—matters of importance."

"Very good, Captain Leeson," commented the man called Tai Lao. "Follow me."

He led the way to a shadowy corner and pushed open a door into another dimly lighted room. At a long table sat seven men, three on either side and one at the end. At the farther end of the table there stood a wide armed empty chair. Except for a low swung lamp above the table the room was devoid of other furnishing.

"Captain Leeson," he announced in a low voice, "on trial for betraying secrets of the White Brothers."

"Captain Leeson died, as you all know," said Nelson sternly. "I saw him die, killed by your orders. He died in the street of"—

"Silence!" menaced the leader. "He claims to be Nelson, the one who died that night."

The seven nodded in unison, but did not remove their gaze from Nelson's angry face.

He kept silence now, briefly reviewing the strange events that had snatched him from the busy streets of the city into as dismal a den of murderers as one might hope to find along the water front of any Chinese city.

Before his eyes there flashed a picture of his last year in China. Then he had been in the diplomatic service of his country. Leeson, his friend, an Englishman in the British employ at Hongkong—Inspector of health or something of that sort—had interested Nelson in his establishment of a leper colony down in Anam.

It was Leeson's ambition to clean out the lepers hidden in the city, to root them out from their places of concealment and transport them to the colony where preparations had been made for their segregation, where their cases should be studied and modern methods be employed.

It happened that the afflicted ones looked on the idea of banishment with distaste. They cared little to be herded together in a foreign province far from friends and familiar scenes. They cared nothing whatever for the benefits that might accrue to posterity through their segregation.

Leeson's efforts met with little success, and he brought the law to his aid. Thus he gained permission to capture the afflicted ones, and so his colony prospered for awhile. Then there was formed against him the society of the White Brothers, created to protect the lepers scattered throughout the city from Leeson's agents. Each one bore some mark of the disease, and they had some other emblem by which they might be known to each other if the mark of the disease was not plain enough. And this emblem was the green and gold paper umbrella, with its snaky twisting golden dragon coiling in and out of the green painted bamboo shoots.

Nelson remembered the first time he had seen them—that night of Leeson's carefully planned expedition into a suspected quarter. It was at night, and red lanterns had lighted the street down its crooked length. Suddenly there had burst upon them and the three agents who accompanied Leeson a hideous babel of cracked voices; a horrible spectacle of ghastly faces; a leprous mob that leered and jeered at them; that drove them point by point toward the end of the street of lepers; a yelling crowd that received the bullets from their revolvers and died noisily; a filthy crew that tried to touch them, that longed to render them as loathsome as itself.

Leeson had been killed, and Nelson tried to forget the sight as the rest of them got away. The next day he led a party back to the street, but it was deserted. Even poor Leeson's body had disappeared. After this outbreak the matter went under the supervision of a large medical corps, and the colony at Anam was augmented by several hundred cases. Nelson resigned from the service and went home, sickened of the whole dubious web of oriental life, thankful that he had escaped contact—that he was clean.

Now they had found him out they would take their revenge for his betrayal of their outbreak. It pleased them to call him by Leeson's name. As Leeson he would probably die in this hole in the ground under San Francisco.

Nelson determined to force some immediate action from the men who had sprung up in this faraway city to call him to account for his setting the hounds of law upon their trail. All his hideous dreams of the past year seemed to have been realized in the strange events of this day that would undoubtedly be his last on earth.

It had been a strange day, and even now, face to face with death—for the presence of these White Brothers meant nothing less—he seemed to be moving in a dream more frightful than anything his sleeping mind had conceived.

"Fire ahead," he said recklessly; "I'm not afraid of you. Come on, every devil's imp of you!" He flashed out the revolver he always carried just as they arose in a body and came at him, a ghastly company with stretching, clawing fingers and fiendish eyes.

Then Jay Nelson awoke. He sat up in bed, his brow dripping sweat and his heart pounding with excitement, for once more he had dreamed of the Japanese umbrella and the horrible band whose emblem it was. This was the worst dream of all, and he murmured devout thanks that it had been a dream.

Sitting there with the morning sunshine streaming into the room and a fresh breeze from the bay ruffling his hair, Nelson saw the early newspaper slid under his door. Eager to be in touch with the commonplaces of everyday life, he fetched it and read the headlines. After awhile, in a corner of the sheet, he read that the Hongkong authorities were satisfied that they had rid that city of its lepers. The White Brotherhood had been broken up, and most of its members were in Anam colony. The leader, Tai Lao, was dead. Captain Leeson's death had been avenged.

Jay Nelson went forth that morning a care free man to interview the silk importer in Chinatown. At last he was emancipated from fear. He would dream no more.

Were Kind to Him.

A West Philadelphia man who was severely injured some months ago when his horse took fright at an automobile and bolted, upsetting the carriage, has only recently been released from the hospital. He is well now and in the best of spirits notwithstanding the fact that severe operations were necessary in order to save his life.

A few days after he left the hospital a friend asked him if he had been kindly treated.

"Oh, yes!" he said. "Oh, yes, indeed! Considering the fact that they amputated both my feet, removed my collar bone, cut off my left thumb, trepanned my brain, took out a piece of my underjaw and sawed my left hip bone in two, I got along very nicely. They were most kind to what was left of me."—Philadelphia Press.

Beaconsfield the Dandy.

The dandyism Benjamin Disraeli affected in his dress is the subject of many pen pictures in Monypenny's "Life of Beaconsfield." At the age of nineteen he is described as wearing a black velvet suit with ruffles and black stockings with red clocks. A later portrait, in 1830, comes from a friend's diary, which has the following entry:

"March 29.—B. D. to dine with me. He came up Regent street when it was crowded in his blue surtout, a pair of military light blue trousers, black stockings with red stripes and shoes. 'The people,' he said, 'quite made way for me as I passed. It was like the opening of the Red sea, which I now perfectly believe from experience. Even well dressed people stopped to look at me.'"

What a Change!

"He used to kiss me every time we passed through a tunnel before our marriage," said the little woman, with sad reflections.

"And does he do so now?" asked the bosom friend.

"No; he takes a drink."—Brooklyn Eagle.

A ROMANTIC FARM.

Sandwich Golf Club Has Bought the Prince Homestead.

The town of Sandwich has long been distinguished as a place of beauty as well as for its historical interest, and one of the most lovely, as well as the most interesting spots in the vicinity has been secured for the new golf and country club, in which many men from Windsor and Detroit are interested. The Oak Ridge Golf Club was formed some ten years ago and had a nine-hole course on rented property below Sandwich, but as a long lease could not be obtained it was decided to give up this property and purchase grounds where permanent improvements might be made with some confidence that such expenditure would not be wasted. With this in view an option was secured on fifty-six acres of the Park Farm, and a stock company was incorporated and sufficient stock subscribed to purchase this property and provide funds to make a good start towards laying out a golf course and fitting up a clubhouse. The credit of originating this scheme and successfully carrying it through is due to Mr. R. M. Morton, and shareholders are congratulating themselves on having made such a good purchase, for in a few years this property will be worth double the money expended.

This venture will alter one of the most romantic places in western Ontario, for Park Farm was long ago the home of Col. John Prince, conspicuous for his forceful conduct during the Patriot rebellion in 1838, and particularly that part of it which culminated in the battle of Windsor, where, as Col. Prince's official report states, "of the brigands and pirates twenty-one were killed, besides four that were brought in at the close of the engagement, all of whom I ordered shot, and it was done accordingly." This was certainly a drastic measure, and a military council looked into the matter and it was discussed in the Imperial Parliament, where the great Wellington himself spoke in behalf of Col. Prince, declaring that the circumstances required vigorous treatment; that no mob should be allowed to enter a country and march against unprotected citizens without being severely dealt with. Certainly the shooting of these prisoners cleared Essex County of those styling themselves Patriots.

The coming of John Prince to Sandwich was an event in its history, for he introduced foreign tastes and a flavor of the English gentleman of leisure. He had been a barrister in Gloucester, England, and came to Canada in search of change and sport. It mattered little to him where he settled, so long as game was abundant and the company congenial. These conditions being fulfilled in Sandwich, to Sandwich he came in 1834, accompanied by his wife, three sons, five English servants, and a box of golden guineas so heavy two men were required to lift it. Two servants, man and wife, decided to try farming, so Prince looked about him, and finally purchased a beautiful piece of rolling land directly behind Sandwich. He stocked the farm with thoroughbred cattle imported from England, built a house, and placed his retainers on the land. The woman, however, was an expert cook, and, tiring of country life, she and her husband established themselves in a hotel in Sandwich, where for years their house was famous for old English comfort and the excellence of its dinners.

Prince then decided to occupy Park Farm himself. He added two large wings to the house, and turned it into what he called a shooting-box. He made the grounds beautiful with hedges, gardens and miniature lakes, he imported pheasants, peacocks and swans, and placed deer and other game in the natural woods adjoining. When he and his family were settled in Park Farm his hospitality knew no bounds; the house was soon filled with sportsmen, and the stables with their horses. Prince spent money lavishly, and was never known to refuse a loan nor take a note for security.

An Unprofitable District.

Two very interesting reports on portions of the Northwest Territories, southwest of Hudson Bay, have just been issued by the Dominion Geological Survey. They are of especial value to Ontario, on account of the fact that the region concerning which they give information is that part of the unorganized Northwest Territories, formerly part of the district of Keewatin, which Ontario is so strenuously endeavoring to have added to its area.

Judging from both reports there seems to be little prospect that the province will gain a region in which may be found any valuable economic minerals in paying quantities. Even if the difficulties of transportation are overcome, it is very doubtful whether the mineral found would repay working.

Big Chiefs.

"Big Chief" Elliott of the Six Nation Indians, who dropped in upon a Toronto newspaper, rules over a domain, namely, the reserve near Brantford. It is a 16 by 9 miles kingdom.

The chief is a natural orator, with a gift of eloquence, which observers say, held Sir James Whitney spellbound when the chief spoke with the deputation of patriots recently. "Big Chief" has a fluency which must be heard to be appreciated, and a vocabulary a Boston professor would envy. He is also a color-sergeant in the 37th Regiment.

Not to Be Forgotten.

"I say, do you think much of Slack?"

"I do unfortunately; he owes me a ten spot."

Abdominal Surgery.

Abdominal surgery first was attempted in France in the fourteenth century.

BUSY MAN AND WIFE.

A Very Modern Domestic Raiser In One Gasp.

Scene—A pretty little breakfast room in the home of Mr. John Blank, the "Busy Man." Mr. Blank is seen engrossed in the stock news in the morning paper, while Mrs. Blank is charming in a pale blue negligee and sips her coffee with an "I've made up my mind" air.

His Wife—John, will you do me a favor?

The Busy Man (without looking up from his paper)—Yes, my dear. What is it?

His Wife (nervously)—Well, I—er—I—

Busy Man (impatiently)—Harry, my dear. What is it?

His Wife—I have a confession to make, John.

Busy Man—Don't bother; confessions take up so much valuable time.

His Wife (wistfully)—I don't love you any more.

Busy Man continues reading his paper.

His Wife (angrily)—Didn't you hear what I said?

Busy Man (apparently annoyed at the interruption)—Yes, that's all right; that's all right. Don't worry.

Busy man (exasperated)—Isn't that just like a woman! Now, you know, Helen, that I can't take the time from my business for anything so frivolous.

Returns to paper.

His Wife (leaning forward)—But, John, I love some one else. You—

Busy Man (without glancing up)—Of course, of course. (To himself) Sugar has gone up again.

His Wife (sitting up very straight)—And, John Blank, I am going to run away with him!

Busy Man (rising and pushing his chair back)—Please yourself, my dear, only don't expect me to see you off or attend to any of the little details of your departure, because just now I am so busy—haven't a minute—must rush to the office now. (Turning at the door) Shall I see you again?

His Wife (helpless and tearful)—Well, if that's the way you are going to act, John Blank, I shall stay right here. You've just spoiled it all!

Exit John. Curtain.—L. R. S. Henderson in Life.

The Wrong Scent.

A prominent citizen of Washington was traveling over a line of railway with which he was unfamiliar. At a certain point the road passes a fertilizer factory, the odor from which is offensive. It is particularly disagreeable to a lady who is compelled to make the journey daily. As a protection from the obnoxious atmosphere she is accustomed to carry a bottle of lavender salts. As the train approached the factory she produced the phial as usual, unstopped it and applied it to her nostrils. Presently the odors from the factory began to permeate the car. The Washington man endured it as long as he felt that he could. At last he rose to his feet and, approaching the lady, said in his most polite manner, "Madam, may I request you to replace the stopper in that bottle?"—Youth's Companion.

His Morning's Work.

He—Have you washed the dishes, dear?

She—Yes.

"Made the beds?"

"Sure."

"Fed the birds?"

"All of 'em."

"Given the fish fresh water?"

"All done."

"Swept the stoop?"

"Clean as a whistle. But what have you been doing all morning, John?"

"Me? Oh, I've been waiting all morning for you to come out and help me pump up the automobile tires!"—Yonkers Statesman.

Too Magnetic.

"I'm sorry to have to bring this watch to you for the third time this month," apologized the man with the fur trimmed overcoat, "but it has become magnetized again."

"You ought to take something for your blood," grumbled the watch repairer; "there's too much iron in it."—Chicago Tribune.

The Fanciest Ever.

New Boarder—Haven't you got any fancy dishes here?

Rural Landlord—Sure thing! Mame, bring the gentleman that mustache cup your grandfather used to use!—Puck.

Salvation For One.

Dominie—Why don't you two brothers join the church?

One of the Two—We can't both join, for one of us has to weigh the coal.

A Happy Marriage.

A chauffeur wooed a suffragette.
Acquaintances report
That the turtledoves first met
One day in court.

Their married life, so runs the tale,
Is happy and sublime,
For they are never out of jail
At the same time
—Kansas City Journal.

Sure Thing.

Bill—When all the fools are dead I don't want to be alive. Jill—Well, don't worry; you won't be—Tennessee [illegible]

WEDDING BELLS

FROST—PETERS.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized on Wednesday, Feb. 22, at 4.30, when Miss Mary Matilda Peters, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James, 491 Parnell street, became the bride of Mr. Thomas Albert Frost, son of Mr. Jack Frost, 504 Albert street. The bridesmaid was Mrs. Barton, sister of the groom. Mr. Geo. Peters, brother of the bride, supported the groom. Rev. Mr. Brown, pastor of St. James' Methodist church, performed the ceremony. The bride entered the artistically decorated parlous on the arm of her father, who gave her away. The wedding march was played by Miss Alice Downer, cousin of the bride.

The bride was beautifully attired in navy blue ladies' cloth. She wore the usual bridal veil and orange blossoms, and carried a bouquet of white carnations. After the nuptial knot was tied and congratulations passed the wedding guests, which numbered about sixty, entered the dining room, where a sumptuous repast awaited them. The table was beautifully arranged with red and white carnations. The evening was spent in dancing and games. At midnight refreshments were served. It was in the wee small hours of the morning before the happy gathering dispersed.

The young couple were the recipients of many beautiful and costly presents, showing the high esteem in which they are held by their friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Frost will reside in their new home on Stewart street.

CONGREGATIONAL MEETING HELD AT GEORGE ST. CHURCH

A very successful congregational meeting was held at George street Methodist church on Wednesday evening, an excellent programme being provided by some of the members of the church. Some of the members who are deserving of special mention were as follows: Miss L. Smith, piano solo; Mrs. W. Routley, solo; Mrs. Downey, reading. Mrs. Kendry kindly loaned her gramaphone for the evening, which, along with numerous other selections, went to make up a most enjoyable evening.

Mr. Dumble occupied the chair. After the programme tea was served by the Ladies' Aid.

ONE DAY ENOUGH

GUELPH, FEB. 23.—When seen this morning, Manager Pete Charlton of the Guelph Professional Hockey team, said that they have disbanded and the players will depart for their respective homes. The gate last night after expenses had been paid, left $2.40 to be divided among the players, or thirty-five cents each. Though they might take chances on a bigger gate next game, they thought it was best to disband. Accordingly the day after the team made its debut here it made its adieu.

Mr. Norman ("Buck") Irving is at the back of the team, and after having made a poor showing in the Eastern Pro. League with the team at Belleville, the whole bunch were transferred to Brantford, where they fared no better. As a last resort he returned to his old stamping ground in Guelph, with the result that he received poor encouragement at the hands of the hockey fans here, who demonstrated that if Guelph was not good enough at the start for a pro team, it certainly will not support one at the fag end of the season.

CARNIVAL AT CHEMONG

The carnival at Chemong Village on Wednesday night was a great success, although the weather was not very favourable. There was a large number in costume. The prize winners were as follows:

Best dressed lady—Miss Clara Coppaway.

Best dressed lady and skater—Miss Daisy Whetung.

Indian 1 mile race—John Tobice.

OSHAWA SCOUTS ON THE TRAIL

KINGSTON, FEB. 23.—Frontenac players say that the Oshawa junior team seems bound to try and win by some method, when it cannot beat Kingston on the ice. They claim Oshawa had representatives here to-day making inquiries about all the Frontenac players, particularly with reference to time of residence. Everything was found in Frontenacs' favour. Oshawa has found that it might just as well have not bothered about Marchand, as Frontenacs have filled the goal gap in such a way that they still remain undefeated.

DATES ARRANGED FOR STANLEY CUP GAMES

OTTAWA, FEB. 23.—Mr. William Foran, Stanley Cup trustee, announced to-night that only two of the challenges would be accepted. He received this morning from the Port Arthur club another formal application for dates. The Port Arthur team has won ten straight games, and considers itself entitled to a chance at the silverware. The team includes Mike O'Leary, an Ottawa City League star, who was signed up last month, also Pat McDonough of Toronto and Beaverton lacrosse fame. The Port Arthur club suggests that it be allowed ot Prince Albert team at Fort William ot decide which of the two should come down to play at Ottawa. Mr. Foran is agreeable to this plan of elimination, and will ask the Prince Albert club to confer with Port Arthur. It is not thought, however, that the Saskatchewan champions would consent to this. They want to be beaten by the cup-holders or not at all.

"We have not yet decided how many games will be played," said Mr. Foran, "but in any event we will not accept more than two challenges, and the teams which show the best qualifications will be brought along. Yes, we have thought of sudden-death games, but it is doubtful if this would be fair to the visiting clubs." The Galt team loks strongest on paper, and in any event it will get dates with Ottawa.

SPECIAL ADDRESS

Rev. A. E. Armstrong, the Assistant Secretary of Foreign Missions for the Presbyterian Church in Canada will pay a visit to Peterborough on Sunday in connection with the Young People's Missionary Institute. He will give a special address in St. Paul's church in the morning, will speak at St. Andrew's in the afternoon and in the evening will preach at the annual Young People's service in Knox Church.

PORT ARTHUR WON

PORT ARTHUR, FEB. 23.—Port Arthur's team of Stanley Cup challengers to-night won their thirteenth game in the New Ontario League series, beating Schreiber by the score of 18 to 0. Port Arthur set out to get eighteen goals to put their season's total up to 100. They got 9 in the first half and scored the eighteenth with eight minutes to spare.

Orillia 5, Preston 2

ORILLIA, FEB. 23. —In the best local junior O.H.A. match of the season to-night Orillia defeated Preston by 5 to 2. The first half was excellent hockey, only one goal being scored. This was scored by L. Jupp for Orillia. In the last half the Orillia boys scored four, while the visitors scored two. Short and Ploethner starred for the visitors and Butterfield and the Jupp boys for Orillia. The return match will be played in Preston on Monday night, after which the winner plays Kingston for the championship. The line-up:

Referee—E. J. Livingstone, Toronto.

Another Modern Miracle Locomotor Ataxia Cured

The Sufferer Had Been Given Up as Incurable by Several Doctors—Hospital Treatment Also Failed—Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Worked the Miracle.

Before the discovery of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, locomotor ataxia was considered an incurable disease. It has been fully demonstrated, however, that this disease can be cured through the use of these pills, where the treatment is persisted in, and the directions carefully followed.

Locomotor ataxia is a disease of the spinal cord, and first shows itself in an inability to stand erect when the eyes are closed, or in the dark. It is characterized by peculiar disturbances of the gait, and difficulty in governing the motions of the legs. One of the commonest and earliest signs is a tired feeling, particularly noted in the knees and ankles. This sensation is provoked by slight exertion, and is not relieved by rest. Often a numb feeling is associated with it, and these two symptoms are always present in the early stages. As the disease progresses, there is an increase in the duration and extent of the numb feelings, covering at times the foot alone, then extending to the leg. The disease is usually of slow growth, and the increase and intensity of the symptoms is not noted, but its progress is constant, and gradually approaches a total lack of feeling in the legs, causing a wobbling gait and an entire inability to govern the steps. As the disease progresses the patient loses all control over bowels and water, and becomes utterly helpless, and has to be cared for like a child.

In proof of the power of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to cure this terrible malady, Mrs. Sarah Jane Ruller, of Antler, Sask., says: "For seven years from 1900 to 1907, my son James was afflicted with locomotor antaxia. During that time he was treated by several of the best doctors in the West, but their treatment failed to be of any benefit, and he kept growing worse and worse, till finally he lost all control of his limbs, and could not move at all. I had to carry him from his bed to a chair, where I would have to tie him, to enable him to sit up. He was as helpless as an infant; he lost all control of his kidneys and bowels, and we daily looked for death to relieve him of his suffering. In 1906 we sent him to the Brandon Hospital, hoping that the treatment there would benefit him. In this, though, we were disappointed, and the hospital doctors advised me to take him home, as they said they could do nothing for him. At this time a friend advised the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Being willing to try anything in the hope of finding relief for my boy, I bought a supply. In less than three months I noted a slight improvement in his condition. In six months he could walk once more and from that on the improvement continued, till now he is fully cured and once more able to attend school and do the chores about the house. What Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have done for him is truly wonderful, and I would strongly recommend them to all sufferers, for they most certainly saved my boy's life."

In substantiation of what Mrs. Ruller says, Mr. A. E. Steele, the well-known lumber and coal dealer of Antler, writes: "With reference to what Mrs. Ruller says concerning her son's cure by Pink Pills, I have no hesitation in saying that what she says is absolutely true in every particular, as I am personally acquainted with the case."

This great cure is not the only one performed by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They have brought thousands back to health and strength after some of the best doctors in the country have been forced to give up the case as incurable. Not only in cases of locomotor ataxia, but in cases of partial paralysis, sciatica, acute rheumatism, and many other severe ailments have they been successful. The whole secret of their wonderful success is in their power to make rich, red, health-giving blood—the one essential for good health. The pills are sold by all medicine dealers, or direct by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50, from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Fruit Growers That Are Helped By Trade Agreement For Untaxed Fruit

Orchards on North Shore of Lake Ontario Will Find Readier Market and Higher Prices

OSHAWA, FEB. 22.—In the city a multiplicity of milk dealers distribute their product with five times the number of waggons and five times the amount of sleep-disturbing noise which would be necessary if the delivery were systematized. In the country, on the other hand, the farmers are learning the value of co-operation, and the apple-growers of this and the Pickering-Port Union sections have a co-operative society which enables them to market their fruit with economy and facility. One of them is W. H. Stainton, and he told the Star about the Association's methods with some enthusiasm.

And it is really something to enthuse over. Instead of scattered gangs of apple pickers covering the territory in a more or less haphazard manner, the association's picking gang goes from farm to farm as the various kinds of apples ripen, put them in barrels, and send them off to the packing houses at Oshawa, where they are promptly graded, and packed in barrels and boxes for the market. Every barrel bears the grower's number, and if complaint is made, the fruit may thus be traced to the farm where it was grown. A standard grading is secured by the use of the central packing house, and time and money are saved by the process.

Benefits Fruit Growers.

Mr. Stanton is a Conservative. He said that he had heard so much talk of opposition to the reciprocity agreement that he was unwilling to make a pronouncement upon it from a general standpoint. But as to the apple growers he had no doubt of the stimulating effect it would have on their business. So far as that went, he foresaw the greatest possible merits in the measure. "You know," he said, "we've had American buyers over here to get our apples, but when they added the duty to our price, they would shake their heads and go away. If the agreement is passed, I believe we can reach the nearby American market with apples which we cannot export at present. There is, for instance, the Bellflower variety. I'll get you some and show you our problem." He fetched three fine yellow apples, quince like in shape and colour. "Now, see these black spots" he said. "They are caused by picking. The apple is so soft that a slight pressure marks it. It is therefore impossible to get a good price for it if shipped a long-distance. Over in the States, however, it is a great favourite, and we could ship it in there under reciprocity to great advantage. There are other soft apples of the same sort, Tallman Sweets for instance, to which the same thing applies. These are no use for export to the Old Country, where they want our hardest varieties such as the Ben Davis. Even our Spies find none too good a sale in England.

"There's no denying," he concluded, "that the reciprocity agreement seems to be all to our advantage. Sometimes we've had hundreds of barrels of the softer apples left on our hands. I don't think that would happen under the new conditions."

Just What We Wanted.

An officer of the same association, but not a Conservative, is Mr. E. Lick, a prosperous farmer who lives between Oshawa and Whitby. He is even more enthusiastic than Mr. Stainton. "This agreement," he said, "is just what the farmers of Lake Ontario's north shore have been hoping might some time come around. We've wanted this for years."

"What good will it do you?"

"We will have a better market for our apples, and it will probably lead to the growing of small fruits, such as raspberries and black currants. Our strawberries already find a sale in the Canadian market after the Niagara crop has begun to wane."

"How much a barrel would it add to the value of your apples?"

"Well, I've been saying 50 cents a barrel in the case of Snows, McTavish reds, and Gravensteins. Also it would help us to get rid of poor-keeping species, such as the Tolman Sweet. Moreover, I believe it would give an encouragement to dairying."

"You think that there will be more dairying done in this section?"

"Indeed I do. I am looking to the time that's going to be. Even in the last three or four years there has been an increase in it. Under reciprocity that increase will be greater. Winter dairying will afford work during the slack season, and is bound to become popular. To a limited extentthe new conditions will likely develop poultry raising in this district."

"How much an acre would you say the reciprocity agreement would add to land values hereabouts?"

"I would say from $10 to $20 an acre, depending on the quality and condition of the land. The agreement comes at an opportune time, because there has of late been a great awakening as to the care of orchards. New trees are being planted, and three or four times as many farmers are looking after and spraying their orchards as ever before."

"Then the agreement suits you in every respect?"

"It does. I never dreamed that Canadians could get such a thing from the United States, I know there are manufacturers who don't like it, but I've met only two farmers who are opposed, both Reformers, strange to say. And lots of Conservative farmers are favourable. The truth is that the manufacturers are afraid that the pact with the United States will be followed by an increase in the preference granted Great Britain. But these men have been having their turn for a long time, and it is time the farmer had a chance. We're paying almost the same wages to our help as the manufacturers, and adding board besides."

"Isn't that a little overdrawn?" asked the interviewer.

"Not a bit. Manufacturers hire lots of men at from $8 to $10 per week. Last year I paid an ordinary farm helper $250 plus his board and the keep of a horse. Another, who boarded himself, I paid $10 per week."

Simply Pure Rot.

R. W. Grierson is another farmer who expresses delight, and his brother, J. S., an Oshawa lawyer, is equally pleased. "I don't see how reciprocity in natural products affects the manufacturer, except favourably," he declared. "This talk about 'loosening the ties of Empire' is pure rot. I believe the agreement will enhance the value of farm lands from $10 to $15 per acre. As to British capital, it would go to the worst dagos in existence if they could put up the security and show the probability of profits. The more prosperous is Canada, the more readily will the Britisher invest his money within her borders."

Mr. Grierson was the only Oshawan who seemed to think the loyalty cry worth alluding to at all. Objections to the agreement heard in this town are largely the result of the fears of its manufacturers that freer trade will not end with natural products, but will be later extended to include manufactured articles.

W.C.T.U. ITEMS OF INTEREST

The matter in this Department is supplied by the Peterborough Branch of the Women's Christian Temperance Union, which has arranged for its publication.

THE NEED OF THE HOUR.

Fling forth the triple-coloured flag to dare
The bright, untravelled highways of the air,
Blow the undaunted bugles, blow, and yet
Let not the boast betray us to forget;
Lo, there are high adventures for this hous—
Tourneys to test the sinews of our power.
For we must parry—as the years increase—
The hazards of success, the risks of peace!

What do we need to keep the nation whole,
To guard the pillars of the State? We need
The fine audacities of honest deed;
The homely old integrities of soul;
The swift temerities that take the part
Of outcast right—the wisdom of the heart;
Brave hopes that Mammon never can detain,
Nor sully with his gainless clutch for gain.

We need the Chomwell fire to make us feel
The common burden and the public trust
To be a thing as sacred and august
As the white vigil where the angels kneel.
We need the faith to go a path untrod,
The power to be alone and vote with God!

—Edwin Markham.

The curse of the liquor traffic is everywhere. It is always a curse. In Ontario the situation is steadily improving, but both in amendments to the law and in administration of the law there are needed eternal vigilance and unshrinkable activity.—Globe.

Quebec leads Ontario in temperance reforms, says the little Welsh secretary of the Quebec branch of the Dominion Alliance.

Quebec was the keystone in the arch which the temperance people of Canada were trying to build; and the reason for this position was that Quebec had a Government, which was absolutely in sympathy with the temperance movement.

"Sir Lomer Gouin," said Mr. Roberts, "would sacrifice politics any time for the cause of prohibitive legislation. We have no three-fifths clause in Quebec. We do not live under an unbenevolent despotism but in an enlightened and progressive democracy," he declared.

But in Montreal we don't send our drunkards to jail," said the speaker. We have democratic methods of treating the liquor traffic. Our inebriates are sent to places for special medical treatment and the Government foots the bill.

Work of the Roman Catholics.

"The best thing you Protestant people can do is to catch up with the Roman Catholics of Quebec," he advised. The leader of the Roman Catholics in Quebec, Archbishop Bruchesi had given the pledge of temperance to 200,000 of his people in that Province.

The temperance convention recently assembled in Toronto places itself on record against the handicap of the three-fifths vote. The W.C.T.U., at their last convention, also protests against the clause.

Keeping Everlastingly At It.

The above is a well tested recipe for success. A notable instance of its efficacy is related in a Kansas paper. There lives a woman in that state who has defeated fifteen attempts to place a saloon in the town where she lives. As soon as she hears of an application being made for a saloon license, this alert worker is at hand with evidence of the unfitness of the would-be proprietor of a remonstance that prevents the license from being issued. She is said to have ridden hundreds of miles on horse back to keep her town dry, and she confidentially asserts, "As long as I live and am able to travel, there shall never be a saloon in my town."

What one woman can do, others may accomplish with equal success if they use the same method—"keeping everlastingly at it."—The Templar, N.S.

A Millionaire's Advice.

John D. Rockfeller says: "Let me importune everyone to abstain from strong drink. No matter where we go, we see much of the effects of liquor. Homes and families are ruined by this curse alone. Why will men fall victims to the poison? No man can succeed in business who uses strong drink, and no person has a place in better society who falls to its power. Men start out by taking a tipple. It is that first little drop that paves the way. Never in my life have I tasted a drop of drink. Even a little is too much for any man."—Selected.

The late Bishop of London, Dr. King, was once the subject of an amusing misunderstanding on the part of a little girl. Dr. King had been sitting in the park, and the chair being low, he experienced some difficulty in rising, when a small child of ten came to his assistance. "Shall I help you, sir?" she asked. "It is very kind of you, my dear," said the bishop, much touched and a little amused. "But do you think you are strong enough?" "Oh, yes," she replied readily, "I have often helped my daddy when he was much drunker than you are!"

"There are three kinds of temperance bones," said a lecturer the other day, "wishbones, jawbones, and backbones. Make your own definitions, and the other fellow will classify you."

Hon. Mr. MacKay on Provincial Finances

CLEAR-CUT AND CONVINCING SPEECH

Deficit of $553,363.25--Vigorous Colonization Policy for Northern Ontario Advocated--Industrial Education--Scarcity of Teachers--Reforestration--Reciprocity and Other Subjects Eloquently Dealt With.

In continuing the debate on the Budget, Hon. Mr. MacKay, Leader of the Opposition, spoke as follows:

Mr. Speaker: This debate has now occupied some two weeks, and has covered a wide range of subjects. The subjects have been interesting or otherwise, largely, according to one's view point; but I am glad to say, Sir that in the main the spirit that has pervaded this debate has been one of courtesy, moderation, and sweet reasonableness. In contrast to some of the jingling and somewhat jingoistic speeches of honorable gentlemen opposite that of the latest acquisition to this House was rather pleasant as to method and manner of delivery. The modesty he displayed was no doubt due to the fact, Sir, that he sits on this side of the House.

Current Receipts and Expenditures.

The annual announcement by the Honorable, the Provincial Treasurer, as to the financial standing of this province at the close of any fiscal year is always important, and deserves careful consideration. The question of the correctness of the statement as to the assets and liabilities has been ably dealt with by the honorable the member for West Wellington.

Just a few words as to the correctness or incorrectness of the financial statement as to current receipts and expenditures. In making contrast I do not propose to hold the Honorable the Provincial Treasurer to the position which he took while a member of the Opposition; but, Sir, it is eminently fair, it is only right that I should introduce the gentleman to himself as Provincial Treasurer. I desire, therefore, Sir, to introduce the Provincial Treasurer of 1911 to himself as Provincial Treasurer during the years 1905 and 1906. If, Sir, we are to understand the finances of this country, if honorable gentlemen sitting in this House, if the people of the province, are to have any intelligent conception of how the finances of this province stand, we must have, Sir continuity of system in the classification of accounts, else it will be quite impossible to make a comparison from year to year, and it will be quite impossible for the people of this province to understand where we are at financially. It will not do, Sir, to allow the Honorable, the Provincial Treasurer to juggle with figures and to transpose figures at will in order to produce an apparent surplus. He plainly announced to this House, Sir, that there was the small balance at the end of the last fiscal year of current receipts over current expenditures, giving the exact figures as $3,406. Sir, I desire to tell him frankly and plainly and to tell the honorable gentlemen of this House, and the people of this province, that that statement cannot be justified, is not true, on the classification formerly made by the Provincial Treasurer. Nor can it be justified or upheld on the basis of any classification of current receipts and current expenditures as distinguished from capital receipts and capital expenditures, that any sane intelligent accountant would make. May I be permitted to remark, Sir, that I do not idolize a surplus. There may occur in the history of this province, as in the history of any business enterprise, occasional circumstances which will demand that the province as an individual should draw upon his credit for a particular year, and should perchance make expenditures beyond current receipts. A series of deficits, however, such as we have experienced in late years is something to be avoided. In any event, Sir, the finances of this province should not be juggled or shuffled time after time in order to produce a seeming surplus. There is no such virtue in the having of a surplus as will justify the production of a dishonest financial statement. I contend, Sir, as I have always contended, that the moneys received from the absolute sale of crown lands cannot truthfully or reasonably be treated as aught else than receipts on capital account. When this province parts absolutely and entirely with any land all possibility of a future receipt from that land is gone, and, therefore, the moneys received from the sale should be credited to capital account. What, Sir, would be thought of a farmer who owned two hundred acres of land who for several years worked the same, and year by year struck a balance sheet showing say $500 a year gain, i.e., that his current receipts exceeded his current expenditure by $500. If, Sir, he made any such contention the neighbors would send for his friends to take care of him, under the impression that something had gone wrong with the old man's upper story. Well, Sir, it is exactly by such a method that the Honorable, the Provincial Treasurer arrives at results, and deliberately and coolly proclaims that there was a surplus last year of $6,406. I do not purpose, Sir, to allow any such dishonest statement to go unchallenged in this House. Were it not for the absolute slavery of party politics that exists in this House and in this province, no Provincial Treasurer would dare flaunt such a dishonest and misleading statement in the face of this House, or before the people of this province. Now, Sir, allow me to introduce the Honorable, the Provincial Treasurer to himself as Provincial Treasurer in the years 1905 and 1906. There is an old Spanish proverb which says, "That you may always appeal from Phillip drunk to Phillip sober," allow me, therefore, to introduce the Honorable, the Provincial Treasurer to himself as he stands before the mirror of his own financial statements of 1905 and 1906. At p. 5 of his Budget speech, Sir, as published by this Government and as paid for by the people of this province the honorable gentleman is absolutely clear that the receipts from the sale of lands must be treated as capital and not as current receipts. In this he was right. Let me apply this position to his financial statement for which again the people of this province pay, and what do I find? I find, Sir, that last year from the absolute sale of lands the province received the following two items: $442,109.47; $10,857.42, making a total capital receipt under this head of $442,968.89. The honorable gentlemen have the printed statement before them; there is no doubt as to the facts, and the dishonesty and the deception of this year placing such items in current receipts, in order to produce an apparent surplus, is too painfully manifest.

Again, Sir, take the item of bonus on timber sales: At p. 4 the Honorable, the Provincial Treasurer's budget speech of 1905 we find the following: "Now we distinguish the bonus received from pine timber sales as being a special payment of capital account"; then again at p. 5 he says: "It is, I contend, a capital asset, and such I propose to treat it." Then again, Sir, at p. 4 of his financial statement of 1906 will be found the following statement: "Of the revenue, the bonus on pine timber sales sold under the former Government, $920,000, may be considered as being paid on capital account"; so that, Sir, in 1905 and 1906 he was very properly treating the bonus received on timber sales as a capital and not a current receipt. Apply this classification, which is a proper classification, to his this year's statement, and we must deduct under the heads of "Woods and Forests" the amount received as a bonus on timber sales, namely $92,296.36. Adding these two items together, namely, the amount received for the sale of crown lands ($442,968.89) and the amount received as a bonus on the sale of timber, namely, $192,396.36, you have in all under these two heads, a capital receipt, wrongly and dishonestly placed in the current receipt column of $535,365.25.

Now, Sir, if you take the alleged surplus of $3,484.59 from the $535,365.25 you arrive, according to the Honorable, the Provincial Treasurer's own statements, according to his own position an actual cash deficit last year of $531,878.66. and yet, Sir, in order to mislead this House, in order to mislead the people of this province, the Honorable, the Provincial Treasurer deliberately transfers the large items already mentioned from the column of capital receipts to that of current receipts, and thus produces a bogus and imaginary surplus of $3,484.59, while he knows, and every sane man in this House knows and every truth respecting man will assert, that there is an actual deficit of $531,878.66.

If, Sir, I desired to go further and desired to hold the honorable gentleman to his contention when financial critic of the Opposition, where would he land? I find, Sir, at p. 5 of his budget speech for 1905 the following statement: "Sir, we contended at times when we were in Opposition that all crown lands receipts should be treated as received on capital account. . . . The late Mr. E. F. Clarke, one of the ablest financial men who ever represented a constituency in this Legislature, was especially wont to argue that that should be done."

Sir, were we thus to introduce the Honorable, the Provincial Treasurer to-day to himself as financial critic of the Opposition in years gone by, and were to hold him to his then contention what would be the result? I take up the financial statement issued by him, and I find that for the sale of lands last year the Government received $442,968.89, that the "Crown Lands Receipts" were $1,835,062.71, making a total of $2,277,049.60. Now Sir, deduct the bogey surplus of $442,968.89, and you would have according to the Honorable, the Provincial Treasurer's contention, and critic for the Opposition, the astounding deficit last year of $2,273,565.01. Sir, I repeat that if the financial statement penned year by year by the Honorable, the Provincial Treasurer of this province, is to be of any value at all, if it is not to become a mere laughing-stock, there must be continuity in the method and classification of our finances, and current receipts and expenditures should be truthfully distinguished from capital receipts and capital expenditures. When the province sells lands the fact should be truthfully shown in the financial statement and the sale price and the money received for the sale of any such lands should be treated as a capital receipt and not one of current account. Were it not for the curse of party slavery no Provincial Treasurer would dare stand up in a House such as this and make the statement he has made, much less would he dare publish such financial statement. The importance of honestly and truthfully dealing with our finances cannot be overestimated. A very substantial portion of [illegible] up of the receipts from Woods and Forests. If then, our forests are being gradually diminished, and our timber year by year sold, and nothing done by way of conservation of our forest wealth or by way of reforestration it follows, as an absolute certainty that our revenue under that head must gradually decrease, and in time be absolutely wiped out. This, Sir, is the serious phase of the question and the one that particularly calls, not only for an honest statement of the facts, but, Sir, for an honest effort to remedy the result, the unavoidable result, of the facts as they now exist. We note under this head what happened in the United States, largely owing to the same accursed slavery of the party flag: For the past quarter of a century the experts at Cornell University, and other educational institutions, leading practical lumbermen in the land, warned the rulers that their forest wealth was gradually being depleted and that unless practical steps for the conservation of the same and for reforestration were taken there would be a timber famine. For many years a deaf ear was lent to all such intelligent warnings, with the unavoidable result that our neighbors to the south of us are now in many lines bordering on a timber famine. Hence again, Sir, I repeat the necessity of dealing honestly with the facts as to our receipts from crown lands. If, Sir, the statement of the Honorable, the Provincial Treasurer were an honest one, it would proclaim to this House and to the people of this province that there was last year an actual financial deficit of $531,878.66. Then, Sir, if we were honestly told, as we should be, that from year to year there has been an actual deficit, the people would bestir themselves, and the Government would be forced to curtail expenditures, or to take the necessary steps by way of a general systematic scheme of reforestration or otherwise to ensure that the receipts from our crown lands would not necessarily year by year diminish, and, if nothing is done ultimately vanish. If, Sir, the Board of Directors in any business concern would attempt to make an annual financial statement as misleading and deceptive as that of the Honorable the Provincial Treasurer, they would immediately, by the shareholders, be driven off the board, and sound financiers and honest accountants placed in their stead. I say again, Sir, that I am not standing here to make an extreme party criticism, or to say that a deficit is necessarily a crime on the part of the Provincial Treasurer, but I do say, that it is nothing short of criminal for any public man to so juggle with his figures as to show an imaginery surplus when there is an actual and very substantial deficit. If it is advisable and desirable, nay perchance necessary, that the province should spend such an amount of money that the current expenditures shall exceed the current receipts; let it be done. The supreme test is whether it was desirable in that particular year that the money should be so spent, and whether the province has received the very best value for such expenditure; but there cannot be, Sir, even a relative justification for the sending forth by the Honorable, the Provincial Treasurer to the public an absolutely false statement, purporting to show a small surplus when there is, as already explained, a very substantial deficit.

Mining Receipts.

The honorable gentlemen opposite have indulged in their wonted jingling comparisons as to receipts from the mines. Last year from mining licenses and recording fees we received $193,682.48; in 1904 we received but $1,597.60. The honorable gentlemen point to the large revenues received from mining in 1910 as compared with 1904, and say that had the old Government remained in power the receipts would still have been as they were in 1904. I ask, Sir, was there any complaint from the honorable gentlemen opposite when in Opposition as to the amount charged for mining lands? The inference from the arguments advanced is that the mineral lands in the north country, notwithstanding the valuable discoveries at Cobalt and elsewhere, would still be selling for $3 an acre. In years gone by, when lands were sold for $3 an acre, it was considered by both sides of the House that also was all those lands were worth. There were no valuable discoveries then made; but, Sir, in their criticisms, the honorable member for Algoma and others forgot the fact that the mining laws as to revenues that we now have on the statute book are nearly, if not exactly, in the form that was suggested from this side of the House. Sir, honorable gentlemen will recall that when the Honorable, the Minister of Mines proposed to bring down his mining laws as to revenue, and when interrogated from this side of the House as to what principle he would tax mining lands, he answered that the tax would be so much per acre: it will also be recalled that I at once ridiculed such a proposition. While you may assess farm lands fairly by looking at the surface you never could assess mining lands equitably in that way. I pointed out then, Sir, that the tax should depend upon the revenue received from any particular mine; that if no paying ore were contained in that mine this province would have no right to tax the purchaser, because it had given him no value whatever. What was the result, Sir? The Honorable, the Minister of Mines delayed for one year the bringing down of his bill, and when in the following year he introduced that bill, he announced that the tax would be upon the royalty basis, i.e., that it would be a certain small percentage of the output of the mine. He thus adopted our suggestion, in part at least; for I then argued, and still think I was right, that while the revenue received by the province from our mines should be by means of royalties, that the mine that paid exceptionally well may a higher percentage than the poorer mine. So that when the honorable gentlemen boast of the large revenues obtained under and by means of our present mining law they forgot that the law stands, as at present on our statute book, as the result of suggestions from this side of the House, and as the result of the Honorable, the Minister of Mines completely changing his mind as a result of such suggestions. What I then said was, Sir, that no mine or company should be taxed for the spending of money in obtaining machinery and of boring in the earth, unless as a result of their labor some profit were obtained; that the province had no right to tax a man who had spent possibly ten, twenty, thirty, forty, fifty or one hundred thousand dollars in mining machinery and work and who had enjoyed the pleasant pastime of spending a year or two of his life unless there were some actual and profitable results from such expenditure and such work. But, my suggestion then was that when a mine gave exceptionally heavy returns the royalty might be graded and a larger percentage taken by the province after a certain output had been realized.

Sources of Our Revenue.

Honorable gentlemen opposite boast of the large expenditures on agriculture, education, etc., but they forget to answer the question as to who rendered such expenditures possible. Sir, I ask who made the laws under which this increased revenue flows into the Treasury to-day? I make this statement, Sir, and I challenge contradiction, that the large revenue received last year was received under the very laws enacted by the old Liberal Government with but slight variation in one or two cases. We were not perfect, Sir, we did not profess to be, but we dug the channels through which flows the revenue to-day that this Government is expending and for which expenditures they claim so very much credit. If, Sir, you take the financial statement, you could trace back every dollar of the $8,891,004.68, being last year's receipts, to the laws made by the old Government and which in many cases were opposed by honorable gentlemen to your right, and as to some of which laws they divided the House not only once, but twice, and in some cases three times. I purpose, Sir, briefly to demonstrate this proposition, namely, that all of the increase of revenue, as between 1904 and 1910 save something less than $300,000, can be traced back to the constructive financing of the old Liberal Government, or to increased receipts under other heads for which this Government can claim no credit whatever.

The Corporation Tax.

Take first the corporation tax, which was opposed so bitterly by the Conservatives in this House, and the repeal of which was threatened by the present Premier when he sat in Opposition. The receipts from the taxing of these wealthy corporations, such as telephone companies, street railway companies, banking institutions, etc., in 1904 were $420,627.00; the receipts Sir, in 1910, with the law unchanged amounted to $752,338, or an increase of $331,710. Sir, not a single dollar of this $752,338 would have found its way into the Provincial Treasury had honorable gentlemen opposite had their way; and not only, Sir, if we are to

SEVEN YEARS OF MISERY

All Relieved by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Sikeston, Mo. — "For seven years I suffered everything. I was in bed for four or five days at a time every month, and so weak I could hardly walk. I cramped and had backache and headache, and was so nervous and weak that I dreaded to see anyone or have anyone move in the room. The doctors gave me medicine to ease me at those times, and said that I ought to have an operation. I would not listen to that, and when a friend of my husband told him about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and what it had done for his wife, I was willing to take it. Now I look the picture of health and feel like it, too. I can do my own housework, hoe my garden, and milk a cow. I can entertain company and enjoy them. I can visit when I choose, and walk as far as any ordinary woman, any day in the month. I wish I could talk to every suffering woman and girl." —Mrs. Dema Bethune, Sikeston, Mo.

The most successful remedy in this country for the cure of all forms of female complaints is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

It is more widely and successfully used than any other remedy. It has cured thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing down feeling, indigestion, and nervous prostration, after all other means had failed. Why don't you try it?

Suffered Greatly From Heart Trouble.

NERVES WERE VERY WEAK.

Mrs. John Farrell, Rose Hill, P.E.I., writes:—"It is with the greatest of pleasure I write you stating the benefit I have received by using Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

"About five years ago I suffered greatly from heart trouble, and my nerves were very weak. After seeing several doctors and using their medicine, I got no relief until a friend told me of your Heart and Nerve Pills. I took two boxes and they effected a complete cure. I can recommend them highly to all nervous and run down women.

"I have advised many others to try them and they have all been cured of the same trouble."

The proper action of the nerves, so important to the well-being of the heart, depends entirely upon the general condition of the nervous system. If there be nerve derangement of any kind, it is bound to produce heart derangement.

In Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills is combined a treatment that will cure all forms of nervous disorders, as well as act on the heart itself, and in this is the secret of their success in curing so many cases of heart and nerve trouble.

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c per box, or 3 for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

HON. A. G. McKAY ON PROVINCIAL FINANCES

believe the supporters of the Government this increase under this head of $331,710 is to be attributed to the splendid financial management of the present Government.

Succession Duties.

Then again, Sir, under the head of succession duties the receipts in 1904 were $458,600. In 1910 they amounted to $758,446, or an increase of $299,744. To whom, Sir, belongs the credit for these large receipts? The people of this province right well remember, Sir, that when it was proposed to tax large estates that honorable gentleman opposite and their friends spoke of "taxing the gravestones, taxing the dead," etc. Then had not the courage of their convictions at the outset to move an amendment to vote against the bill; but later on when it was revised the present Provincial Treasurer moved an amendment that would have cut the receipts at least in half. so that, Sir, it is clear to us that if honorable gentlemen on the opposite side had had their way they never would have proposed such a tax, and the province last year would, therefore, not have received the said $758,446.

Licenses.

Then again, Sir, take another illustration of the splendid constructive financing of the old Government: Receipts under the general head of Licenses in the year 1904 were $562,256. In 1910 they amounted to $680,162, an increase of $217,906. Part of this consists, Sir, of the moneys received for brewers' and distillers' licenses, and when it was proposed to place a special tax on brewers and distillers honorable gentlemen opposite again vigorously opposed such a proposition, and during the progress of the bill the House was divided three times in a vain attempt by honorable gentlemen opposite to save their particular friends from a fair and just taxation.

Mining Licenses and Fees.

In 1904 receipts under the head of "Mining Licenses and Fees" were but $1,594. In 1910 the receipts were $193,632, an increase of $192,085. But, Sir, to whom belongs the credit for such increased receipts? In 1904 there were practically no mining operations in our north country, for the minerals had not been discovered. When they were discovered, and it was learned that there was great mining wealth in the north it became at once advisable to make revenue laws to fit the situation, and as I have already explained, the present law as it stands upon the statute book is there by the adoption of the Honorable, the Minister of Mines of the suggestion made by me when this question came up.

Dominion Subsidy.

In 1904 the grant that this province received by way of subsidy from the Dominion Government was $1,134,600 in 1910, owing to the increase of population in the Province of Ontario, and as a result of the action of the Liberal Government at Ottawa the subsidy was increased to $2,128,732, or an increase as between 1904 and 1910 of $994,132. When the Liberal Government was in power negotiations were opened with a view to obtaining such an increased subsidy. Those negotiations were continued after the present Government came into power with a result that a decidedly increased subsidy was granted by the Dominion Government. The present Government in this respect simply did their duty, no especial credit is due them, and no censure is coming to them for what they did. They continued the work already begun, and the Dominion Government increased the subsidy as stated.

T. & N. O. Earnings.

The Temiscaming & Northern Ontario Railway was, as everybody knows, started by the old Liberal Government. In 1904 it was in its initial stage of construction, and there were no earnings received from it by the province; in 1910 the receipts were $420,000. In other words the increased receipts of the province as between 1904 and 1910 under this particular head were $420,000; and the House will well remember that the construction of this road was not favorably received by honorable gentlemen opposite, and many and adverse were their criticisms of it. Had the old Government not undertaken this excellent colonization work the receipts last year would have been $420,000 less than they were.

Summary of Comparison.

Now, Sir, what is the result of this increase? The total receipts in 1910 were $8,981,004; the total receipts in 1904 were $6,128,158; in other words the increase in revenue between 1904 and 1910 was $2,762,646. But, Sir, under the six heads which I have already been dealing with and for each and every one of which the Liberals claim the credit, the revenues increased between 1904 and 1910 in the following amounts, namely:

As to Corporation Tax, $331,710.

As to Succession Duties, $299,744.

As to Mining Licenses and Fees, $192,085.

As to the Dominion Subsidy, $994,112.

As to the T. & N. O. earnings, $420,000.

Or in all $2,486,557.00. In other words of the total increase in revenue between 1904 and 1910 of $2,762,646.00. I have accounted for $2,486,557.00, i.e. the whole increase in the revenue has been accounted for under the above heads except $257,089. In other words, Sir, after the present Government has been in power for six long years, I am proud, Sir, as a Liberal to be able to make this sweeping and very substantial statement, that all of the present revenue of the province save a trifle less than $300,000 is accounted for by laws placed upon the statute books by the old Government, or measures advocated by Liberals.

Faults the old Liberal Government doubtless had, but, Sir, when seven years after they have gone out of power the financial receipts of the province almost to a dollar can be traced back to financial legislation placed upon the statute books by them or to measures advocated by them, it speaks volumes for their financial and business administrative ability.

Not one dollar would ever have been received by the Province of Ontario under the head of Corporation Tax had the Conservative Opposition had their way. Yet, under this head alone, during the operation of the act up to date, the Government has received $6,192,975.41. Similarly under the Succession Duties Act the province has received in all $7,773,219.11; so also under the Brewers' and Distillers' Act the province has received $837,984.95. Under these three taxes the total receipts of the province up to the 31st October, 1910, reached the magnificent sum of $14,804,159.47.

Expenditure.

Honorable gentlemen opposite complain that critics of the Government do not particularize sufficiently when objecting to excessive expenditures. This is an easy remark to make, and yet there is much force in the position taken by the honorable member for South Wentworth (Mr. Reid), who says, that the Opposition has done its duty when, for example, under the head of Civil Government he points out that owing to the unnecessarily increased number of employes the expenditure is unnecessarily increased. It is not for the Opposition members to say whether John Smith, or Joe Brown, or some other particular employe is unnecessary. This is the duty of the Head of the Government.

Contrast In Expenditure.

The cost of Civil Government has increased since 1904, 65 per cent.; the cost of managing the crown lands has increased during the same period 98 per cent.; the total expenditure during the same period has increased 68 per cent., and yet the increase on agriculture is but 39 per cent. This shows clearly that as to this important field of work the expenditure has not at all kept pace with the general expenditure, nor yet with the increased revenue of the province. Much credit is claimed by supporters of the Government because of the increased expenditure on education; they forget that such expenditures would be absolutely impossible were it not for the increased revenue derived as already explained. They might do well in making comparisons also to note the fact that the expenditure in 1904 on education was 18 per cent. of the total expenditure of the province, whereas in 1910 the expenditure on education reached only 19 per cent. of the total expenditure for 1910.

Another point that might well give the Government pause, and particularly in view of the ever-recurring deficits, is the fact that the increase in the per capita expenditure during the first three years of Conservative rule was as great as the increase per capita expenditure during the whole 33 years of Liberal rule.

Suggested Sources of Revenue.

Owing to the fact, Sir, that we have recently had a series of deficits in this province, it becomes imperatively the duty of the Government to either decrease the expenditure, or to devise ways and means for increased receipts. I have already dealt with the question of the conservation of our forests and of reforestration as a means of securing a permanent revenue, in addition to that, Sir, the Government might well consider whether under the Succession Duties tax they might not grade the percentage to be taken by the province, so that when you come to large estates that run up to say, $500,000, $1,000,000, $2,000,000 and so on, the Government might take a much larger percentage on say the excess over $500,000, and thus secure a substantial increase of revenue without injuring anyone. Similarly I advocated when the Mining law was being put through, that the royalties might very well be graded so as to take the higher percentage from the exceptional paying mine. It is not the duty of a Government to make multi-millionaires of one, and tend to make paupers of others.

Again, Sir, the Government might well consider the overhauling of its laws on corporations and also the railway taxes, with a view to increasing the taxation.

Education.

Just a word or two on education: This House was not divided on the debate on the address, but I then dealt fully with the question of education, and I therefore at present do not purpose to deal at length with this question, but for the purposes of my amendment to the present motion to go into supply the two debates might very well be considered as conjoined, thus to avoid the necessity of repetition. That educational affairs, particularly so far as the rural schools are concerned, have been badly muddled is not even seriously denied by Conservative members. As to the scarcity of teachers honorable gentlemen opposite express different views; one member expressed the hope that in two years matters would properly adjust themselves, while the honorable member for East Peterborough says, that in five years time there will be a sufficient supply of teachers. This, Sir, is decidedly encouraging, yes, even refreshing! We pleaded with the Government for several successive sessions, when they had determined against our protest, to abolish the model schools, that they should not wipe them out at one stroke. We pleaded for at least a survival of the fittest in order that there might be a sufficient number left to supply qualified teachers for all our schools. Both our advice and our pleadings fell upon reluctant and unappreciative ears. The result is that about twenty or twenty-five per cent. of the rural schools in the Province of Ontario to-day are in the hands of unqualified teachers. That, Sir, is the result of the Government's sinning against advice and against oft-repeated warnings. We pointed out over and over again that a large percentage of our normal trained teachers go west, to teach in the western provinces, and taking that fact with the fact of the wiping out of the model schools there was bound to be a dearth of teachers. The education report for 1900 shows that 600 teachers left the Province of Ontario for the west. The honorable the member for East Peterborough, as I have already stated, expressed the opinion that in five years there will be a sufficient number of teachers, I beg, Sir, to introduce the honorable member to his own riding, that of East Peterborough.

East Peterborough.

Richard Lees, the Public School Inspector for East Peterborough, under date of January 24th, 1911, submitted a report to the County Council, in which he says that last year out of the total rural schools of that Riding, numbering 74, there were 27 teachers holding second-class certificates, fifteen holding third-class certificates, six holding district certificates, and not less than thirty-one who were not regularly qualified; but who merely had permits and such other like temporary certificates. In other words, during the year 1910 forty-two per cent. of the rural schools in the old riding of East Peterborough were in the hands of unqualified teachers. This is the direct result of the Premier's boast, that he had turned the educational system upside down. It is indeed, Sir, entirely too true that he has turned the educational system upside down, with the deplorable result in East Peterborough that the Public School Inspector calls attention to.

Northumberland and Durham.

Let me give another illustration of the result of the mismanagement of educational affairs in this province by the present Government. I find, according to the report of William R. Tilley, M.A., Ph.D., Public School Inspector for West Inspectorate No. 1, of these counties, that in the year 1900 there were 70 rural schools in his inspectorate; in which schools there were, 2 first-class, 22 second-class, and 46 third-class, and not a single teacher holding any kind of a temporary certificate or permit. In 1910, in the same 70 schools, there were 2 first-class, 27 second-class, 23 third-class, and not less than 19 teachers with no regular qualifications whatever, except temporary permits. This state of affairs in these two old ridings are but typical of what is to be found all over the Province of Ontario. You may talk, Sir, about the mineral wealth of the province, of its forests, its fisheries, and its agricultural wealth; but there is no asset concerning which the Government should exercise such scrupulous care as with reference to the children of the province. If this result, Sir, had been a mere accident, if the Minister of Education had not been warned over and over again, his conduct might have been excusable; but, Sir, as I have already stated, he sinned against advice, against oft repeated warnings, and against what every sane man in the Province of Ontario, save apparently himself, had clear knowledge. I cannot understand, Sir, why honorable gentlemen to your right are such slaves to party politics; if this were not so serious a matter the explanations given by honorable gentlemen opposite as to the scarcity of teachers might be enjoyed as a burlesque on the facts that would have all the downtown theatres faded in the distance.

Explanations by Conservatives.

The honorable member for Algoma says, that the closing of the model schools has had nothing whatever to do with the scarcity of teachers, that the sole cause is the fact that they are going west to teach in the western provinces. The former statement is absolutely false, the latter has an element of truth in it, which we pointed out to be the fact long before the model schools were abolished. The more astute and resourceful member for West Hastings gives as his explanation, that there is a scarcity of labor everywhere, on the farm, in the workshop and in the office; and he gives this as his reason for the scarcity of teachers. Apparently not satisfied himself with this as an explanation, he volunteers a further statement, and says that we British are nomadic, and hints that the teachers, gipsy-like, are folding their tents and flitting out of Ontario.

"Bronchitis"

This is an acute inflammation of the mucous membrane lining the air tubes in the lungs.

The disease begins with a tightness across the chest, difficulty of breathing, hoarseness, and there is a dry, harsh, croupy cough.

After a few days mucous begins to be raised. This is at first white, but later of a greenish or yellowish color and is occasionally streaked with blood.

Cure the first symptoms of Bronchitis by the use of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup and thus prevent it becoming chronic and perhaps turning to Consumption.

Mrs. D. J. McCormack, Cleveland, N.S., writes: "My little boy, two years old, caught a bad cold which developed into Bronchitis. He was so choked up he could hardly breathe. Reading about your wonderful medicine, Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, I decided to try a bottle, and with such good result I got another which completely cured him, without having a doctor. I cannot say too much in its praise and would not be without it in the house as I consider it a sure cure for Colds and Bronchitis.

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price 25 cents.

If you are sick or run down your Druggist will give you FREE a 50c. bottle of Psychine and we will pay him.

Read this:

We are receiving many thousands of requests from every part of Canada for the 50-cent bottle of Psychine, which we buy from the druggist and give away.

Unprecedented interest is being taken in Psychine.

And it is doing some very remarkable things, making some very extraordinary cures.

* * *

Not more than we anticipated however.

With our third of a century's experience with Psychine.

With our knowledge of the hundreds of thousands it has already cured, in mind.

We have the most absolute confidence in what it can and will do.

* * *

Since scientists know now all about the white corpuscles of the blood, or the phagocytes, the scavengers which devour every germ of disease that enters the body.

Since they also tell us that certain herbs—nature's remedies—help and build up these white corpuscles.

And since these herbs are compounded in Psychine, we know why Psychine is so phenomenally successful in treating disease.

We know why its use is indicated in the following diseases:

La Grippe	Bronchial Coughs
Bronchitis	Weak Lungs
Hemorrhages	Weak Voice
Sore Throat	Spring Weakness
Anaemia	Early Decline
Female Weakness	Catarrhal Affections
Indigestion	Catarrh of Stomach
Poor Appetite	Night Sweats
Chills and Fevers	Obstinate Coughs
Sleeplessness and Nervous Troubles	Laryngitis and Dyspepsia

After-effects of Pleurisy, Pneumonia and La Grippe.

Now, we don't ask you to take our word for the tremendously beneficial effect of Psychine. Fill out the coupon below, mail it to us and we'll give your druggist an order (for which we pay him the regular retail price) for a 50-cent bottle of Psychine to be given you free of cost.

We will undoubtedly buy and distribute in this manner, hundreds of thousands of these 50-cent bottles of Psychine.

And we do that to show our entire confidence in this wonderful preparation.

A confidence that has been based on our thirty years' experience with this splendid preparation, with a full knowledge of the hundreds of thousands of cures it has made.

QUEEN MARY PLANS FOR CORONATION

PURCHASES IRISH LACE.

(Special Dispatch.)
London, Saturday.

BUCKINGHAM PALACE is now the headquarters of the Court, and the King and Queen will not visit Windsor again for any length of time till they go there for the Ascot races shortly before the coronation. There will, however, be a gathering of royalties at the castle on May 6, the first anniversary of the death of King Edward, by which time Queen Alexandra will have returned from her trip in the Mediterranean.

Queen Mary, since her return to Buckingham Palace, has been living very quietly, entertaining her more intimate friends and those about her Court by herself. Her Majesty has pleasant little gatherings every afternoon for tea, the beautiful tapestry room being used for the purpose. This, which is one of the most pleasant apartments in the palace and has a charming outlook over the gardens, was a great favorite with Queen Alexandra, who usually spent her afternoons there.

It takes its name from certain very fine old French and Belgian tapestries on its walls, surrounded by heavy gold frames, while there is some magnificent old French furniture in the room. Queen Alexandra kept there her wonderful collection of ivory miniatures, and the place of this collection is now occupied by some of the many valuable curios and works of art that the King and Queen Mary brought back from their Indian and colonial tours. The tapestry room is in close proximity to Her Majesty's private apartments, and she can reach it without having to pass along the main corridors.

BUYING IRISH LACE.

Queen Mary is now showing her interest in home industries in a practical fashion, and particularly her desire to promote the welfare of the Irish people by directing the attention of the women of England to the work done by their sisters in the Emerald Isle. Her Majesty has given a large order for some of the choicest Irish lace, principally rose point, Carrickmacross and Limerick, including a beautiful Court train in Carrickmacross, applique and guipure. The Queen has also bought a quantity of lace and work done by the St. Helena government lace school, with which she is highly pleased, and thinks very pretty. The St. Helena lace industry was started as recently as 1907, in accordance with a scheme of the League of Empire.

With the one exception of the imperial mantle or pall, which the King assumes at his coronation, the robes to be worn by the King and Queen are being made in London. Until lately it was understood that the King would wear the imperial mantle made for King Edward VII., but it now seems to have been decided that His Majesty will wear the mantle of one of the Georges.

The Queen will not wear the mantle or train worn by Queen Alexandra at her coronation, as at one time there was reason to believe it was Her Majesty's intention to do, but one specially made for her in London. This is being made of purple velvet lined with ermine, and will be embroidered by the members of the Ladies' Work Society, of which Princess Louise, Duchess of Argyll, is president.

FOR HOME INDUSTRIES.

The movement for the promotion of everything British in the way of dress being worn this coronation year, started by Queen Mary, enrolls its recruits more rapidly every day. The latest to join is one of the greatest artists in dress of today, Lady Duff-Gordon, who, under her business incognito of Madam Lucile, has achieved both an American and a European reputation for dresses of her own creation and design, and who is an enthusiastic supporter of the movement. She is now arranging an exhibition of a series of tableaux, for which she has reserved a large space at the Crystal Palace.

All these dresses are being designed by Lady Duff-Gordon herself, and will be made in her London workrooms, in Hanover square.

PAGEANT OF EMBROIDERY.

The large assembly of society women at the pageant of embroidery, held in Sir George Cooper's house, in Grosvenor square, was also testimony not only to Queen Mary's movement but to the interest that is taken in fine needlework. The exhibition was in two parts. There was a loan collection of antique embroideries, the most interesting item of which was a screen lent by Lady Sackville out of Knole, which is said to have been worked by Queen Elizabeth and the women of her court. The Dowager Lady Normanton lent an old fire-screen. There were also embroideries done by members of the Athene Society of Broderers, in which section a diploma prize for the finest exhibit as to fidelity of design, detail of coloring and artistic execution was divided between Lady Phyllis Windsor Clive and Mrs. Birch.

In the dining room, which was fitted up with a stage, six tableaux were given as illustrations of a lecture by Mr. Paulson Townsend on the "History of Embroidery." The first of these had a special interest at the present moment, for it showed Queen Editha embroidering Edward the Confessor's coronation robe. The first of the Confessor's wife was taken by Lady Tiverton, the daughter-in-law of Lord Malmesbury.

American Peeresses Figure Largely in Plans for Coming Coronation Season

Lady Decies, Lady Newborough and Hon. Mrs. Cecil Bingham Among Recent Recruits.

(Special Dispatch.)
London, Saturday.

LONDON is now making a beginning with its season of 1911, a coronation season which promises to be the most brilliant London has seen for a great many years, if ever before. It is felt in high quarters that it is time to get rid of the Victorian idea that to be respectable means to be dull, thus silencing the lips of those who have been so busy predicting that social life in the new reign will be stagnant.

This idea originated among those who took it for granted because the King and Queen, not being card players themselves, disapproved of high stakes, which have been the rule for some years in the bridge playing which has prevailed in the houses of the nobility. On the contrary, the high play at cards has prevented much of the entertaining in certain houses which otherwise might have taken place.

It is now becoming apparent that hostesses who have not done much entertaining for many years will now throw their doors open wider and endeavor by the brilliance of their receptions to eclipse memories of previous efforts. One new hostess will be the Duchess of Devonshire, Mistress of the Robes, who will lead the way with a series of magnificent functions, including a royal ball at Devonshire House.

LADY DECIES A FIGURE.

Though Lady Decies will be only one of quite a considerable number of American peeresses who will take part in the coronation festivities, the bright young bride of that popular nobleman Lord Decies will be one of the most interesting, as no doubt she will be one of the most interested, in the long series of entertainments, in the thick of which she will arrive from her honeymoon.

Like Miss Vivien Gould, the Duchess of Marlborough (nee Vanderbilt), one of London's most popular hostesses, was only eighteen when she became a British peeress. Though on a visit to the United States she will stop only a short time in order to be back before the coronation. She was one of the four tall and stately young women whom Queen Alexandra selected to hold the canopy over her head at the coronation. The other three were the Duchesses of Sutherland, Portland and Westminster, and a more beautiful quartet could hardly be imagined, worthy in every way to surround such a beautiful Queen. The Duke of Marlborough acted as Lord High Steward at King Edward's coronation.

The Duchess of Manchester is another American hostess who has been popular in Ireland, and who now is planning to entertain in London on a grand scale at her house in Grosvenor square. The Countess of Ancaster, who succeeded to the title only this year, also is an American woman who will be entertaining largely. She was Miss Eloise Breese, daughter of Mr. W. J. Breese, of New York, and was married in 1895 to Lord Willoughby de Eresby, who has now become Lord Ancaster. It was the present Lord Ancaster's father who officiated as Joint Hereditary Lord Great Chamberlain at King Edward's coronation, but this time it falls to Lord Carrington. Lady Ancaster takes a deep interest in politics, and was of great assistance to her husband in his election fights until he left the Commons to take his seat in the House of Lords. Interest in politics, however, has in no way weakened her interest in other matters. Her dresses are not only always charming but original. She is known as an admirable horsewoman and a keen rider to hounds.

OTHER AMERICAN PEERESSES.

Another American peeress who is regarded as one of the most charming is the Marchioness of Dufferin and Ava. She is an enthusiastic musician, and recently, it will be remembered, gave her vocal services for charity. Another young American peeress who is a favorite with royalty is the young Countess of Granard, who was Miss Beatrice Ogden Mills. It seems almost natural that these peeresses should look so charming, for their brides, for it was from there that Lord Donoughmore also brought his wife, one of the three beautiful daughters of Michael Grace, of New York.

But the list of American hostesses who are entertaining in London, or will soon be doing so, is almost endless. There are, of course, the Duchess of Roxburghe, the Countess of Craven and Lady Leith of Fyvie, while among others who may look to seeing their husbands in the ordinary course of events in the House of Lords may be numbered Lady Maidstone, sister of Mr. Anthony Drexel, Jr., and Lady Acheson, daughter of Mr. Ridgley Carter, the United States Minister at Bucharest. Lady Newborough and her sister, the Honorable Mrs. Cecil Bingham, once Mrs. Chauncey, one of the most popular American hostesses in London, whose unexpected marriage to General Bingham took all her friends by surprise.

It is hardly likely, however, that anything will surpass in grandeur the royal ball that is to be given by the Duchess of Sutherland at Stafford House, one of London's most wonderful palaces, in honor of her daughter, Lady Rosemary Leveson-Gower. In addition to several formal entertainments she is also resuming her Friday evening parties, at which many prominent intellectual and artistic celebrities are always to be met.

ANOTHER ROYAL BALL.

The Duchess of Portland is to give a royal ball in Grosvenor Square. The Duchess of Wellington will give another at Ardsley House. The Duchess of Norfolk will entertain largely at Norfolk House and at Grosvenor House, which has been closed for the last two years, while the Duchess of Westminster will give one and probably two balls.

Hostesses Who Have Entertained Little Heretofore Will Throw Their Doors Wide Open.

The Marchioness of Lansdowne, whose coronation reception in 1902, just before King Edward's illness, was the most splendid of the whole season, attended by the Indian princes in their gorgeous robes and wonderful jewels and by nearly every other royal personage in London, will again receive at Lansdowne House.

Chelsea House will be thrown open, the first time in many years, and the Earl of Cadogan will entertain largely both in honor of the new Countess Cadogan and of his granddaughter, the Honorable Sybil Cadogan, who is just eighteen.

There will, of course, be splendid functions at the embassies, in which Mr. Whitelaw Reid and Count Wolff-Metternich will take a prominent part.

The opera season will open at Covent Garden on April 22, and the coronation gala performance will take place about a week after the coronation, when a notable feature will be the appearance of the Imperial Russian ballet from St. Petersburg.

The demand for boxes and stalls for this season's opera is unprecedented, and the King has already subscribed for the royal box, which has been unoccupied for so many months, and a depressing feature of the house.

Between May 7 and June 22 four Courts will be held at Buckingham Palace, and for these the number of applications has already far exceeded the limit imposed.

THAT LONDON FACE IS SEEN HERE, TOO

(Special Dispatch.)
London, Saturday

THIS is the season of the year when London editors turn their pens to all or topics and they are now discussing what is called the "lonely London face."

A visitor from Australia says that away out there in the wilds the expression on faces is open, cordial and friendly, but that here, in the world's largest city, a study of the passing faces void of all human interest, with eyes cold and hard, set, and manner distant and uninviting makes him long for the life and action and laughter that are found on the Wallaby track.

A physician who is also a student of physiology says the "lonely London face" can be seen in all classes, from wealthy financiers to junior clerks in brokers' offices.

There is no other face like it, says this physician, unless it be in New York, which, of course, must be taken as another slap at the English correspondents who are stationed there.

There is no reason for being miserable in London, and loneliness is entirely out of place, for, like Chicago, there are more ways of leaving it than in any other city in Europe. That's why many people like it.

LONDON "CAN'T SEE" THE "HAREM" SKIRT

[SPECIAL DISPATCH.]
LONDON, Saturday.

THE harem or Pacha skirt is still the burning topic in assemblages of the world feminine, where dress always is a subject of serious consideration.

This new fad, which was born to meet a want that many sportswomen and all airwomen recognized, is now being transformed into an adjunct of the evening toilette, and some of the more daring of the women members of English society are wearing the skirt which "half reveals and half conceals" the daintiest of hosiery.

The Pacha skirt came in lightly and will lightly go, for the stout woman who wears it bears a striking resemblance to an animated tub of butter and the lean and scrawny woman looks, if anything more angular and lost to the world and all its joys.

WOULD-BE BRIDES STORM CANADIAN

(Special Dispatch.)
London, Saturday.

MR. THOMAS HOWELL, the Canadian immigration agent who is conducting the search throughout England for brides for the stalwart farmers of Canada, has given up searching and is really trying to lose himself, as the army of brides-to-be, not content with bombarding him with tons of letters, are here by the hundreds seeking personal interviews.

There are touches of humor in some of the letters received by Mr. Howell, who has been overwhelmed with invitations to teas and other functions dear to the feminine heart. One of the letters received is from a young woman in a London workhouse, who, with unconscious irony, writes:—

"Please come and see me. I can make you quite at home."

Woman, however, are not half so anxious as the men of England to go to Canada. It is estimated that fully 150,000 English mechanics, farmers and laborers will leave for the Dominion during the coming season. By direct route from London to Canada nearly 17,000 passengers will start for Canada in March and in addition during that month about three thousand immigrants will reach that land of promise via the United States.

This phenomenal immigration is attributed to the general prosperity and immense advance in railway construction in Canada. Fully thirty per cent of these immigrants are skilled workmen, and nearly all of them have means upon which to subsist for months after their arrival. There is no doubt that immigration is being stimulated by English imperialist organizations, which expect through these sturdy Britons to neutralize the effects of the great rush from the United States to

SUFFRAGE SKETCH BY MISS CORELLI

"The Sedan Chair" Among the New Theatrical Offerings in the English Capital and Their Reception.

(Special Dispatch.)
London, Saturday.

AT last Miss Marie Corelli has written a play. To be sure, it is only a one act play and will be given in a music hall instead of a regular theatre, but still it's her first play.

The title is "The Sedan Chair" and the subject is the suffragist movement. Ever since the cry of "Votes of Women!" became loud in England publishers have besieged Miss Corelli to write her views on the question. Up to now she has been proof against the publishers' blandishments and check books, but in "The Sedan Chair" we will learn just what the distinguished novelist thinks about it all. Sir Edward Moss has paid a very large price for the sketch, which will be produced at the Hippodrome. It is stated that the price is three times as high as the previous high water price mark for a sketch.

Another new and distinguished contributor to the music halls is Sir William Gilbert. He is now putting the finishing touches to a one act play, in which Mr. James Welch will appear at the Coliseum. At present Sir William calls the playlet simply "A Character Study," but that title is very likely to be changed.

The subject is said to be rather a grim one, nevertheless the work, according to Mr. Welch, contains a strong flavoring of the author's characteristic and sarcastic humor. This is the first time that the famous author of "Pinafore," "Patience" and "The Mikado" has ever contributed to the music halls or written a sketch. Naturally its production is awaited with a great deal of interest by theatrical circles here, both in music hall and theatre camps. Sir William has been writing continuously since the early sixties. That in itself is a marvellous record quite apart from the brilliancy of his work.

Miss Gertrude Kingston has closed her Little Theatre and will now take a well earned rest on the Continent. It is proposed, according to the Times, to reopen the theatre in a few weeks under a new management with some Viennese musical comedies as an attraction. Attractive as the theatre is, it so far has failed to attract the public in any large numbers.

Sir Herbert Tree has made himself a prime favorite with English actors and actresses. He announced the other night that in future he will pay salaries during rehearsals. The other important managers cannot very well help but follow suit.

Mr. Herbert Trench has decided to revive "The Blue Bird" each Christmas season at the Haymarket, the same as Mr. Frohman does "Peter Pan" at the Duke of York's. Meanwhile "The Blue Bird" is to make a tour in Ireland and then visit Australia.

While Mr. Robert Loraine has by no means given up acting, he will devote his leisure, as in the past, to flying. The Express states that Mr. Loraine will take up the building of aeroplanes and found a flying school of his own.

The date of the coronation gala theatrical performance at His Majesty's Theatre has been officially fixed for Tuesday, June 27.

Miss Maude Allen appeared in a special matinee at the Palace Theatre in a series of new and charming dances. Fortunately for her health, the weather has become much warmer and she probably didn't get pneumonia.

In the performance of "The Princess Clementina" Miss Stella Patrick Campbell injured one of her feet. The pain was so great that she was obliged to give up the performance.

Last week marked the thirtieth anniversary of the forming of the Compton Comedy Company. The Stage says that when Mr. Henry Compton on his return from America, thirty years ago, formed this company to give English comedies he had no idea that it would continue for more than a few months. It has been playing steadily ever since and is probably the oldest theatrical organization in the world.

Although the Court is still in mourning, it is not being rigidly held to any longer. The Duke and Duchess of Connaught and Princess Patricia attended a performance of "The Chocolate Soldier" the other night. It was their second visit to that charming opera within a fortnight, according to the Follies.

Mr. Charles McEvoy, author of "All That Matters," is not an Irishman, as is generally supposed, but an American. He was born and brought up in Boston.

"Tantalizing Tommy" is to be turned into a comic opera. Dr. Hugo Felix is writing the music and the indefatigable Adrian Ross the lyrics. It will be remembered that Dr. Felix is the gifted composer of the highly successful "Madame Sherry." This is not a bad tip for dramatists to prolong royalties. When a good play has had its day, turn it into opera.

Mr. Lewis Waller has had medals made bearing his profile. They are in imitation of Roman coins and will be sold as souvenirs at the Palladium when he appears there as Marc Antony in "Julius Caesar."

The prices of the medals vary from a guinea to sixpence, depending on whether the nice girl purchaser wishes her Waller profile in gold, silver, bronze or aluminum.

WELDS WORKHOUSE BRIDE OF 80 AT 94

England's Oldest Postboy, Thrice a Husband, Marries Woman Who Was Twice a Wife.

(Special Dispatch.)
London, Saturday.

ON St. Valentine's day Central Hall, Chatham, was packed with an assemblage eager to witness the wedding of England's oldest postboy, Mr. William Hennen, ninety-four, to Mrs. Fanny Wadhams, eighty. Mr. Hennen has been married thrice, Mrs. Wadhams twice. The aged postboy, not wishing to be a burden to his children, entered the Workhouse twenty years ago, and it was there that he met Mrs. Wadhams. Their marriage was made possible by the Old Age Pension law.

As a postboy Mr. Hennen worked in Blandford, Exeter, Sherborne and Dorchester, and it was from the last town that he once took the Shah of Persia to Weymouth. When trains came into use and postboys became obsolete Hennen became gardener at Wimborne. At other times he had acted as valet to different gentlmen, and in this capacity he saw some notable people. He once attended on King Edward when the latter was out shooting.

Hennen's favorite story, however, is that of how he picked up the little girl who became Queen Victoria. She was playing on the sands at Weymouth and tumbled down just as he was passing.

Mr. Hennen and his bride had their first automobile ride a week ago. When asked how he enjoyed it the old postboy, with his ruling passion still strong within him, replied:—

"It haven't been so cold for a long time. Hi thinks there's sorhink to beat a 'orse's back."

RATS EAT $75,000,000 A YEAR IN ENGLAND

(Special Dispatch.)
London, Saturday.

It is calculated, according to Sir James Crichton-Browne, that the loss to agriculture alone in England from the ravages of rats runs to something like $75,000,000, and that they could be exterminated if the imports of grain could be decreased to the value of about $25,000,000.

At present from 3,000 to 4,000 rats are destroyed in the port of London every month, according to Mr. Wilson, the chairman of the Sanitary Committee of the Port, and yet they are unable to keep down the importation of these "undesirable aliens."

LORD STRATHCONA BESET FOR ALMS

(Special Dispatch.)
London, Saturday.

SOME days ago Lord Strathcona, Canada's High Commissioner, touched by the story of a poor woman, responded to her appeal for help.

This got into the newspapers, and the great Canadian now has evidence of the extent to which the profession of begging letter writers is followed in London.

He has simply been inundated by letters from the impecunious, and has received naive offers from others to recommend really deserving objects of charity, thus safeguarding the millionnaire against the annoyance of distributing his gold among the unworthy.

Lord Strathcona is wealthy, but he is also essentially a man of business with a business mind. The begging letter writers are likely to cause the stream of his charity to dry up somewhat.

THE NEW CUNARDER IS THE AQUITANIA

(Special Dispatch.)
London, Saturday.

The enormous steamship which the Cunard company is having built at Messrs. John Brown & Co.'s yard, at Clydebank, is to be named the Aquitania. As usual with Cunard ships, the derivation of the name is interesting. Aquitania is the Latin name of a part of Gaul, originally including the country between the Pyrenees and Garonne, people by Iberian tribes and by Celtic families who settled among them.

The Aquitania, as already announced, is intended for the New York mail service and will cost about £2,000,000 ($10,000,000). She is to be 885 feet in length, 95.6 in breadth, tonnage will be 50,000 and she will be able to steam 23 knots.

Accommodation will be provided for 2,790 passengers—850 first, 740 second and 1,200 third class, and the vessel will embrace many novelties in her construction, among other innovations being Turkish and electric baths, a swimming pool and a theatre.

The once famous White Star liner Germanic, a vessel which has been regularly plying to and fro across the Atlantic for upward of thirty-six years and which probably holds a record in that respect, has been sold to Turkish buyers.

KING REMOVES BAN ON FINGER BOWLS

(Special Dispatch.)
London, Saturday

Considerable interest is manifested here in the announcement that King George V has removed the ban against the presence of finger bowls on the table when he dines with his subjects.

This marks the severance of another of the links which binds England to her picturesque past. It will, of course, be recalled that the prohibition of finger bowls when English royalty is present dates from the days when gentlemen of Jacobite leanings were wont to toast "The King," but would salve their consciences by holding their glasses above a basin of water, thus indicating that it was "Bonnie Prince Charlie" or some other pretender concerned who was present.

ONLY 'HIGH BROWS' LIKE THE PLAYLET

An American First Nighter's View of Mr. Granville Barker's Newest Translation.

(Special Dispatch.)
London, Saturday.

TWELVE years ago Mr. Granville Barker was offered the directorship of the subterranean theatre in New York, then about to be opened. He went to America, looked it over and decided he did not want it. Recently Mr. Barker, apostle of the new thought and high art in the drama, appeared as a mere actor in a variety theatre.

The theatre was the Palace Music Hall, where Mr. Barker produced a very thin, talky and uninteresting sketch called "Ask No Questions and You Will Be Told No Stories." It is one of a series of four that Mr. Barker has translated from the German of Herr Arthur Schnitzler.

The other three are to follow in weekly doses; at least that was the original intention, but wiser counsel may prevail. This one not only lacked point and purpose, but didn't even have bright dialogue. A man hypnotizes his sweetheart to learn if she is faithful to him. Then he hasn't the nerve to ask her, and so remains in blissful ignorance.

It's about as unimportant a playlet as I have ever seen, but the London critics, thanks to Mr. Barker's high brewed reputation, find many hidden beauties in it.

LONDON SNEEZING; INFLUENZA THERE

[SPECIAL DISPATCH.]
London, Saturday.

Now that influenza is with us again, physicians are once more advocating the isolation of all who are affected with colds, and this advice is given gravely in the face of the fact that if it were followed nearly every house in London would have to be turned into what is termed a nursing home.

One physician says the disease costs London quite £2,000,000 a year, because it is fair to assume that one-half of the population is unable to work two days a year owing to colds or influenza, and each person's services are estimated as being worth at least five shillings a day.

The manager of one of the biggest stores in London says there is always some one away from work with a cold. There is no excuse for saying London is lonely, as you can always have a cold to keep you company.

VISCOUNT MILTON'S BIG CHRISTENING

(Special Dispatch.)
London, Saturday.

THE christening of the infant Viscount Milton, heir to the Fitzwilliam earldom, at Wentworth Woodhouse last Saturday was celebrated on so lavish a scale that even the great rejoicings which characterised the golden wedding anniversary of the late Earl and Countess were exceeded.

A great village of canvas surrounded the historic pile which is the country seat of Lord Fitzwilliam, and in this gigantic marquee more than thirty thousand persons enjoyed the hospitality extended in honor of the first direct heir to the earldom in seventy-five years.

Seven thousand persons were invited to the christening, but only a limited number was able to see the actual ceremony, which was performed in the chapel attached to the castle. The chapel looked like a floral bower, filled as it was with palms, lilies, white azaleas and hyacinths.

The baptismal bowl, a valued possession of the Fitzwilliams, was of silver, oval in shape, exquisitely wrought, and bore inside the family coat of arms. This piece of consecrated plate is the most massive item in the fifteen tons of silver which the house is said to contain.

After the ceremony, which was conducted by the Rev. R. E. W. Verini, the guests assembled in front of the castle and were all presented to the head of the house. Four bands furnished music, and there was an impressive display of daylight fireworks. The refreshments were served to the guests in the marquee on the lawn, and there was a barbecue for the peasantry and other visitors.

Several prime bullocks, products of the estate, were roasted, and this was a feature of great interest to all. According to an English newspaper, there were 30,000 sandwiches, 20,000 meat patties, 2,000 gallons of beer and unlimited quantities of tea, without which no English function would be complete. A special staff of 300 waiters, who went from London to Wentworth by special train, served this gigantic feast.

Lord Fitzwilliam's Viscount received many handsome presents, including enough silver mugs to fill a cupboard, but the gift the Earl appreciated most was a great silver bowl from the employes of the estate. No such christening had ever taken place in England, as there were more than fifty thousand persons in attendance as guests or onlookers on the gathering reminded one of the festival days when all those who lived

WOMEN OF EUROPE AND THEIR RIGHTS

How They are Working in Various Countries for Recognition—Academicians of Sweden

The idea of a women's academy seems to be gaining favor in France, but there is no evidence so far that the feminists themselves welcome it. An academy for women is not quite what they want. It would not help their case much. They desire to be admitted to men's academies on the ground that they are the equal of men in brain work and achievement. A women's academy is no new thing. For the last six years one has been in existence in Sweden. It is called the "Quinna Akademi." Thus, while England has suffragettes, France feminists, Denmark women municipal councillors, and Norway women members of Parliament, Sweden has women academicians. The "Figaro" tells the story of the origin of the "Quinna Akademi." It was founded in Stockholm on the initiative of the illustrated journal "Ydun," which is the name of a dogess of Scandinavian mythology. First of all, it was decided that the Academy should contain only nine members—nine muses of literature, beaux-arts, music, the drama, learning, science, sociology, industrial arts, and commercial affairs. All the women of Sweden were invited by the "Ydun" to select the academicians, and they chose the women who were the most prominent exponents of the arts already enumerated. The members of the "Quinna Akademi" are not immortal like French academicians. They are selected for only nine years. If one dies or resigns, her colleagues elect her successor by a secret ballot. These woman academicians do not meet in a special building. They hold their meetings every month in a hotel in Stockholm. At these gatherings they discuss questions of art, literature, and sociology. Once a year, like any other institute or society which respects itself, the Academy gives a prize of $300, founded by the "Ydun," to the best work accomplished by a woman during the twelve months. The first prize was given to Mlle. Borg, an octogenarian, who created several evangelical asylums in the poorest quarter of Stockholm. The women academicians of Sweden, busy as they are with practical work, have not yet thought of donning a special costume. They will be astonished to learn that this was the first detail which claimed the attention of those Parisian women who favor the idea of a women's academy. Indeed, the subject of the dress to be worn has already given rise to animated discussion. Several papers have imagined uniforms and have reproduced the portraits of women, the future academicians, wearing them.

BIG CONGRESS OF ALL RACES

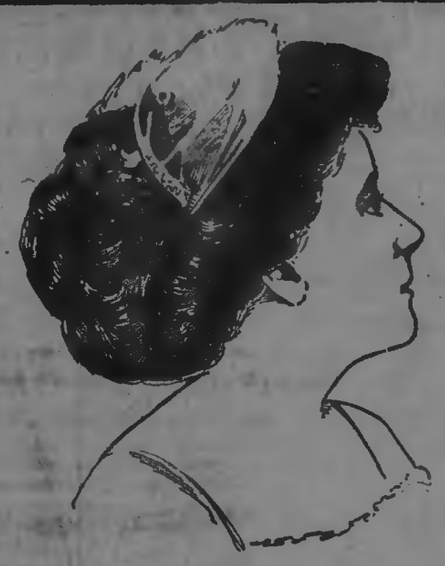
Representatives of All Mankind Will Meet in London, England, on July 26th Next

A most unique congress, to be known as the Universal Races Congress, is to open in London on July 26. This congress, which will last for three days, will indeed be a romance of realism. All mankind will then assemble in council in the very heart of the British Empire.

The originator of this congress is Dr. Felix Adler, of Columbia University, in New York. In the summer of 1906 a conference was convened at Eisenach, when it was declared that, though the modern conscience had advanced in general sensitiveness and strength, it is, nevertheless, international weak. The modern conscience is indeed fast becoming alive to what are known as social problems in the interior life of the community, yet it has not learned to apply itself with adequate power to the problems presented by radical divisions. In order to remedy this growing evil, the Universal Races Congress will be convened in London, and its prime object will be to cultivate mutual knowledge and respect between Occidental and Oriental peoples. The British Government has given this congress its moral and material support, and all the invitations to the foreign States have been despatched through the agency of the Foreign Office.

The great number of races that will be represented may be gathered from the fact that some fifty countries have promised to send delegates. There will be present over twenty-five presidents of parliaments, the majority of the members of the permanent Court of Arbitration, and of the delegates to the second Hague Conference, twelve British governors, eight British premiers, over forty colonial bishops, about one hundred professors of international law, the leading anthropologists and sociologists, the officers and majority of the council of the Inter-Parliamentary Union, and other distinguished personages. Among those who will read papers will be several prominent Hebrews.

Mr. Israel Zangwill will discourse on "Jews among the nations"; Dr. L. L. Zamanhof, the author of Esperanto, will discourse an international language; and Mr. Edwin D. Mead, of Boston, Director of the International School of Peace, will speak on "The organization of a world association for encouraging inter-racial goodwill." Dr. Moses Gaster will represent the Royal Asiatic Society.



A Handsome Hair Dressing

Model and Instructions Furnished by RICHARD BINDER of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania

Style D. (See Note) Coiffure "A La Greque" is as the name indicates a style taken from the Greeks. The hair is loosely waved all around. Part off a small portion of the hair at the crown and tie. This gives a foundation to which to pin. That part of the hair used for pompadour is gathered back very softly and loosely and fastened to the crown. Proceed with the sides and back in the same manner using care not to draw the hair line too tightly. All the ends of the hair are used for coil. This coil is fashioned in soft rope like twists, giving charming simplicity to the do-up which is so essential to an artistic head dress. Coiffure 'A La Greque' is executed without the aid of false hair or rats

Newbro's Herpicide

Eradicates Dandruff and Makes the Hair Beautiful

To produce the prettiest and most artistic effects in hair dressing the hair should be kept clean, light and fluffy by an intelligent use of Newbro's Herpicide. Hair that is uneven, dull, brittle, dead and full of dandruff, no matter how elaborately dressed, cannot be made attractive. The hair and scalp must be kept clean and free from dandruff, then the hair grows naturally, is light, pretty and luxuriant. It ceases to come out where before one sweep of the brush brought out a handful. Newbro's Herpicide used regularly brings about this much desired change. It is a most delightful hair dressing and has an exquisite odor, which is distinctive and refined. The preparation is not greasy, neither does it stain or dye. Herpicide stops itching of the scalp almost instantly. Don't waste time and money on remedies which have adopted the claims that have always been made for Newbro's Herpicide. ARTFUL EVASIONS OF ALIENS ACT

How "Undesirables" Enter England—Non-Immigrant Steamers Dump Many There

Whatever may be the legislative outcome of the amazing siege of Stepney, says an English paper, there is no gainsaying that at present our immigration laws are more ineffective than those of any other country in the world. Any alien with the brains of a rabbit, however black his history or blighted his health, can easily enter England against the will of the authorities, and can, in fact, snap his fingers at them.

The latest method of evading the Aliens Act is to come to this country with the return half of an excursion ticket, which can always be purchased on the Continent or obtained by post from London or from a confederate who has used the other half. Not long ago a Frenchman well-known in Leicester Square, thinking it politic to leave his usual haunts for a short time, went to Paris by a day excursion. While there he gave the return half of his ticket to an old comrade in crime, who with it came to London, giving a false name and address to the purser as he crossed the Channel.

Just Below the Limit

But there are many other dodges for evading the Aliens Act. One which results in hundreds of "undesirables" entering this country is systematically practised on some steamers. It is keeping the number on a ship just below the limit allowed for exemption from inspection. Originally a steamer which carried fewer than twenty steerage passengers was not, for the purposes of the Act an immigrant ship, and was not, therefore, liable to inspection. Then the number of third-class passengers allowed for exemption was reduced to twelve, and now it is again twenty. Mark how matters have been adjusted accordingly. Some captains used regularly to bring over seventeen or eighteen third-class passengers, then nine or ten, and at present they are back again to the old number, except when they cut things very fine and arrive in the Thames with nineteen!

It is not uncommon for the aliens thus "scraped through" to include at least one who has been refused leave to land. He or she previously came to England in an immigrant ship, and was turned back owing to lack of means or for some other reason. No fewer than four rejected aliens were about a year ago dumped in a batch at Hull from a (technically) non-immigrant steamer.

Second-Class Passengers

The same steamers bring over many "undesirables" as second-class passengers, and thus defeat the object of the Aliens Act in another way. No sooner were second-class passengers exempted from inspection than such companies lowered their second-class fares till they were only a little higher than the steerage rates, and ever since many immigrants unable to pass inspection, as well as not a few of those refused permission to land, have triumphed over the authorities by coming to England in the intermediate class.

Shipping agents in Continental ports also have many tricks whereby they dump "undesirables" on us. About eighteen months since, for instance, some of those at Bremen kept in stock letters of invitation written by people in this country. These they supplied—for a consideration—to aliens for showing to the inspectors when they reached England as conclusive proof that there was not the remotest chance of their becoming burdens on John Bull.

The Yellow Peril

A moderately wideawake immigrant, however, requires no assistance to enable him to enter England without even a "By your leave." What is to prevent him from shipping as a cattleman or sailor and landing at one of our ports as such? Nothing. As a fact, this game is played on us thousands of times every year. Out of the total number of cattlemen who arrived in this country in 1909 no fewer than 2,209 did not return on the cattle ships. Some may have left as ordinary passengers, but the majority doubtless remained in England. Whether they are likely to become good citizens may be gauged from the fact that thousands of cattlemen who have landed in this country have straightway sought the hospitality of the casual ward.

The ranks of Chinese residents in this country are steadily recruited in the same way. Of late years many "sailors" from the Celestial empire have married English girls and settled in our large ports, particularly Liverpool, where laundries "run" by their compatriots absorb some of them. Six or seven years ago an attempt was made to establish Chinese laundries in London, with the result that the promoters got such a fright from hostile crowds that the enterprise faded away. But in Liverpool, Birkenhead and the Wallasey district there are many such laundries, and a few have recently been opened in towns so far inland as Stockport.

"Me Wash Clothes"

They compete strenuously, not only against our native laundries, but against one another. An Ah Sing at Liscard, according to local report, described himself, with a fine eye to business, as a "Christian Chinaman," whereupon his rival, whose place of business is in the same street, boldly announced, "Me no religion, me wash clothes"!

Still more undesirable immigrants work a passage to this country. One of the men responsible for the twenty-five or twenty-six casualties at Tottenham undoubtedly came to England as a fireman on a steamer, and probably the other desperado evaded the Aliens Act in a precisely similar manner. Both, at all events, were nominally sailors when they landed

SERMON FROM SHAKESPEARE

Instructed by the antiquary lines,
He must, he is, he cannot but be wise.
—Troilus and Cressida, Act II., Sc. 3.

Various subjects have held a paramount position in various ages as educational forces. For a long time Greek and Latin authors bulked largest in the minds of the trainers of the young. With the rapid development of science, there was a tendency to make a knowledge of the material world of first importance. A man might be familiar with Latin and Greek, Sanskrit and Chaldee, and yet be a mere pedant; he might be able to trace the stars in their courses and give the history of the earth from the time when it was a mass of gas and vapour until it became the resting place of humanity, and yet, so far as life is concerned, he might not be wise. A mere knowledge of words and rocks, of plants and animals, is after all a poor equipment for training up a family or teaching a man his duties as a citizen. The benefit derived from the study of the classics has been largely accidental. The humanizing legends of Greece and Rome, the outgrowth of the primitive history of those nations; the history of the founding of the Eternal City; the story of the struggle between the Patricians and Plebians in the time of Coriolanus; the account of the struggles between Persia and Greece, and Rome and Carthage—have gone to the creating of character, which after all is the end of education.

History is of supreme value in the education of mankind. The story of the nations enables people to build wisely and well. Under ordinary circumstances what was said of Nestor holds true of any man:

"Instructed by the antiquary times,
He must, he is, he cannot but be wise."

The purpose of education is to cultivate imagination and establish strength of will. History, by presenting the picturesque past, the romances of kings and queens, the heroic deeds of men and women, the sacrifices of life and property made by citizens for their country, feeds the imagination. A knowledge of the struggles that brought about freedom, of the stern judgment of rulers of the unflinching determination of patriots, gives to the student strength of will.

In a previous sermon Shakespeare's detestation of the mob has been dwelt on. Why is the mob the "giddy multitude." It is illiterate; it is unacquainted with the past. Insurrections arise because the uneducated crowd vainly believe that society can be changed in an hour. Did they know history they would realize that sudden changes, in either the physical or political world, usually mean death. France is still suffering from the effects of the bloody revolution of the eighteenth century. There would be fewer religious sects, fewer advocates of communism, nihilism and all the other isms, if the history of the past were intimately known. The demagogue, through the ignorance of the crowd, profits by his ability to pervert the facts of former times. There are two practical benefits derived from sitting at the feet of the antiquary times. A man is taught how to live in the present, and is enabled to forecast with a considerable degree of accuracy the future.

In the light of history past, present and future become one. This is admirably expressed by Shakespeare on the lips of Warwick:

"There is a history in all men's lives,
Figuring the nature of the times deceased;
The which observed, a man may prophesy,
With a near aim, of the main chance of things,
As yet not come to life, which in their seeds
And weak beginnings lie intreasured."

It is only the man who is versed in history, who can thus foretell and shape his actions with an eye to the future. The pages of history are strewn with many wrecks, like Richard III. and Charles I., that serve to warn kings how they must not attempt to govern. There are guiding lights like Henry V. and Queen Elizabeth, which show monarchs how to win the esteem and love of their people. Henry V. and Elizabeth, the patriot king and queen of England, are still shaping the character of the nation; Washington and Lincoln are still giving freedom and solidarity to the American people; though dead they yet live.

What was it made Shakespeare so wise? Largely a knowledge of history. His pages teem with historical information. Greece, Rome, early Scotland, early Britain were all as familiar to him as was the past of his England. By familiarity with the past he was able to understand the present; by acquaintance with kings and statesmen and philosophers of the ancient world, he could speak with wisdom to his own age and to the future. "Wisdom is the principal thing; therefore get wisdom; and with all thy getting get understanding." For state-craft, for citizenship, for morals, the past must be known. Shakespeare was in many ways the greatest political and social teacher. He was this by knowledge of the past, by his power of reproducing that past and of applying it to the life of the present.

TRUTHS.

The post of honour is the post of duty.

Let nothing be undone which ought to be done.

Something wrong when a man is afraid of himself.

Honesty is better capital than a sharper's cunning.

Whose credit is suspected is not safe to be trusted.

Employ no one to do what you can easily do yourself.

BITS OF WISDOM.

There is no secret of success but work.

The mind of a good man is a kingdom to him and he can always enjoy it.

Endurance is more valuable than cleverness. It is the patient, steady plodders who gain and keep fortunes.

When benignity and gentleness reign within we are in least danger from without; every person and every occurrence is beheld in the most favourable light.

A graceful behaviour toward others is a constant source of pleasure; it pleases others because it indicates respect for their personality, and it gives tenfold more pleasure to ourselves.

DEAD FAILURES.

The reason we have so many dead failures is that parents decide for children what they shall do, or children themselves, wrought on by some whim or fancy, decide for themselves So we have now in pulpits men making sermons who ought to be in blacksmith ships making plowshares, and we have in the law those who instead of ruining the cases of their clients ought to be pounding shoe lasts, and doctors who are the worst hindrances to their patients' convalescence, and artists trying to paint landscapes who ought to be whitewashing board fences. While there are others making bricks who ought to be remodeling constitutions, or shoving planes who ought to be transforming literature.

There are children who early develop natural affinities for certain styles of work. When the father of the astronomer Forbes was going to London he asked his children what present he should bring each one of them. The boy who was to be an astronomer, cried out, "Bring me a telescope!" And there are children whom you find all by themselves drawing on their slates or on paper, ships or houses or birds, and you know they are to be draftsmen or artists of some kind. And you find others ciphering out difficult problems with rare interest and success, and you know they are to be mathematicians. And others making wheels and strange contrivances, and you know they are going to be machinists. And others are found experimenting with the hoe and plow and sickle and you know they will be farmers. And others are always swapping jack knives or balls or bats and making something by the bargain and they are going to be merchants.

FIGS AND THISTLES.

The eagle does not sing, but it soars.

No man who thinks wrong can live right.

Love will win where gun powder would fail.

The fig tree does not bloom but it bears fruit.

Infidelity cannot point to any fulfilled prophecies.

God's hardest work is to reveal Himself to the sinner.

There is no deed more heroic than to say no to yourself.

God will go where the humblest child is not welcome.

The first prayer was made by the man who had the first need

A holy life is the best answer that can be made to infidelity.

People are not vain except when they have no knowledge.

There is nothing for which the heart yearns more than sympathy.

The man who turns his back on God turns his back on his own good.

The devil always keeps the hinges of the gate of death well greased.

There are no free passes given on any of the roads that lead to the pit.

The sergeant can not fly, but he knows enough to catch birds that can.

The more people need friends the more they will appreciate kindness.

You can not pray for yourself and leave the people you don't like out.

No man ever really prays for anything that he is not willing to die for.

Religion is not something you can take home and keep for your own use.

The man who lives to please himself will find that he has a hard master.

As there if often some one in your family who suffers an attack of Indigestion or some form of Stomach trouble, why don't you keep some Diapepsin in the house handy?

This harmless blessing will digest anything you can eat without the slightest discomfort, and overcome a sour, gassy Stomach five minutes after.

Tell your pharmacist to let you read the formula plainly printed on these 50-cent cases of Pape's Diapepsin, then you will readily see why it makes Indigestion, Sour Stomach, Heartburn and other distress go in five minutes, and relieve at once sube miseries as Belching of Gas, Eructations of sour, undigested food, Nausea, Headaches, Dizziness, Constipation and other Stomach disorders.

Some folks have tried so long to find relief from Indigestion and Dyspepsia or an out-of-order stomach with the common, ever-day cures advertised that they have about made up their minds that they have something else wrong, or believe theirs is a case of Nervousness, Gastritis, Catarrh of the Stomach or Cancer.

This, no doubt, is a serious mistake. Your real trouble is, what you eat does not digest; instead, it ferments and sours, turns to acid, Gas and Stomach poison, which putrefy in the digestive tract and intestines, and, besides, poison the breath with nauseous odours.

A hearty appetite, with thorough digestion, and without the slightest discomfort or misery of the Stomach, is waiting for you as soon as you decide to try Pape's Diapepsin.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON QUESTIONS

Feb. 28th, 1911.

Elijah meets Ahab in Naboth's Vineyard. I Kings 21.

Golden Text—Take heed and beware of covetousness. Luke xii:15.

(1) Verses 1-4—What sin was Ahab here guilty of?

(2) What is the sin of covetousness?

(3) What is the limit of legitimate desire for the property of others?

(4) How would you characterise Naboth's refusal to sell? (See Lev. xxv:23-28, Num. xxxvi:7.)

(5) Are selfishness and discontent ever innocent? Why?

(6) What are some of the results of covetousness, selfishness, and discontent?

(7) What was the cause of Ahab's covetousness and his resultant unhappiness?

(8) Does discontent arise from need or some other cause and, if so, what?

(9) Verses 5-8—What kind of advice may be expected from the wicked?

(10) Of how much good or evil is the sympathy of a thoroughly bad woman?

(11) Which is the more liable to discontent, and disappointment, the king or his cook?

(12) Was Ahab the better or worse for his wife's sympathy?

(13) Verses 9-14—Does wrong doing always consciously hurt, or do sinners get so that they delight in their iniquity?

(14) Who were the most guilty of the murder of innocent Naboth; Jezebel or her parents, Ahab or those who shaped his character, or the actual perpetrators of the crime?

(15) What were the motives which induced the rulers of the city to procure false witnesses to bring about the death of an innocent man, and of the two men who swore to a lie, for the same purpose, and say if there is anything in public life to-day in any way resembling it?

(16) What is the limit of badness to which men may be driven by pride and covetousness? (This question must be answered in writing by members of the club).

(17) Verses 15-16—On what principle in human nature can you explain Ahab entering gladly into the possession of a property obtained by perjury and murder?

(18) Verses 17-24—What reason is there to believe that God is as much grieved with the sins of an ordinary man as he is with the sins of the great?

(19) What was the penalty which God pronounced against Ahab and Jezebel?

(20) How did Ahab die? (See 1. Kings xxii:34-38.)

(21) How did Jezebel die? (See 2 Kings ix:7, 30-37.)

(22) What became of the numerous sons of Ahab? (See 2 Kings x:1, 7-11.

(23) What hope is there that any who persist in wrong doing will be able to escape the legitimate penalty?

(24) Verses 25-29—If Jezebel, Ahab's wife, had been as good as she was bad, what kind of a man would Ahab have been?

(25) When Ahab heard his doom he repented, what effect did it have upon the purpose of God?

Lesson for Sunday, March 5, 1911. Elijah Goes Up by a Whirlwind Into Heaven. 2 Kings ii:1-18.

Golf in the Old Days.

Centuries back golf was a pastime of the royal family, though then usually played in Scotland. The Stuart family was very fond of the game, and the first English club was established at Blackheath in 1608 by James I. His eldest son, Henry, frequently played and on one occasion nearly struck by accident his tutor with a club, whereupon he coolly remarked, "Had I done so I had but paid my debts." Charles I. was playing golf when he received the news of the Irish rebellion. James, duke of York, afterward James II., was another ardent player. Golf is frequently mentioned in ancient Scottish records and in the fifteenth century was prohibited because it interfered with the practice of archery. Strutt considered it the most ancient game at ball requiring a bat.—London Standard.

Vegetable Chat.

"I see that some college professor has been saying that he believes that vegetables can see and hear while growing in the garden."

"Is that so?"

"Yes; not only that, but he believes that ages hence they will be able to converse with one another."

"Oh, that's old!"

"What's old?"

"Vegetables conversing. I've often heard 'Jack and the Beans-talk!'"

Maid Worth Having.

The Mistress (entering the kitchen)—Jane, didn't I hear a dish break a minute ago. The Maid—I hope you did, mem. It made noise enough. If you hadn't heard it I should have thought you were getting deaf, and that, you know, would be awful.—Boston Transcript.

Cause and Effect.

The Earl of Ennui (dreamily)—Wish I just had a million and ten years ahead of me. Baron Beating It—Well, you grab the million and you'll get the ten years all right, all right.—Puck.

PUMPAGE WAS LARGER THAN EVER BEFORE

Superintendent Henderson Presented His Annual Report to the Water Commissioners at Meeting Yesterday --Interesting Figures Showing the Extension to the System.

The Water Commissioners met yesterday afternoon in the Committee rooms, when the following Commissioners were present: T. F. Matthews, chairman; W. H. Hill and W. H. Moore.

Mr. Henderson, Superintendent of the Water Works, presented his report, which read as follows:

Gentlemen,—I herewith submit statement, showing extensions to mains and services during the year 1910:

Union street, Dublin to Edinburgh, 447 ft., 6 in.

Bethune street, King to Sherbrooke, 400 feet.

Gilchrist street, McDonnel to London, 481 feet, 3 in.

Sophia street, Mark to Burnham, 771 ft.

Reid street, London to Smith, 1,178 feet.

Reid street, Smith to Com. Road, 661 feet.

Smith street, east of Harvey St., 103 feet.

Smith street, Bethune to Reid St., 808 feet.

Discharge main at new power house 7 feet.

Gilchrist street at N. E. corner of London, 10 ft. 6 in.

A total of 7,115 1 in. feet of mains and hydrant connections were laid during the season 1910.

3 in., 1530 lin. ft.; 4 in., 22,622½ lin. ft.; 5 in. 92,634 lin. ft.; 6 in., 16,216 lin. feet; 8 in. 27,931 lin. ft.; 10 in. 3,938 lin. ft.; 12 in., 13,084¼ lin. ft., 16 in., 5,055 lin. ft.; 20 in., 268½ lin. feet. Total, 185,279 lin. ft; 35.09 miles, on which are set 240 hydrants and 312 stop valves. Total services on lines of distribution, 3,014.

114½ feet of 2 in. galvanized iron pipe was laid for special services, and extensions for house supply, on Olive avenue, Benson street and at the new Isolation Hospital. 582 feet of 1 in. galvanized iron pipe was laid for extensions for house supply and special services on Townsend St., Wolsley street and George street, south. A 4in. sub main was laid from the city main on the Northern boundary Road to provide water supply to the new Isolation Hospital. Length 109.5 lin. feet. Line paid for by the City of Peterborough.

Comparative statement of pumpage for previous six years:

	Gallons
1904	363,936,860
1905	440,275,580
1906	505,049,080
1907	571,146,920
1908	621,466,800
1909	640,895,200

Respectfully submitted,
W. HENDERSON,
Superintendent.

A claim for $27.00 was put in by the merchants in the vicinity of 159 Hunter street, where the 8 inch pipe broke some time ago, and did damage to that extent, it was claimed.

Mr. Moore moved that the account be paid. The motion was seconded and carried.

The Medical Health Officer's report of the condition of the water for January and February, to date, was very favourable, showing that the water is in first-class condition.

The Lundy Shovel and Tool Co. claimed that they had been overcharged for water rates. They said that they had lessened the consumption. They have a two-inch pipe running through the building; also fire protection, which was used twice during the year. The Commissioners decided to refer the matter to Mr. Henderson.

A similar communication was received from the Canadian Cordage Co., stating that they had been charged too much. They asked that the cause be investigated. The Commissioners thought that perhaps they had let the water run to prevent it from freezing. A reply will be made to their communication by the Clerk.

The next object of discussion was the public water supply for the city—parks, etc. They thought that perhaps it would be advisable to discuss the matter with the Council. Mr. Matthews thought that it would be better to renew the contract for five years on parks. It was agreed to have the contract renewed, as stated.

Bills from the Wm. Hamilton Co were read, and the Commissioners thought that some of the bills were in excess. Mr. Matthews suggested that the bills be left over and discussed when Mr. Kennedy is present. Mr. Matthews moved that the bills certified to by Mr. Henderson, be paid. This was seconded and carried. The total of the certified accounts amounted to $474.14. Other accounts were also presented.

The livery mens' meter rates was a subject of much discussion. They decided to have meters installed in all liveries. It was also decided to have a meter put in in the Normal School.

Regarding the purchasing of cast iron pipes, Mr. Matthews suggested that Mr. Henderson write to several companies and get them to quote prices on pipes from 4 to 10 inches in size. It was agreed that Mr. Henderson should do this, and have the information for the next meeting.

Mr. Moore suggested that the Superintendent be instructed to have the jutting point of land on the east side of the river, just below the dam, removed, as it would block the ice. He also thought that the timber around there should be disposed of. This was decided upon.

A citizen on the corner of Park ave. and Patterson street asked for a refund on his water bill. He claimed that through a defect in the water connections the water had to be shut off several times, and that he was taxed $1.00 each time it was shut off. This was left for future discussion.

DEPUTATION WAS WELL SATISFIED

The Peterborough Representatives Were Successful in Protest Against the Closing of Streets in South End of City.

CONFERENCE YESTERDAY

His Worship Mayor Morrow and City Solicitor E. H. D. Hall, who waited upon the Board of Railway Commissioners for Canada at their meeting in Toronto yesterday, have returned highly satisfied with the result of the conference, the deputation having won out all along the line.

The application made by the Canadian Pacific Railway for permission to close up Park, Rink, Stewart and Chamberlain street, and to construct a subway at Park street, was opposed by the Peterborough representatives who were successful in carrying their point, the Board refusing to grant permission to the Railway to carry out this work and the streets will remain as they are.

The city asked the Board to make an order requiring the C. P. R. to further safeguard and guard their Aylmer street crossing, but the Commissioners remarked that they had already provided for protection by ordering a flag man to be stationed there and they felt that was sufficient for the present.

The diversion of Romaine street at the Monaghan road as proposed was agreed to by the city's representatives the railways to pay for the cost of the work.

The recommendation from the Engineer of the Board that Townsend St. be diverted at Aylmer St., thus leaving only one crossing, instead of two at that point was not carried out. The city opposed this on the ground that it was not needed at the present time and would injure private property.

Rev. W. C. Riddiford of Park St. Baptist church, Messrs. E. G. Patterson and R. C. Braund were members of the deputation.

A PIONEER RESIDENT IS NO MORE

Mr. John Scollard, of Ennismore, Passed Away This Morning at the Age of Eighty Years —Was Widely Known

FUNERAL ON MONDAY

There passed away in the Township of Ennismore this morning one of the oldest and most highly respected residents, in the person of Mr. John Scollard, aged eighty years. Mr. Scollard was born in the township of Cavan in the year 1831 and when a child, with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Scollard removed to the township of Ennismore, where he has resided ever since. Later on in life he married Miss Catharine O'Connor, who is still living. Mr. Scollard was of a retiring disposition, a splendid citizen, highly respected by all who knew him. Although always interested in municipal and public affairs he never himself took any active part, further than that of any good citizen. He leaves to mourn his loss his wife, three sons and three daughters. The sons are Rt. Rev. Bishop Scollard, of Sault Ste. Marie, Mr. W. J. Scollard who resides on the farm in Ennismore and Mr. P. J. Scollard, post master and merchant at Ennismore. The daughters are Mrs. (Dr.) Moloney, of Cornwall. Miss Katie Scollard of the Good Shepherd's Convent, Toronto, and Miss Lizzie Scollard of Cornwall. The funeral will take place from the family residence, lot 9, concession 5, Ennismore, on Monday, and proceed to St. Martin's church and, thence to St. Martin's cemetery for interment.

THE POWERS OF SENATE

Special Wire to the Examiner.

TORONTO, FEB. 25. — In view of the probability of the reciprocity bill coming before the Canadian senate shortly, attention is called to the fact that that body has no power to amend the bill. It must either reject it holus bolus or accept it entirely.

EXTENSIONS TO BE MADE TO LOCAL CAR SYSTEM

Radial Railway Company Expects to Start Work Early This Spring, but is Not in a Position to Make Definite Announcements as to Their Plans—May be a Loop in the South End.

"I am not in a position to say just what extensions will be made to the street car system in Peterborough I have made several recommendations to the Company, but have not been advised which, if any, has been adopted, and until I am informed I will not be able to make any definite announcement," was the statement made by Mr. W. H. Munroe, manager of the Peterborough Radial Railway Company this morning, to an Examiner representative, who waited upon him in an effort to secure some information as to the plans of the Company in regard to extensions.

"The Examiner has heard that your company proposes to extend its Park Street line as far south as Lansdowne street, and to connect a line along that street to connect with your Lock street line," the reporter remarked.

"That was one of the recommendations I made to the Company," replied Mr. Munroe. "Whether it will be carried out or not I cannot say until I have been advised. I expect to hear in a short time, as we will want to commence work as soon as possible in the spring. In fact, we will get started as quickly as the roads dry up sufficiently to allow us to do so."

"How about the extension to Young's Point?" asked the reporter.

"I have nothing to give out in regard to our plans in that connection," was the reply. "There are several things to be considered in planning for such a line. Personally, I think that a line running from Peterborough, south, to Cobourg and Port Hope might be feasible."

Further than these remarks Mr. Munroe had nothing to say in regard to the extensions.

The situation seems to be that the Company will make some extensions this season, but just what work will be carried on has not been decided: at least the local manager has not been advised of any such condition. It is known that the Company has advertised for more cars, which is another sign that the linage will be increased.

AIR BRAKE DEMONSTRATION CAR ON C. P. R.

When George Westinghouse patented his air brake he produced one of the most useful train accessories that has ever been invented. Gradually it has come into widespread use until to-day practically every railway in the world uses it. In order that its employees may become thoroughly cognizant of the principles embodied in the brake, and as a result become more efficient in the handling of it, the Canadian Pacific Railway has a demonstration car running over its lines which is a railway school for employees. This car is fitted up with all the latest forms and improvements of the brake, and is in charge of a competent instructor, who gives lectures to the employees at intermediate transcontinental stations. The above picture shows the interior of the car during the progress of a lecture.

MR. E. R. WOOD'S MOTOR CAR IS BADLY DAMAGED

TORONTO, FEB. 25.—An inexperienced motorman, becoming excited, almost caused a tragedy yesterday. As it was a $7,500 motor car was entirely smashed by a street car near the corner of Davenport and Avenue road.

The machine, a limousine, belonging to Chas. C. Cummings, the well-known real estate man, was leisurely speeding along Davenport, up a grade when the car came round the corner from behind and bumped into it, throwing the auto sideways into E. R. Wood's car, seriously damaging the body of the machine, as well as doing considerable damage to Mr. Wood's car, a beautiful limousine, which was standing at the curb. The tonneau was occupied by Mrs. Cummings, and Mrs. Melvin White, both of whom were severely shaken up.

The damage to Mr. Cummings' machine is estimated at about $2,000, and that to Mr. Wood's somewhat less.

The motorman in charge of the street car was a new man, not even being in uniform yet, and had evidently lost his head and permitted the street car to bump into the auto ahead of him.

Both of the automobiles are in a very dilapidated looking shape.

A Well Known Lindsay Rugby Player Is Dead

Many people in Peterborough, especially the members of the Collegiate Institute Rugby team and the fans who saw the several games with Lindsay will regret to learn of the death in Toronto of Thom R. MacGregor, who played outside wing for the Lindsay team and earned the admiration of his opponents by his brilliant playing and by his sportsmanlike manner. The Globe says:

"Thomas Robertson MacGregor, Accountant of the Queen and Grant street branch of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, died at the Western Hospital of inflammatory rheumatism. He had only been in Canada three and a half years, coming from Glasgow, Scotland, where his mother, a widow, resides. He was for a time at Lindsay, prior to his transfer to Toronto.

Mr. MacGregor was an enthusiastic member of the Argonaut Rowing Club, and was last season in a crack lightweight crew. He played football and was also a member of the choir at the Dunn Avenue Presbyterian church."

THE FEELING IN THE NEW PROVINCES IS FAVOURABLE TO RECIPROCITY AGREEMENT

TORONTO, FEB. 25.—The following opinions from absolutely independent and reliable sources gives the actual feeling in the two provinces regarding the reciprocity treaty:

Regina—The farmers of Saskatchewan believe that reciprocity will bring better prices for wheat, flax and live stock and as a class are favourable. Other classes hold differences of opinion. The grain dealers say 'twill never do for the west to lose identity of grain in world's markets which fix the prices. This would injure the shipping interests.

Calgary—Farmers, ranchers and cattle dealers are all enthusiastic over reciprocity and tradesmen are equally optimistic. The only other industries o fany account are coal mining and coke manufacturing, which under reciprocity will be revolutionized as Montanas smelters will under the new treaty get their coke here instead of Pennsylvania.

Defeat An "Anti" Resolution.

Vancouver, B. C., Feb. 25. — By a vote of 7 to 10 the Board of Trade defeated a resolution condemning the reciprocity agreement.

PITY THE BABIES

All babies whose mothers do not know about Dr. Chase's Ointment are truly to be pitied. They are sure to have skin troubles of one kind or another such as chafing, skin irritation, scald head, milk rash or baby eczema, and nothing can bring them comfort so quickly as Dr. Chase's Ointment. It stops itching promptly and heals the skin beautifully.

ARL HICKS PROMISES COLD WEATHER IN MARCH

A regular storm period is central on the 3rd, covering the 1st to the 6th. The storm diagram shows that the Venus period is central on the 4th, and that the Earth and Mars periods are in full force at this regular storm period. By the 1st, falling barometer will begin in the west, temperature will rise and storms of rain, wind and thunder will start eastward by the 2nd. During the 3rd, 4th and 5th, these storms will pass eastwardly across the country, with change to much warmer, rain and thunder, east of storm centres, followed by rising barometer, with snow and sleet and change to much colder, on western sides of storm areas. A decided cold wave for the season will almost certainly sweep south and east from the northwest between the 4th and 9th. A seismic period, central on February 28th, will extend three to five days in March.

A reactionary storm period falls centrally on the 8th, 9th and 10th. At this time the Mercury disturbance is added to those of Earth, Venus and Mars. This period is also coincident with the annual magnetic and electric crisis, central on and about March 11th. If the Mars influence should not bring warm, open weather over from February—a thing most unlikely — we may expect some decided storms of rain, sleet and snow between the 7th and 10th. Rain, wind and thunder will be natural in the first, oncoming stages of these storms, but rapid change to snow, high barometer and cold may be expected on the western sides of storm areas. Much colder weather, but tendency to prolonged cloudiness with threatening aspects, will continue over the 11th, 12th and 13th.

A regular storm period is central from the 12th to the 16th. The central day of the Mercury period within this period, on the 15th, is full Moon, and Moon on the equator also, falls on the 14th and 15th, making this period a time of decided storm probabilities. We will name Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, the 14th, 15th and 16th, as days of possible violence and danger, especially in the southern states and about the gulf coasts. Rain, sleet and snow, all followed by high barometer and cold wave for March, may be expected in central to northern sections.

A reactionary storm period is central on the 19th, 20th and 21st. This period is at the centre of Earth's vernal equinox, with the periods of Mercury, Venus and Mars all nearing the end of their perturbing influences. The Moon is in apogee, at extreme south declination and near last quarter. Unsettled and threatening conditions, ending in violent quinoctial storms, will be most natural on and near the 19th, 20th and 21st. Gulf storms, sweeping into interior parts of the south, should be anticipated. Northerly winds, snow and change to much colder, will attend and follow these storms in central and northern states.

A regular storm period covers the 24th to the 28th, central on the 26th. Falling barometer, change to warmer, ending in snow storms will result at this period. New Moon falling on the 30th, will restrain high barometer and cold, which naturally should follow these storms. Seismic periods are from 17th to 17th and from the 27th to April 3rd.

St. Luke's Mission Band Annual Entertainment

The Sunday school room of St. Luke's church was crowded with interested friends of the children to witness their annual entertainment the programme of which consisted of parts entirely made up by the members of the Mission Band. Rev. Dr. Langfeldt, who acted as chairman, opened the entertainment with devotional exercises, after which the following programme was rendered:

Instrumental solo—Wilhelmine Gaskins.

Drill—"The Missionary Alphabet." In this drill each letter represented a missionary district in the world. The girls were dressed in white, carrying a wand bearing a gilded letter and wearing red, white and blue sashes.

Vocal solo—Gertie Gorry.

Recitation—May Phillips.

Vocal duet—Carrie Scott and Bessie Taylor.

Recitation—Isabel Parker.

Vocal solo—Bessie Taylor.

Recitation—Myrtle Mesley.

Wand drill—By eight girls.

THE ANNEXATION BOGIE.

We have heard more annexation twaddle since the trade agreement was announced than in the past fifteen or twenty years.

Everybody knows, that there is no annexation sentiment in Canada." If there were we should hear of it from those in favour of annexation, and not from the political mountebanks who imagine—who forge—its existence and attribute it to men more loyal than themselves. The United States originator of the screech, Champ Clark and one Bennet of the yellow dog political element, are largely responsible for the cry there; they; however, have the honesty as well as idocy of believeing in it and wishing for it. But the yellow dog political element, in Canada, the domestic traitors and mischief-mongers, journalistic as well as personal, to the crime of unpatriotism add the sin of hypocrisy; for in their hearts they know that there is nothing in the cry. So that it comes to pass that all the annexation sentiment that has ever existed in Canada is the product of Conservative manufacting industry. And it is not an infant industry either. While there is not now and never has been since Confederation, any Canadian annexation sentiment, we had a touch of the real article, sixty years ago in Montreal, when an Annexation League was formed, and not by Liberals either. Nor was it Liberal members and sympathisers of this league that pelted the Queen's representative with rotten eggs and burned the Parliament buildings. But this insignificant movement was confined to a few rabid "Tories" who in default of overruling the will of the people resorted to disloyal methods, preached revolution and advocated annexation. The people of Canada were then, as to-day, loyal to British connection, and as little liable then as now to heed, the mouthings of hysterical demagogues. In 1849 "Honest Jowe Howe," the father of responsible government in Nova Scotia, who during all the struggle that led to it, never uttered one seditious word, though often tempted by the tryranny and indifference of the representatives of the crown, addressed a scournful and scathing letter to the Hon. George Moffat, of Montreal, the Conservative president of the Annexation League, in which he told him that in such a base movement he could get no aid or sympathy from the loyal people of Canada. And he got more.

At that time the desire for enlarged trade relations with the United States was an element in the spasmodic exhibition of annexation sentiment. But it was confined to political filibusters and it never entered at large into the minds of the people to swap their British allegiance for Yankee trade.

The reciprocity treaty of 1854-66 evoked no annexation sentiment on the part of Canadians. The United States, however, made the blunder of thinking that the repeal of the treaty which was of great advantage to Canada, would drive the Canadians into annexation. In the agitation that preceded the abrogation of the treaty by the United States, a great convention of commercial organizations, to which Canadian Boards of Trades were invited, was held in Detroit in 1865; and more than one United States delegate, revealed the cloven foot, Mr. Potter, then United States Consul at Montreal, speaking as follows:

"Now we are ready to give you in Canada the most perfect reciprocity. We will give you complete free trade; but we ask you to come and share with us the responsibilities of our government. It is not the policy of our (the U. S.) government to continue this treaty; and it believe that in two years from the abrogation of the treaty, the people of Canada themselves, will apply for admission to the Cnited States."

He reckoned without his host; even such threats when carried out had no effect in kindling the slightest spark of Canadian annexation spirit. They kindled only resentment which has not grown cold up to the present day. Hon. Joseph Howe, speaking at this same convention, fully and truly voiced the sentiments of the Canadian people. After pointing out the unfair advantages that were taken by the United States, and not contemplated when the treaty was signed, in regard to the fisheries, Mr. Howe showed that the blockading of one-half of the seaboard of the United States had cut off a large part of the benefits that should have accrued to the Maritime Provinces during the war, while the United States got the benefit of the United States got the benefit of the whole provincial coast trade during the entire war period. Turning to the war, he contended that in the main the sympathies of the Canadians and the British were with the North, and cited instances of many young men from his own province who had fought in the northern armies. A colleague of his own had held the rank of lieutenant in a Massachusetts regiment, with only one leg to take back home instead of two. He then proceeded:

"In my own family and person I have suffered not a little by this unhappy rebellion. I have five boys, and one of them took it into his head to enter your army. He has now been nearly two years in the 23rd Ohio Regiment, and has fought in all the battles of that regiment during this period. He was in both the great battles under Sheridan, in which General Early's forces were scattered and the Shenandoah valley cleared. All the personal benefit I have derived from the reciprocity treaty, or hope to derive from its renewal, will never compensate me or that boy's mother for the anxiety we have had with regard to him; but when he produced his certificate of his commanding officer, showing that he had conducted himself like a gentleman and had been faithful and brave, it was some consolation for all our anguish to know that he had performed his duty. (Enthusiastic applause. As the applause subsided a gentleman proposed "Three cheers for the boy," which were given with great heartiness.) I have heard it said since I came to the convention that if the reciprocity treaty is annulled the British provinces will be so cramped that they will be compelled to seek annexation to the United States. I know the feeling in the Lower Provinces, and I believe I am well enough acquainted with the Canadians to speak for them also when I make the assertion that no considerations of finance, no question of balance for or against them on the interchange of commodities can have any influence upon the loyalty of the inhabitants of the British provinces, or tend in the slightest degree to alienate the affections of the people from their country, their institutions, their government and their Queen. There is not a man who dare, on the abrogation of the treaty, if such be its fate, to take the hustings and appeal to any constituency on annexation principles throughout the entire Dominion. The man who avowed such a sentiment would be scouted from society by his best friends. What other treatment would a man deserve who had turned traitor to his government and violated for pecuniary advantages all obligations to the country that give him birth? The very boy to whom I have alluded as having fought manfully for the stars and stripes would rather blow his own father's brains out than haul down the honoured flag under which he was born. If any member of the convention harbours the idea that in refusing reciprocity to British America they would undermine the loyal feelings of the people of those colonies, he is labouring under a delusion."

The words of Joseph Howe forty-six years ago were as true as they would be, is spoken today, as expressive of the sentiments of Canadians then as they are to-day.

There's no annexation in the pending trade agreement, except what is villainously and falsely read into it by political demagogues and yellow journalists.

The United States may covet Canada, but covetting and getting are two different things; and not one responsible public man in the United States has put the idea into concrete form.

If the United States should seriously propose the annexation of Canada, such a proposal would be regarded as an ignomery to be rejected with scorn.

Canadians cannot prevent the United States holding a covetous eye on Canada—they cannot prevent the United States making an offer for political union. But there's not one man worth a place in the roll of Canadian citizenship who would for one second think of ever thinking of such an offer.

It is folloy to even discuss seriously such an impossibility, and after all these years no citizen of the United States would be fool enough to expect Canadian annexation, if he were not encouraged by the traitorous Canadians who degrade Canadian citizenship, by falsely and feloniously suggesting that we are such cravens as to be willing to sell our priceless British birthright and our splendid Canadian nationhood for a mess of pottage.

Whitby Conservatives Endorse Reciprocity In Brewing Barley

The following from the Toronto Star relates to the feeling of the farmers on the Lake front region of Ontario in the matter of barley. A few years ago, barley was a staple and profitable crop on the lake front section of Ontario from Kingston in the East to Pickering in the West:

WHITBY, ONT., FEB. 22.—Everybody has heard of barleywater, but what is barley money?

David Galbraith, Whitby's harbourmaster, defines it as "the money that built the best homes in this neighbourhood," and he is probably right. He has had charge of the harbour for thirty years, and he remembers the "good old times" when the farmers of the district grew so much barley for export to the United States that the harbour, which is one of the best on the north shore, was a money-making enterprise. In the reciprocity agreement he sees a return to the old barley-growing days. "In fact," he says, "there have been more enquiries for barley for seed this year than ever before." Grain merchants corroborate this statement. Anticipating the passing of the agreement, farmers on the north shore counties are preparing to take advantage of the free harbour market which it will afford.

This Conservative Approves.

Galbraith is a Conservative, but he is holding up both hands for the trade pact. "It will certainly do the farmers good, and I think I'll manage to be loyal, too," he said with a smile. "When the duty was put on barley, the trade of Whitby Harbour was given a crushing blow. We had shipped as high at half a million bushels a season, but the tariff killed the trade. Boat after boat had to be sold because there was no grain to be carried. Land which was then worth from $100 to $110 per acre is now quoted at about $60. If the agreement goes through, it will go up again. I think Toronto will be hit, but we can't help help that. Give the farmer a show."

That is the language of David Galbraith, Conservative, but not of Reeve Jackson, who is secretary of the Conservative Association. Ex-Reeve W. B. Pringle dropped into the Reeve's store and sat down on the other side of the stove. Then he began to praise reciprocity, and a duel of words promptly ensued.

"Nix" on Macdonald.

"You fellows are just sore because the Laurier Government has done what Sir John A. Macdonald couldn't do," intimated Mr. Pringle.

"He's dead. Bar him!" objected Reeve Jackson.

But that did not end the argument. The Reeve took the aggressive. "Why in the name of common sense," he asked, "should two men go over to Washington and change the whole treaty policy of the country without the mandate of the people?"

"Well, now," said Mr. Pringle, sparing for time to think, "you've asked me a question—"

"Yes—"

"And I'll answer it."

"Well?"

"Well, the Laurier Government went into office in 1896 on a free trade policy——"

"And didn't carry it out," interrupted Mr. Jackson. "Do you know there seems something wrong with men like Laurier. They reach a certain point when they seem to get their head turned, and do something to cut their own throat." He paused a minute to let his neatly concoted metaphor sink in, and then proceeded. "Now, why on earth should he try to change the whole policy of the country when we're doing better than we ever did before?"

"Going One Better."

"Man," said Mr. Pringle, "It's like this. The concern's doing well, and so Laurier he comes forward and says, 'Boys, let's go one better.'"

"I hope," exclaimed the Reeve indignantly, "that you like to see the time when you have to shoulder the musket to keep the Stars and Stripes from flying over the country."

"Now, Albert," began Mr. Pringe soothingly.

"See here," said his opponent, "I've got a meeting of the Irish Association at four o'clock, and so have you, and it's after four now."

So off they went together. Their arcument is typical of the many which are taking place throughout the country.

If Mayor J. H. Downey had been present, Mr. Pringle would have a backer. Mr. Downey is a lifelong Conservative, but there is nothing but reciprocity for him. Like Mr. Galbraith, he sees every sign of the return of the "barley days." "Even now," he told The Star, "the prospect of a free market for the barley has given rise to a demand for seed greater than for fifteen years. And why shouldn't it? We get 55 to 60 cents for our barley in Toronto, while the New York State farmer gets 70 to 80 cents in Buffalo. In 1889 just before the duty became operative, we shipped 4200000 bushels out of Whitby harbour, receiving in return $300,000 in cash. To-day not 20,000 bushels go out in a season. There has been a depreciation in the value of every foot of land on the north shore from which barley formerly was produced. Our harbour was bought for $65,000, but now it is to be taken over by the Dominion Government at a value of $90,000. If used to be run at a profit. Since barley shipping ceased it has been run at a loss.

This Mayor Says Things.

"I think," went on the Mayor, "that the reciprocity agreement will benefit the farmer in every way. The objectors are the manufacturers, who are scared, and a lot of millionaire capitalists who fear that some of their surplus profits will be sliced off. The fatter the pig, the more grease they want rubbed on their ears. What right have Messrs. Matthews and Flavelle to complain? They are just sore because there is to be competition in barley and live stock buying. As it is, the Canadian Malting Company controls the price of barley, except that marketed and Mr. Flavelle pretty nearly indicates the price of live stock. All the millionaires are against this agreement. Well, there's a reason.

"Just to show you how free trade works out, I might instance red clover seed, which is already free. We had over $40,000 of this which we couldn't sell for export to the old country within a dollar of the price we paid the farmers. Why, if there had been a duty on that going into the States, where would we have been? And as a market of 90,000,000 people to the south of us not worth having, even if we didn't use it?

"Barley growing is going to mean a great era of prosperity for the farmers of this district. It's not like pigs, it isn't eating anything when it's being held for a higher price. I've been a Conservative all my life, but I think the Laurier Government ought to be complimented for accomplishing what Sir John Macdonald laboured all his life to achieve—and laboured in vain."

Apparently there isn't much doubt as to what two at least of Whitby's Conservatives think of the prospect of free trade.

SMASHERS BEWARE

Mr. Lewis Wants to Put a Penalty on Smashing Baggage—A Rise For Mail Clerks is Contemplated

YESTERDAY IN HOUSE

Ottawa, Feb. 25.—An interlude in the reciprocity debate occurred yesterday when the House went into committee of supply. A number of items were brought up, the chief of which was a desultory discussion on the Long Sault dam project.

Col. Sam Hughes introduced the question, stating that although the bill had been rejected in Washington by the House of Representatives, it now appeared in an amended form in the Senate. As Congress ceased on March 4 he thought the Government should take active steps to prevent the passage of the bill, as it was an invasion of rights under the Ashburton treaty. He also stated that the rights under that treaty had been superceded by the international waterways treaty.

Dr. Reid (Grenville) continued the discussion. He complained that while Canada had always observed her treaty obligations, the United States had always found an opportunity to evade them. Canadian vessels could not use the state canals, such as the Erie, while armed vessels were stationed on the great lakes, nominally maintained by the States as training ships.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier replied that the Government had made proper representations to Ambassador Bryce, and the correspondence would be presented on Monday.

"Now is the time for this House to take action," said Col. Hughes.

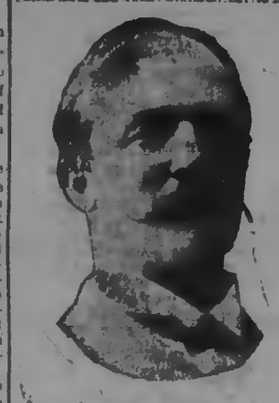
Dr. Reid kept up the attack by saying that prominent friends of the Government were behind the enterprise, while Col. Hughes remarked that the Minister of Railways had blushed when the charge was made that it had friends among the seats of the mighty.

Mr. Graham thought that Canadian vessels could use the canals of New York State.

E. N. Lewis (N. Huron) introduced his tenth bill for the session, this time to provide a penalty for "baggage smashing." He proposes to inflict a fine on summary conviction of fifty dollars in excess of the damage done by baggagemen in handling trunks, etc., or in default, one month in jail.

Hon. George P. Graham said that the railways were liable up to the amount of baggage carried, but he had no objection to the bill having a first reading.

Replying to a question by Mr. Borden, the Minister of Railways said that the contract for the Quebec bridge had not yet been signed. He confirmed the retirement of Mr. Vaulet, chairman of the Quebec Bridge Commission, on account of ill-health.



E. N. LEWIS.

During the discussion of Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux's postoffice estimates in the House of Commons last night the Minister informed J. E. Armstrong that he was preparing a bill which would give Canadian railway mail clerks, stampers and sorters an increase in pay.

Mr. Armstrong pressed the Minister for details, but Mr. Lemieux said that, while he and his Deputy Minister had made up their minds as to the amount of increase, the matter had not yet been dealt with by council. The increase, he assured the House, would be a substantial one.

Mr. Armstrong asked if the Minister proposed to place the mail clerks under the civil service act.

E. M. MacDonald expressed the hope that the Minister had no such intention.

Mr. Lemieux said that a year or two ago he was under the impression that this could be done, but the more he studied the act the less inclined he was to think it advisable. The act was too exact. Under its provisions it would not be possible to deal with the special conditions which exist, more particularly in respect of securing extra help at rush seasons. It was possible that the employes in the postoffices of the larger cities might be brought under the operation of the act.

Mr. Lemieux during the discussion of his estimates also made the important announcement that there would be a special issue of stamps to mark the coronation of King George. He did not give any details, but announced that a copy of the design would shortly be received from England, and would be submitted to the House.

On the discussion of the estimates of the Labor Department, Dr. Reid (Grenville) said that in most settlements of strikes by the Government, he found that the company got the best of it. It was that way in the Grand Trunk Railway strike.

Hon. Mr. King thought not. Strikes were difficult things to settle. The G.T.R. strike settlement was a fair one.

W. B. Northrup (E. Hastings) claimed that the Grand Trunk had not lived up to its strike settlement pledge, and said the Government should take action to enforce the settlement. The men were not all back in 90 days, as stated they would be.

Mr. King pointed out that the 90 days' clause was not in the written agreement of the strike settlement. But it was through the influence of the Government that Judge Barron was appointed, and his work had resulted in many adjustments being made that otherwise might have caused misunderstanding.

The darker the cloud the brighter the sun when he breaks through the rift.

Imitation Cough Cures

Is an Imitation Cough Medicine Good Enough for Your Children?

When you are sick and send for the doctor you don't want him to send a young medical student he has in his office. You would rather have the young fellow experiment on somebody else.

No more do you want imitations of the medicine you know to be of proven value in the cure of disease.

The remarkable success of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine in the cure of croup, bronchitis and colds has proven too great a temptation to imitators. They expect you to take chances with their medicines because the price is a few cents less.

Imitations are never sold on merit, but depend on the merit of the article they imitate. You don't want to be experimented on, and for this reason will insist on seeing the portrait and signature of A. W. Chase, M.D., the famous Receipt Book author, on the bottle you buy.

As it is made of simple ingredients of proven value, it is well suited for as a treatment for children. That it is effective in the cure of croup, bronchitis, whooping cough and the most severe coughs and colds is attested by its many years of continued success and enormous sales. 25 cents, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

TWO DIE IN WRECK

Train Jumps Track at New Germany, Nova Scotia, With Tragic Result—Fire Added to Horror

FIVE WERE INJURED

Halifax, Feb. 25.—The Halifax and Southwestern train from Iddleton for Lunenburg was wrecked near New Germany last evening. Two men were killed and five persons were more or less badly injured. The cars took fire and the passengers were rescued through the roof, which had to be cut. It was impossible to get out by the door. The accident, it is thought, was caused by spreading rails. The engine and two or three box cars went along all right, but the baggage car and passenger car at the rear jumped and fell over a ten-foot embankment, lying on their side.

In a few minutes after the cars fell over, the baggage car took fire, and the flames afterwards spread to the passenger coach, which held 12 persons. Within the baggage cars were four men. Standing on the outside was Orien Sargent, the baggagemaster. He was thrown to the ground and the car fell on him, causing instant death.

People ran to the baggage car and opened the door. They pulled out three men, and, thinking that was all, they diverted their attention to the passengers. One had been left, however, and he perished in the fire that burned the baggage car, if he had not been killed in its fall. His name was Lock McLaughlin.

Axes were used and the skylights of the passenger coach were cut away and the passengers pulled out. They were seriously bruised, but none fatally injured.

Public Employment Bureau.

Montreal, Feb. 24.—In two weeks' time the Provincial Government will open a public employment bureau on Craig street. Men and women of all grades will be supplied to fill positions in all parts of the province. Provincial Factory Inspector Guyon will be in charge of the work.

"Every man," he said, "will be asked by our expert as to his capabilities in the line of work he desires. This will protect the manufacturer and allow us to stand behind a man. We limit our works, however, just at present to the British subject and Canadian born.

"Our rooms will be fitted up finely with separate rooms for stenographers and domestics and so forth. A manufacturer may come down to our offices and hire his man on the spot, using our desks and telephone.

"Another of the branches of the work of care in protecting workmen who go to some private agencies and get fleeced out of their money. Every private agency will have to get a permit from our department."

Kingston Pipe Broken.

Kingston, Feb. 25.—Owing to an accident at the pumping station, shore water is being pumped into the mains. The spindle valve in the intake pipe, about 1,300 feet out from shore, was broken while the valve was being shut off to make a test of the outer part of the intake pipe. Medical health Officer Williamson has had the amount of chloride of lime trebled, and is advising citizens to boil the water. The repairs may take three days.

DENOUNCES BONUS.

Allan Studholme Attacks System of Bringing In Help.

Toronto, Feb. 25.—Cabinet Ministers and the Opposition leader paid the Labor party the compliment of sitting attentive listeners yesterday afternoon to a lengthy address by the representative of labor. The back benchers were conspicuous by their absence, however.

W. H. Hoyle, chairman of the committee on standing orders, said that he was glad to be able to report to the House that, for the first time in its history, the committee would be able to complete its work with but the one extension of time, which expired yesterday.

Sir James Whitney stated that Hon. Col. Hendrie, chairman of the select committee, on the bill respecting the protection of scaffolding, had found a difficulty in securing a quorum. He therefore moved the addition of Messrs. Kohler, Fisher and Bradburn to the committee, five members to form a quorum. The motion was agreed to.

Hon. Col. Matheson moved the House into committee on the bill authorizing the expenditure of $500,000 for the re-purchase of timber limits in Algonquin Park.

Hon. Col. Matheson said the holdings to be immediately paid for covered 350 square miles. The annual income from matured timber would be $12,000 to $13,000 in perpetuity.

Sir James Whitney said that the Lieutenant-Governor had assented to an order-in-council for the limits to be immediately seceded.

Hon. A. S. MacKay asked for certain detailed information which is in the possession of the Minister of Mines, who was out of the city. The bill was accordingly left over.

Hon. A. G. MacKay, S. Clarke and D. Reed criticised the outlay of $5,000 for experimental fruit tree spraying as too limited to be effective. Mr. Clark said the amount should be $100,000.

Hon. J. S. Duff contended that, for educational purposes, $5,000 was sufficient, and the estimates were passed.

When the colonization estimates were reached, A. Studholme announced that he would probably take until midnight to express his views. He, however, confined himself to one hour and twenty-five minutes. The criticism was an earnest repetition of his budget debate argument that the true way to colonize New Ontario was to follow the example of New Zealand in advancing money to land-seekers whether Canadians or immigrants, to enable them to take up new territory.

He denounced the bonus of $5 a head on servant girls and farm laborers who were brought here with a lien on their wages, as a vicious and unnecessary method of lowering the scale of wages for domestic servants and agricultural help.

Rush a Temporary Line.

Hamilton, Feb. 25.—Following a conference with the Hydro Commission, Mayor Lees announced yesterday that Chief Engineer Sothman is prepared to come here with fifty men and erect a temporary line within two or three days to any of the factories to relieve the power situation if called upon to do so.

Hundreds of men out of the factories are still idle here but the Cataract promises to have everything in full swing by to-night and pending this the city will postpone action on the commission's offer.

Canada's Welcome of Connaught.

London, Feb. 25.—At a lecture in the Imperial Institute yesterday afternoon by Miss Cameron on "Canada," Lord Strathcona presided and there were also present the Duke and Duchess of Argyll. Lord Strathcona referred to the gratification with which the appointment of the Duke of Connaught had been received by the people of Canada, not only because of his connection with the throne, but on personal grounds. Canadians, too, had the pleasantest recollection of the sojourn of the Duke of Argyll at Government House.

Harem Skirt in New York.

New York, Feb. 25.—Brooklyn bridge broke its record as a scene of dare-devil exploits yesterday. A suicide or professional bridge jumper never thrilled the throng of bridge promenaders more than did the appearance of the dashing young blonde on the great thoroughfare late yesterday afternoon. She was attired in the new harem skirt—the first of the millions of New York women publicly to venture the new affectation of men's clothes, which has stirred continental cities to riot. It nearly came to that on the bridge yesterday.

Forgery Charge Dismissed.

Ottawa, Feb. 25.—The charge of forgery preferred against Major E. C. Arnoldi, local agent for the Don Valley Brick Works, was dismissed in the Police Court yesterday.

An Academic Exodus.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 25.—Thirty-one professors and sixty-eight assistant professors have resigned their posts at the University of Moscow since the trouble with the students began. The business men of Moscow have made public a letter attacking the Government's attitude toward the universities.

Montreal's New Car Fenders.

Montreal, Feb. 25.—In response to the order of the Utilities Committee the Montreal Street Railway will, within a few weeks, equip all their cars with new fenders of the "H.B." pattern, from New York, as the most suitable for cars in a city where there are steep hills. The fender proper is under the front platform, and immediately in front of the wheels of the fore truck.

Adjust Cartage Rates.

London, Feb. 25.—Five of the largest industries in the east end will appeal to the Ontario Railway Board to have the cartage rates charged by the railroads adjusted so as to permit of the abolishing of a new rate recently made by the companies for carting their goods to the trains.

Fight Cannot Be Held.

Hamilton, Feb. 25.—Mayor Lees yesterday instructed Chief Smith to stop the ten-round bout between Lang of Toronto and Wildfong of Berlin, here on Monday night. The mayor said: "The magistrate advises me it is absolutely against the law."

Gambling Raid In Montreal.

Montreal, Feb. 25.—Between $1,200 and $1,300 worth of gambling paraphernalia, consisting of a roulette wheel, faro bank table, crap table, card cases, chips, checks, etc., were seized Thursday night in a raid at 17 East Sherbrooke street.

WOMEN CURED AT HOME

Women's disorders always yield from the very beginning of the treatment to the mild, but effective, action of Orange Lily. Within two or three days after commencing its use the improvement becomes noticeable, and this improvement continues until the patient is completely cured. Orange Lily is an applied or local treatment, and acts directly on the womanly organs, removing the congestion, toning and strengthening the nerves, and restoring perfect circulation in the diseased parts. In order to convince all suffering women of the value of this remedy, I will send a 35-cent box, enough for ten days' treatment, absolutely FREE to each lady sending me her address. MRS. FRANCES E. THE INTERESTING STORY OF DAMON AND PYTHIAS

Told by Mr. Frederick B. Wilson in a Beautiful Fraternal Mono-Drama, Under Auspices of the Knights of Pythias.

AN ENJOYABLE EVENT

The concert given by the Knights of Pythias, in the Conservatory of Music Hall, last night, was rather poorly attended. Halpenny's Orchestra furnished the musical part of the programme, while the chief feature of the programme was the presentation of that beautiful mono drama entitled "Damon and Pythias," by Mr. Wilson, who is a dramatic artist of repute.

Mr. F. G. Hassard occupied the chair, and, needless to say, he carried his duties to a successful issue.

Mr. Wilson, in his introductory remarks, gave a brief outline of the chief characteristics of the play in general, and drew attention to the fact, that the foundation of the Order, of which, he was glad to be a representative, was based on the third act of the play. It was fourteen years since Mr. Wilson had visited Peterborough last, and he was pleased to return and have the pleasure of renewing old acquaintances, and addressing those present who had segregated themselves with a view to delving into the mysteries of the fraternal drama.

The impersonation of the nine characters concerned in the play, by Mr. Wilson, was admirably carried out. The first act of the play consisted chiefly of an introduction to the first five characters of the play, which was followed by a clear, forceful display of impersonation outlining the turbulent scenes in connection with the installation of "Dionysius," the tyrant, as king of "Sicily," and the ejection of Damon from the Senate Chamber, and subsequent imprisonment.

The second act covered the opening of the senate with the new King installed on the throne of Sicily, also the trial of Damon and the imposition of the death sentence.

Act III., upon which the Order of the Knights of Pythias was founded, followed the vicissitudes of Damon's friend, Pythias, during the former's imprisonment. It describes how Pythias forsook his affianced wife, in order that he might go and substitute himself in Damon's place, in order that his friend might go and bid farewell to his wife and children.

Mr. Wilson here leads his audience up to a pitch of intense expectation as to what the outcome of Damon's release from the condemned cell will bring about, but the situation is relieved by the appearance of Damon at the psychological moment previous to the hour set for the execution.

The grand climax to the scene was capped by the release of both Damon and Pythias, and their elevation to positions of honour.

Mr. Wilson, in his closing remarks, emphasized the fact that the story was based on actual facts, and was not the inevitable results of an overworked imagination.

Mr. Wilson will be in town until Monday, and will be pleased to renew the acquaintances of any of his former friends who so desire. He is a guest at the Oriental during his stay in the city.

Are Microbes In Your Scalp?

It Has Been Proved That Microbes Cause Baldness

Professor Unna of Hamburg, Germany, and Dr. Sabourand, the leading French dermatologist, discovered that a microbe caused baldness. Their theory has time and again been amply verified through research experiments carried on under the observation of eminent scientists. This microbe lodges in the Sebum, which is the natural hair oil, and when permitted to flourish it destroys the hair follicles and in time the pores entirely close, and the scalp gradually takes on a shiny appearance. When this happens there is no hope of the growth of hair being revived.

We have a remedy which will, we honestly believe, remove dandruff, exterminate the microbe, promote good circulation in the scalp and around the hair roots, tighten and revitalize the hair roots and overcome baldness, so long as there is any life left in the hair roots.

We back up this statement with our own personal guarantee that this remedy called Rexall "93" Hair Tonic will be supplied free of all cost to the user if it fails to do as we state.

It will frequently restore gray and faded hair to its original colour, providing loss of colour has been acused by disease-yet it is in no sense a dye. Rexall "93" Hair Tonic accomplishes these results by making every hair root, follicle and pigment gland strong and active, and by stimulating a natural flow of colouring pigment throughout the hair cells.

We exact no obligations or promises — we simply ask you to give Rexall "93" Hair Tonic a thorough trial and if not satisfied tell us and we will refund the money you paid us for it. Two sizes, prices 50 cents and $1.00. Remember you can obtain it in Peterboro' only at our store.—The Rexall Store, McDermid and Imry, corner George and Charlotte street.

NEW CANDIDATES

A special meeting of Court Peterborough No. 29, C.O.F., was held in their court room, Simcoe street, for the purpose of inititing candidates that had been secured through the efforts of Bro. Garner, who has been sent here by the superintendent of organization to assist the local brethren in securing new members. Judging from the progress he has made thus far we can safely predict a goodly number of new members.

SUCCESSFUL SALE

The Andrew Nelson sale, held in the Township of Otonabee on Thursday, of high-grade stock, implements, etc., drew a large crowd of willing buyers. The sale, which was conducted by C. Stapleton & Son, drew big prices. Cows brought from $64 to $98, heifers, $42 to $68; spring calves, $28 to $32; a team of draught horses sold for $364; while the general purpose horses sold for good prices.

The sale was a first-class one in every respect, the total proceeds amounting to $2,230.

SPLENDID LECTURE BY REV. FATHER FITZPATRICK

Much Valuable Advice Given to Members of St. Peter's T. A. S. in an Eloquent Address Last Night.

ENJOYABLE PROGRAMME

A most enjoyable evening was spent at St. Alphonsus' Lyceum last night, when Rev. Father Fitzpatrick of Ennismore, gave a splendid lecture. The occasion was marked by an unusually large crowd, and the programme was a most enjoyable and high-class one. Mr. R. J. Beggley made an ideal chairman, and expressed his extreme appreciation and thanks for the splendid turnout. The hall was crowded and great enthusiasm and appreciation were displayed by the audience.

The programme reflected extreme credit upon the entertainers. The first item on the programme was a pianoforte solo, "March of Delhi," by Mr. J. Perry. It was very much appreciated, and evoked great applause. A male quartette, composed of Messrs. Henshaw, Lee, Cairn and New, contributed a number, "Sweet and Low," and the eager applause with which it was greeted, was no uncertain proof of the appreciation of the audience. A song entitled "I Will be True to Thee," sung by Mr. Cairn, was the next number on the programme and was heartily received.

A duet, "The Moon Hath Raised Her Lamp Above," by Messrs. Henshaw and New, was a splendid number, and an encore was demanded. The next item was a song entitled "The Bridge," by Mr. Douglas. The hearty applause which was given by the audience was evidence of the appreciation they had for the number. A comic song, given by Mr. Thompson was irresistibly funny and an encore was called, which was equally appreciated. A song entitled "The Irish Immigrant" was the contribution of Mr. Henshaw, and was certainly greatly appreciated by the audience, the fact being shown by the eager applause. This ended the first half of the programme.

A most interesting and profitable lecture was given by Rev. Father Fitzpatrick. He expressed his appreciation at being present, also at seeing such a large audience. He expressed his warm feelings of gratitude at seeing the interest the audience was taking in the programme, and also for the welcome they had tendered to him. His address was principally to the young people, although there were many valuable points, which, if followed, would also prove profitable to the older people. He pointed out the value of education, and stated that the Catholics did not take the interest in educating their children as they should. He said, if they take notice that in the towns and cities there are few Catholic doctors or teachers, or professional men. He attributed this fact to the negligence of parents to give their children education. He said that they were satisfied if their children passed the entrance or could teach for a few years, but, in his opinion, this was not enough. He told them that if they were in a position at all to give their children a university education; that they should spare no means in doing so. It is better to give the children an education than to leave them loads of maney. He also touched upon the quality of the young people themselves, especially the young men. He advised them to be courageous and to work, never give up, or get discouraged, but to work. He referred them to the millionaires, who began life without money or education. He said that they had ambition and they worked, and that there was no secret way of becoming rich or gaining distinction. Work and ambition are the only secrets.

Rev. Fr. Fitpatrick's address was a feature of the evening, and the extreme appreciation of the audience was evidenced in no uncertain manner. Mr. James Dorris moved a vote of thanks to Rev. Fr. Fitzpatrick for his very interesting lecture. This move was seconded by Mr. S. Shaunessey and was endorsed by the audience.

The second part of the programme was introduced by "Gipsy's Laughing Chorus," by Messrs. Lee, Cairns, Douglas and New. It was given in a very acceptable manner, and was greatly applauded. The next was a song by Mr. Lee, which was thoroughly appreciated and received an encore. A duet, "Excelsior," by Messrs. Lee and New, was the next number and was splendidly rendered. The next item was a song by Mr. A. New, entitled "A Bandit's Life," which was warmly applauded.

Mr. Thompson then sang a comic song in inimitable fashion.

A more enjoyable programme has not been heard in the hall. The accompanist of the evening was Mr. Perry, who filled the position very acceptably.

Rev. Fr. McColl spoke a word, before the singing of the National Anthem, expressing his appreciation for the large crowd which turned out. He also hoped that they would profit by the able and interesting lecture by Rev. Fr. Fitpatrick. He did not want to speak at length as the hour was getting late, so requested the audience to join in singing the closing number "The National Anthem."

At the close of this most enjoyable concert, the Committee entertained those taking part at a supper at Hooper's Prim Parlours. Both Rev Father McColl and Rev. Dr. O'Brien were present. Several appropriate speeches were made, and a pleasant time was enjoyed. The only regrettable feature was the absence of Rev. Father Fitzpatrick, who was unable to be present.

The entertainers on this programme will also be on the programme at an entertainment to be held at Ennismore next week.

WHAT EVERY WOMAN SHOULD KNOW

Dodd's Kidney Pills the Sure Cure For All Aches and Pains

Mrs. Vaillancourt adds her experience to the great mass of proof that Dodd's Kidneys Pills are woman's best friend.

Lafond, Alberta, Feb. 24.—(Special).—That the women of the West are finding in Dodd's Kidney Pills a sure relief from those aches and pains that only women know is becoming more evident every day, and Mrs. Agnes Vaillancourt of this place gladly gives her experience as an addition to the mass of proof that is being piled up.

"For three years I suffered intensely with Kidney Disease," Mrs. Vaillancourt states. "I had pain everywhere. I only used six boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills and I am completely cured of all my aches and pains. I am in perfect health to-day."

Woman's health depends on her Kidneys. If they are not in perfect order the impurities are not strained out of her blood and she cannot be healthy. She feels it in every part of her body and the result is that she is weary and worn and full of aches and pains. What every woman should know is that there is sure relief and perfect health for her if she uses Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Nothing better for health than good fresh Fruit, such as Florida Grape Fruit, California Oranges, Cuba Pineapples, Sweet Potatoes, Rhubarb, Cauliflowers Green Onions, Lettuce, Parsley. Also full line of Smoked and Fresh Fish & Sealshipt Oysters fresh every day. Both Phones 18.—WALTER J. OKE.

SONGSTERS' SERVICES

To Be Conducted at the Salvation Army Temple

A series of very interesting services will be conducted by the Salvation Songsters' Brigade on Saturday and Sunday, 25th and 26th, in the S. A. Temple. Music and singing will be the principal features throughout these services, interspersed with interesting addressed by special speakers.

On Monday evening a very excellent Service of Song entitled "Singing Jim" will be given by the Songsters' Brigade, assisted by Mr. Joseph John, well known in the city as an elocutionist of considerable ability. The admission is 10 cents and the proceeds will be devoted to the Songsters' organ fund.

THE PEACE RIVER COUNTRY

Owing to the development in that part of Western Canada west of Edmonton and the business impetus that is now going on in that territory, and in order to adequately take care of the trek into the Peace River country, where 15,000 new homesteads will be offered for free entry by the Dominion Government this year, a daily, except Sunday, passenger train is now operated by the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway between Edmonton and Edson, Alta.

From the latter point the new Government waggon road enables settlers with their effects, to travel with ease and comparative comfort in about one week's time to the Grande Prairie, as against the much longer and more expensive routes through gateways east of Edson, which occupy from a month and a half to two months.

The new train will leave Edmonton daily, except Sunday, at 6.30 a.m., arrive at Edson (130 miles) at 1 p.m., returning leave Edson at 3.30 p.m., daily, except Sunday, arriving at Edmonton at 10.05 p.m.

CONSERVATIVES WHO COME OUT IN FAVOUR OF TRADE AGREEMENT

The Toronto Star has been interviewing the lake front farmers in regard to the reciprocal trade agreement and finds some outspoken opinion even among staunch Conservative farmers.

Dr. Leslie, (veterinary and farmer) president of the West Durham Conservative Association, says:

"As a farmer, I approve of the reciprocal agreement. I am interested in fruit, and I think it will help our market for fruit, especially the winter varieties. Then it will increase the value of our lambs, and I think it will be a fine thing for our dairy products."

"Then you are perfectly satisfied with the arrangement."

"As a farmer, I am pleased with it."

"And you would uphold the Government on a straight reciprocity issue?"

"As a farmer, I would. I don't pretend, however, to be able to figure out the effect upon Canada as a whole."

Another of the farmers interviewed was Nathaniel Maybee, and Mr. Maybee, normally, is just as vigorous a Tory as Dr. Leslie. Also, he is just as much in favour of the reciprocity agreement. "Yes," he said, "it's true that I am a Conservative, and it's true that I am pleased with the Government's proposal. It is the very thing we wanted, especially those of us who are interested in fruit growing. Apples will fetch generally better prices. Both stock and grain farming will pay better than now. Barley and oat crops promise to be particularly profitable."

"Then you'd back up the Government if this were the only issue?"

"Yes," answered Mr. Maybee; "I certainly feel that way at present."

Dozens of other farmers could be cited who bear similar testimony. "I think the agreement is all right," Reeve Cann, of Hope, assured The Star. "Taking one year with another, it will be of positive benefit."

In conclusion it may be illuminating to refer to the attitude of Mr. S. O. Taylor, a farmer who is at present on the Durham Conservative Association executive, and who was once its president. "I tell you what it is," he said, "they're calling me down for my attitude in this matter, but I'm honestly convinced that the tariff agreement is a measure for the benefit of rural Canada, and I'm prepared to stand by my opinion."

"And to vote Liberal?"

Mr. Taylor hesitated. "Look here," he said, "I've been a Tory all my life and you know what that means. I'd find it awfully hard to go to the polls and mark my ballot for a Grit. But I'll tell you this, I'd find it equally hard to mark my ballot for a man who votes against this measure. I don't know what our representative will do. I believe he's a free-trader at heart, but perhaps he will swallow Mr. Borden's attitude. I'm convinced that if the agreement were the issue this riding would elect a Liberal, though its record is Conservative.

"I think," went on Mr. Taylor, "that there has been too much politics in the treatment of this issue. Our men at Ottawa have made a mistake in opposing the arrangement. They must know that it is to the advantage of farmers. As for myself, I've voted for a protectionist policy all my life, and there's no use talking, that is the policy that Sir Wilfrid has so far favoured. But the manufacturers have been well treated. They have had every opportunity to build up their business. Why, after all they have received, should they grudge the farmer a measure which is designed for his benefit, a measure I think, which is the best thing ever offered to rural Ontario? I think the Laurier Government is deserving of credit for doing something for the farmer, who has been neglected and disregarded altogether too long."

"What will be your own benefit from the agreement?"

"I think I will be generally benefitted. I hope to profit, for one thing, by the removal of duty on barley. I'm not afraid to compete with the American farmer, and no one need tell me that a market of 92,000,000 people will be no use to us.

"I believe," he concluded, "that if my party were to get into power after the agreement is ratified they would continue it, just as Laurier continued their policy. What is more, I think the Conservatives would have been glad to get just such an agreement when they were in power. Of course, there are many who don't agree with me, and they are letting me know it. I don't see how I can attend a party convention now, but these are my honest opinions, and I feel I have a right to hold them."

There is no uncertain note in a declaration such as that, and it is the statement of a member of Durham's Conservative executive.

CONSUMPTIVE SYMPTOMS

Newark, O.—"About two years ago my wife was in very poor health. For three months she suffered from a bad cough which had settled on her lungs—she was run-down, reduced in flesh and had all the symptoms of consumption. She began taking Vinol, and before the first bottle was gone she was improved in health—before she had finished her third bottle, her cough was gone and she was well.

"We cannot say too much in praise of Vinol.—N. L. Stebleton." (We guarantee this testimonial to be genuine.)

In pulmonary troubles Vinol shows its power for good. It goes to the seat of trouble, heals the inflamed surfaces and cures the cause of the cough.

In hundreds of cases where cod liver oil and emulsion have failed, Vinol has succeeded because it contains all the curative value they do—but its good works not retarded by useless grease and oil.

Try a bottle of Vinol with the understanding that your money will be returned if it does not help you. McDermid and Jury, corner George and Simcoe streets; also Payne's drug store, corner George and Charlotte streets.

WAS DESCENDANT OF CROMWELL

In the death of Mrs. Porter Preston, at her home at Bethany, Durham, the Midland District loses one of its oldest and most interesting residents. Mrs. Preston had reached the good old age of 97 years. Her maiden name was Ann Jane Cromwell, and she was a direct descendant of Oliver Cromwell. She was born in Ireland but came to Canada when young. Her husband, the late Porter Preston, one of the seven sons of the celebrated Captain Preston, who was the seventh member of the first Orange Lodge instituted in the city of Belfast, Ireland. He was so young that a special dispensation was necessary before he could join. After coming to Canada he settled on Amherst Island, opposite Kingston, and when James Johnston, the then head of the Orange order in Ireland, visited Canada years ago, he spent some days with the loughty captain.

Captain Preston stayed on the Island for some time and then took up land in East Durham for his seven sons. When Porter Preston married, he took his bride to his East Durham home. They lived there until Porter Preston's death. Then Mrs. Preston moved to Bethany village.

Mr. and Mrs. Porter Preston had seven daughters, of whom three are living. Mrs. Dow, of Montreal, Miss Addie Preston, of Bethany, and Miss Jane Preston, owner of a plantation in Cuba, but who was with her mother when she died. Mrs. Preston was an aunt of Mr. J. J. Preston, M.P.P., for East Durham and Mr. W. A. Preston, M.P.P. for Rainy River, and a grandmother of Mr. W. J. Elliott, of Toronto.

SUFFRAGETTE PARTIES ALL THE RAGE IN PETERBOROUGH

Suffragette parties are very strongly in vogue in Peterborough at the present time. Perhaps the expression may seem a little peculiar, but it is easily explained. During the winter season htere has been a large number of social events at which man, mere man, has been conspicuous by his absence. The women have been holding card parties, at homes, and similar events without the assistance or even the presence of, the lord of creation. In fact, these feminine gatherings have had considerbaly the preponderance in the festivities of the present season. Why is this? The reason, perhaps, is hard to find. One lady explained it to the Examiner by saying that she had become weary last season of trying to get her husband to accompany her to such events, and so it had been decided to get along without any masculine assistance.

ST. PAUL'S BROTHERHOOD MEMBERS IDEAL HOSTS

A very enjoyable evening was spent in the school room of St. Paul's church last night when Knox church Brotherhood were the guests of St. Paul's. About one hundred were present. Miss Hill gave a pleasant instrumental number. Mr. Johns presented some recitations in his usual capable manner. Mr. Gilchrist gave an interesting account of the life of Robinson Crusoe, and also explained many parts of the large guns used in the English navy, which was illustrated by lantern slides and was much appreciated by the boys. The next part of the programme was a very enjoyable supper given by the Ladies' Aid. After tendering all who had taken part in the programme a hearty vote of thanks, the meeting came to a close in the usual way.

W. C. T. U. TO HOLD AN ANTI-CIGARETTE MEETING

The Peterborough branch of the W. C. T. U. held their regular meeting Friday at the home of Mrs. A. R. Campbell, 421 Stewart street. The attendance was good. The devotional half hour was much enjoyed by the beautiful, helpful Bible reading, given by Mrs. (Rev.) T. Couch, from Jeremiah 18:4, "And when the vessel that He made of the clay was marred in the hands of the potter, he made it again, another vessel as seemed good to the potter to make it."

After the business session the Union had a short educational programme.

Mrs. Johnstone gave an address on the white slave traffic. A note of warning to all mothers was sounded to beware of allowing their daughters to accept situations from other cities, as too often these are a modus operandi of the terrible organized traffic.

Mrs. Goodfellow gave an interesting paper upon the growing evil of the tobacco habit.

At the close of the meeting refreshments were served.

The W. C. T. U. are requesting that each Sabbath School in the city appoint a Temperance Secretary, whose duty would be to plan for the work of temperance in the school.

A committee has been appointed to confer with Superintendents of schools re the holding of a mass anti-cigarette meeting Sunday, March 19.

A schoolboy gives me the following up-to-date version of the old familiar rhyme of the schoolroom, after reading opinions of the leading dailies on the reciprocity crisis:

Tea Spoils with Age

No tea is fit to drink after it is two years old. That is the age limit of tea quality and benefit. The best tea is the freshest.

"Salada" Tea owes much of its world-wide reputation to its sale fresh from the plantation. The leaves are fresh picked every week the year 'round; then dried, sorted and packed in air-tight lead packages. Every five weeks a new picking of "Salada" comes fresh from plantation to purchaser.

Well-Known Artist Dead.

Brockville, Feb. 25.—Prof. H. T. S. G. Weemys, a well-known artist and inventor, of Eastern Ontario, died at his home here yesterday, aged 84. For a number of years he lived in Renfrew County, teaching school, before settling in Brockville. He was a graduate of Dumfries Academy and Edinburgh University. His widow and two children survive.

The death occurred here yesterday afternoon at the age of 88 years of Mrs. John S. Fraser, the mother of the late Hon. C. E. Fraser, for many years Minister of Public Works in the Cabinet of Sir Oliver Mowat. Mrs. Fraser spent practically her whole life in Brockville and leaves four daughters and one son, G. K. Fraser, local registrar and clerk of the high court of Brockville.

He was born in Devonport, England, in 1845, and was once in the British navy, but later called to the Bar in England, coming to Canada in 1875.

NEW BRUNSWICK'S VERSATILITY

Down East Doctor Has Written a Work on the Bacon Controversy.

Bacon says somewhere — can't remember his exact words—that reading maketh a full man. There is a medical doctor, who used to inhale the literary atmosphere of New Brunswick, called G. Walter Steeves acting on that principle right now. Indeed, reading, and latterly writing, have got this anatomical expert pretty far, even to a headliner in the literary world of London, England; in which Dr. Steeves resembles that canny analyst of Montreal, Andrew Macphail, M.D., who submits to London editors a diagnosis of the ills of the body politic, after a gruelling appendicitis clinic; with this exception, that Dr. Macphail, unlike Dr. Steeves, cultivates the muses on Canadian soil.

Dr. Steeves has just written a book on Francis Bacon, who seems to be his literary hero. In this work he gives Bacon's "dates," as they say still in public history classes, chats easily about the Platonist's writings, and refers to the company kept by the worthy philosopher, in particular to the Earl of Essex. Says Dr. Steeves of the "Apology in Certain Imputations Concerning the Late Earl of Essex":

"Most readers will probably concur in the opinion that it would have been better had such an apology never appeared at all as it in no way strengthens Bacon's case or palliates his conduct." Did Bacon write Shakespeare's plays? Dr. Steeves does not say so, but instances in his book might be cited if space permitted, from which one might infer that he has some suspicion that Bacon may have been a mysterious dramatist.

One thing, let it be said of Dr. Steeves, the litterateur. He is as cool with his pen and dips of ink, as if he held the surgeon's blade. There is no ranting, no extravaganza about his "Francis Bacon." He is impartial and scientific. Listen to what he says of the chequered Bacon's character:

"Through all his chequered career and full life, we should remember that Bacon never wearied in his devotion as a student of nature and a seeker after truth."

By heredity Dr. Steeves ought to have been a politician. He is a son of the late Hon. William H. Steeves, who was a tall enough man on the stump in his day, down in New Brunswick, to be classed among those patricians, "The Fathers of Confederation." Dr. Steeves graduated in arts at the University of New Brunswick some years ago, and later studied medicine at St. Thomas' Hospital, London. It was in London he contracted quill fever. His writings have found recognition in the big reviews and in the medical journals. Dr. Steeves has one hobby outside of writing, but linked rather closely to it—Seventeenth Century Literature.

Spider Silk.

Size for size, a thread of spider silk is tougher than a bar of steel. An ordinary thread will bear a weight of three grains. This is as strong again as a steel thread of the same thickness.

A Crayon Enlargement, 18 by 24 inches, of one of the best photographs of the late Rev. Father Morrisey, the renowned priest-physician, has been prepared for admirers of the priest himself or of his wonderful prescriptions. Better even than the small reproduction above, it is a very handsome picture, worthy of framing. The Father Morrisey Medecine Co., Ltd., of Chatham, N.B., will be glad to send an enlargement, absolutely free, to each one who writes for it. 73

AN EXTRA SESSION

Of the United States House Will be Necessary to Carry Reciprocity Bill—Not Much Time Left

PROGRESS OF THE BILL

Washington, Feb. 25.—Opponents of the Canadian reciprocity agreement attempted to put a quietus on legislation on the subject when the McCall bill to carry out the provisions of the agreement late yesterday was reported "without recommendation" from the Senate committee on finance. So far as the present session of Congress is concerned they took a long step toward accomplishing their purpose.

As only a few days remain to put the bill through a hostile body, the speeches against it were accepted generally as its death knell, until a resurrection should come in an extra session.

Senator Bailey, the Democratic leader, expressed the opinion that the best interests of the agriculturists would be served by the defeat of the bill. The Texas Senator said that while the agreement admitted wheat and cattle free, it retained the duty on flour and beef meat.

"Civilized people eat flour and not wheat, beef and not cattle," he said. True it was, he continued, that the agreement provided for free wood-pulp, but this change in the tariff laws would mean the loss of almost $500,000 of revenue to the Treasury annually. He had been informed, he said, that this change would be worth $5,000,000 to the newspaper and magazine publishers, but for himself he could not consent to a measure which gave such a preference to the rich as against the poor and needy.

Senator Hale concurred in all that Mr. Bailey had said and added that while the bill had been reported without recommendation, the committee had done so in the face of the fact that an unquestioned majority could otherwise have been had for an adverse report. Coming to the consideration of the bill on its merits Mr. Hale said:

"It is my understanding that the bill will take its course in accordance with the feeling and desire of the Senate, whatever that may be. If the Senate does not choose to take it up, that course will be within its clear right, and any effort on the part of anyone, of whatever authority, to drive the Senate now or at anytime, would be an assumption of power which would be unwarranted."

Senator Stone of Missouri, minority member of the committee, announced his intention of supporting the measure on the ground that it would be in the line of wise and progressive statesmanship.

The bill went on the calendar, where it is subject to consideration whenever the Senate may decide to take it up.

Wilson and Morden Arraigned.

Toronto, Feb. 25.—Matthew Wilson K.C., and C. S. Morden, assistant manager of the Trusts & Guarantee Co., were arraigned in the Police Court yesterday morning, charged with conspiring with W. R. Travers to procure him to give the company a fraudulent preference over the other creditors of the Farmers' Bank in the matter of an alleged consolidation of $175,000 loan and a $120,000 unsecured deposit. Both pleaded not guilty, and the case was adjourned till March 3, when a day will be set for the trial, the matter will be ready for the grand jury of the sessions, which meets in a week.

An action has been begun by the shareholders of the Keeley Mines, Limited, by permission of Referee McAbrew, against the Farmers Bank for an accounting of the matters between them.

Heroine Gets Medal.

Washington, Feb. 25.—President Taft has awarded to Miss Nettie Caskey of Fairmount, Ind., a life-saving medal on recommendation of the Inter-State Commerce Commission. The President sent a personal letter of commendation for Miss Caskey's bravery.

On March 19, 1910, Miss Caskey discovered her neice, Martelle Caskey, three and a half years old, on the railroad track in front of a rapidly-approaching train. The young girl of 16 ran along the track ahead of the train and when all hope seemed lost, grabbed the little one and threw herself and the child down an embankment.

Train Fell 150 Feet.

Valparaiso, Chile, Feb. 25.—A railway train made up of eight cars, in one of which were eighty miners and the others loaded with cement, broke through the Rancagua bridge near the American Braden copper mines yesterday. The bridge crossed a ravine 150 feet deep and the train was precipitated to the bottom. The miners were all Chileans. Eighteen of them were killed and the remainder injured.

G.T.R. Agents Promoted.

Montreal, Feb. 25.—George W. Vaux, general passenger agent, G.T.R., has resigned to take an extended rest. Harry G. Elliott, his assistant, Chicago, will return to Montreal as general passenger agent; J. D. McDonald, Toronto, will go to Chicago as assistant general passenger agent, and A. E. Duff, Winnipeg, will succeed Mr. McDonald at Toronto.

The changes are effective March 1.

Found Eleven Bodies.

Tonopah, Nev., Feb. 25.—The rescue party in the Belmont mine, which caught fire on Thursday, found the bodies of eleven miners at the 1,100 foot level of the mine yesterday. It is thought more bodies will be found at the 1,500 foot level. The fire did not materially damage the mine.

Lucky Man.

"I'm certainly a lucky man."

"How so?"

"I had on my good clothes yesterday morning when my wife made her collection for the rummage sale. She couldn't give any but old stuff away."

Eczema on Leg for 25 Years

I have been treated by doctors for twenty-five years for a bad case of eczema on my leg. They did their best, but failed to cure it. My own doctor had advised me to have my leg cut off, but I said I would try the Cuticura Remedies first. He said, "try them if you like but I do not think they will do any good." At this time my leg was peeled from the knee down, my foot was like a piece of raw flesh and I had to walk on crutches. I bought a cake of Cuticura Soap, a box of Cuticura Ointment and a bottle of Cuticura Resolvent. After the first two treatments the swelling went down and in two months' use of the Cuticura Remedies my leg was cured and the new skin grown on. The doctor could not believe his own eyes when he saw that Cuticura had cured me and said that he would use Cuticura for his own patients. But for the Cuticura Remedies I might have lost my life. I am truly grateful for the wonderful cure that Cuticura wrought. I have many grandchildren and they are frequent users of Cuticura and I always recommend it most highly as a sure and economical cure for skin troubles.

DESTITUTION.

England's Rich Scored In Words That Apply Here.

In a speech in London recently on the subject of destitution among the English masses, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Lloyd George, stated that of the 420,000 adults who died last year in the British Isles five-sixths were in poverty. They left no property worth any one's while to pick up, said the Chancellor—a few articles of cheap clothing and furniture which the broker's man would not sell for rent.

The other sixth of the British adults who died in the twelve month period left $1,500,000,000, or £300,000,000 sterling in property of one kind and another. Of that large, gigantic surplus, approximately one-half — $750,000,000 — had been accumulated by 2,000 persons. Commenting on these figures, the Chancellor said:

"Did the 350,000 who died in penury lead lives of indulgence, dissipation, thriftlessness and extravagance? Did the 2,000 people who left half that enormous sum pursue careers of arduous toil, of frugality, of industry? No! It is facts such as these—the gigantic wealth at one end that a man cannot spend in a lifetime of luxury, and at the other end millions burning with semi-hunger and the pains of anxiety and poverty—which are producing the murmurs at the heart of England which show there is some disease in the system."

Lloyd George, continuing, said England's annual bill for armaments is now $350,000,000 — or $40 for every household in the United Kingdom and were this burden removed Great Britain could afford to pay every wage earner in the Kingdom an additional four shillings a week.

The Chancellor is at the head of that faction in English politics which is seeking to break up the great land holdings of the aristocracy and establish a sort of peasant proprietorship, something like that in France. His remedy for unemployment is small farming, but on the general subject of unproductive labor his views apply in America as well as in Britain and have no political significance.

"It is a shallow but common fallacy," he said, "that inasmuch as the rich find employment for and pay good wages to those who personally minister to their comfort, to that extent they are rendering a service to the community. Quite the reverse. They are withdrawing a large number of capable men and women from useful and productive work."

Dying of Love.

"Och!" said a love sick Hibernian. "What a recreation it is to be dying of love! It sets the heart aching so delicately there's no taking a wink of sleep for the pleasure of the pain.—London Telegraph.

MARKET REPORTS.

Liverpool and Chicago Wheat Futures Close Higher—Live Stock—Latest Quotations.

LIVERPOOL, Feb. 24.—The market at opening was unchanged to ⅛d lower, being influenced by the weakness in American markets yesterday. Following the opening there was a steady undertone with shorts nervous and prices advanced ¼d to ⅜d, with the principal strength in the distant months. There was an improved demand from the continent with a sale of Australian steamer to France at full prices or an advance of 2d over yesterday while an active millers' demand. The clearing strength shown in Buenos Ayres yesterday, together with firmer Plata offers helped the advance.

CHICAGO, Feb. 24.—Playing for a rally appeared to be the favorite diversion today in the wheat pit on 'change. The outcome was a success in regard to the new crop futures. The May option closed previous September finished ⅝c to ¾c up. After rarely at last night's figure. July and the final gong corn was ⅜c to ½c to ⅝c net lower; oats off ¼c to ½c, and provisions showing 5c to 12c decline.

The Tea Chewers.

"Chewing tea comes from Siam," said a traveler. "They call it mieng. It is in a plug, like chewing tobacco, and it has a villainous smell. This smell is due to the fermentation it has undergone. The tea that the Siamese employ for chewing purposes is a very coarse, rank plant. It is gathered like ordinary tea, but the leaves after being compressed into plugs are buried for fifteen days. They ferment during burial. On their resurrection they are very, very fragrant indeed. The Siamese boatmen chew tea. The rickshaw men chew it. The litterateurs chew it. They say it makes them work better. This is probably the truth, for I chewed a plug myself in Anam, and it exhilarated me strangely. But the aftermath was bad—a headache, smarting eyes and nervous depression."—Washington Post.

when, having brought his Phonograph to a point where not even the most critical could ask for improvement, he multiplied its entertaining ability by two.

He did this by producing a Phonograph Record that plays, sings or talks twice as long as the Standard Edison Records.

He did this without increasing the size of the Record, making it a Record that can be used on old instruments as well as new.

He did it without affecting in any way the clear, rich, musical tones for which Edison Records have always been famous.

First Suffragan Bishop.

New York, Feb. 25.—The first Suffragan Bishop of the Episcopal Church in America was consecrated yesterday at Grace Church. He is Rev. Dr. Charles Sumner Burch, and his title will be Bishop Suffragan of the Episcopal Diocese of New York.

Although the office of Suffragan is new to this country, it is of long standing in Great Britain. A suffragan ranks as a bishop in everything, except that he has no vote in the House of Bishops and that, unlike a Bishop Coadjutor, he does not ascend to the rank of bishop on the death of his superior.

Will Meet on Monday.

A Transatlantic Flight.

New York, Feb. 25—A reward of 10,000 marks ($2,500) will be given Jos Brucker, the German balloonist, if he reaches this coast in his contemplated transatlantic flight in the dirigible balloon Suchard next spring. The offer was made last night by August Luechew, a prominent German-American of this city.

Childless Dramatists.

Heredity, however powerful in the field of athletics, is powerless in the theatre. Have you noticed the childlessness of the dramatist? It seems that the successful dramatist is at the end of a series and never leaves a successor. Look down the list of them from Gilbert to Shaw and you will find never a child. Further search brings up Thomas Hardy, Barrie, Maeterlinck, Pinero, Cecil Raleigh, Maugham, Locke, Granville Barker, Fred. Fenn, Louis Napoleon Parker, and only Henry Arthur Jones and Hall Caine are dramatists with children.—London Chronicle.

Planning the House.

"Well," said Gifford Berrington cheerfully, "I've got the plans for my new house on the lake shore all finished."

"Finished to suit you?"

"N-no. But the architect is satisfied, and that's the best I can expect."

"Ha, ha! How about Mrs. Berrington?"

"It's all right with her, too. In fact, she got that fixed before we started. You see, she laid out the cupboards and wardrobes, and all the architect had to do was to build a house around them."

COLLEGIATE TEAM BEAT THE NORMAL SCHOOL SEVEN

An interesting game of hockey was seen at Brock Street rink yesterday afternoon, when the Collegiate Institute team defeated the Normal School aggregation by 6 goals to 2. The Normal School seven included two school teachers and two Public school students, so was hardly a representative team of the big school in Dixon Park. There was a large and enthusiastic audience of voters and suffragettes, and neither team lacked for supporters, while the excitement ran high all through. It was a pretty snappy game of hockey, especially in the first half. The Pedadogues led by 2 to 1 at the half, but had nothing in reserve for the second period, the Collegians ramming in five counters in a row. While they lasted the Normal aggregation had as much or a little more of the play and checked splendidly, but they could not last, and when the fast Collegiate forwards started to come down, playing nice combination and not interfered with by back checking it was all off. Ray and Matthews starred for the Collegiate, the latter getting five of the six goals, while Huycke played a splendid game between the poles, stopping a lot of likely heaves from close in. Park and Stewart were the best of the Normalites. O'Brien did some great checking and tore off a sensational rush. The Teachers were the first to score, Stewart slapping one past Huycke on a pass from the centre by Long. Matthews evened up on a nice individual rush, but the Normalites took the lead again soon after when a pretty shot from the wing, by Park, landed in the corner behind Huycke. The complexion of affairs changed greatly in the second half, however. Matthews scored three pretty goals in succession on combination rushes, and then Ray banged one into the lace curtains from a pass by Matthews. The latter found the nets once again before time was called. The teams and summary follows:

1—Normal, Stewart.
2—Collegiate, Matthews.
3—Normal, Park.
Half-time.
4—Collegiate, Matthews.
5—Collegiate, Matthews.
6—Collegiate, Matthews.
7—Collegiate, Ray.
8—Collegiate, Matthews.

Grillers To Play T.C.S. Team Here

Arrangements are being made for a game here on Wednesday night of next week between the Grillers and the Trinity College School team of Port Hope, on which Fred Denison is playing rover. The game should be well worth seeing. The Trinity College team claim to have a seven fast enough to give any of the Junior O. H. A. teams a hard run for the honours, and certainly if the whole team is as fast as "Dennie," the Grillers will have their work cut out for them. The Juniors will practise on Monday night in preparation for the game.

Frontenacs Won Handily

The Kingston Frontenacs defeated Oshawa last night by 8 goals to 2 in the second game of the series between the two clubs and the victory gives the round to the Sutherland bunch by 10 goals, and incidentally sends them into the finals against either Preston or Orillia. The latter has a three-goal lead on the Dutchmen, but the latter may overcome this on their own stamping ground.

CITY BASKETBALL LEAGUE ORGANIZED

The City Basketball League was organized last night at an enthusiastic meeting in the Y.M.C.A. Five teams were represented, the Fairies, Ponies, Whirlwinds, Pirates and Giants and in addition the T. A. S. and Collegiate Institute have signified their intention of joining.

The following officers were elected:
Hon. Pres.—Mr. A. W. Cressman.
Hon. Vice-Presidents—Messrs. J. H. Connal, H. B. Cowan.
President—F. E. Ellis
Vice-President—Fred McGrath.
Secretary—Sandford Hall.
TreasurerMWm. Hastie.

The meeting adjourned after the election of officers to meet again on Wednesday, March 1, when the schedule will be drawn up and other teams admitted if there are any more desirous of entering. The constitution will also be submitted at this meeting.

LOCAL BANKERS WERE DEFEATED IN LINDSAY

The Lindsay Warder says:

A good crowd attended the town league hockey matches last night, and saw two good games. The bankers from Peterborough and the local money kings played the first game, which proved to be a fast one, the full score being 4 to 2, in favour of the local boys.

The play was fairly even, most of the game being played in centre ice, but both teams were inclined to rough it. Many good rushes were spoiled by tripping and considerable slashing was allowed. All the goals were scored by individual play. Knowlson getting the first by an exciting rush.

"Curly" Elliott, formerly of town, and Roy Shields, an old L. C. I. boy, were on the lineup for Peterborough and both put up a good game, Elliot being the best man for the money counters from Peterborough.

Carew and Knowlson played a great game, scoring most of the goals for the local boys. At half time the score was 2 to 1 and each team got another goal in the second half, the score standing 3 to 2 until a minute before full time, when the Lindsay boys again found the nets.

Only one penalty was handed out, although considerable tripping and slashing was indulged in. However, B. Green, as referee, was impartial.

The Hill of Tara.

The famous Hill of Tara, once described by James Bryce, British ambassador in Washington, as "the most interesting and authentic monument of early civilisation in northwestern Europe," is about to be sold, says a report from Dublin.

To-day Tara Hill looks much like any other hill, but on it once stood the royal palace of the Ard Righs, or High Kings, of Ireland for many centuries. It was there while a great national assembly was being held that St. Patrick converted the Ard Righ Leary to Christianity, an event which is celebrated in many old Gaelic poems.

The glories of the place came to an end in a curious way. The Ard Righ, grandson or great-grandson of Leary, sent his representative out through the provinces to collect the usual annual tribute. This particular representative of the High King was a little bit injudicious, for when he arrived at the palace of King Guare of Connaught he insisted on entering it with his spear across his body under his arms.

The spear was too long, or the door was too narrow, to admit of entrance in this way. So in the name of the Ard Righ he ordered the door to be pulled down so that he could enter in the way he desired. King Guare refused. Hence the feud that ultimately laid Tara low.

The clerics championed the cause of King Guare, and in due time a deputation of them went to Tara, and one of them solemnly cursed the hill, with the result that it became gradually deserted, that the immense palace fell into ruins and that it ceased to be the seat of the High Kings of Ireland.

Some years ago the owner of the hill, who died a short while ago, got the idea that the Ark of the Covenant was buried there and had excavations made, but all that was found were a few old coins and weapons.

A RACE FOR A WIFE

The Girl Gave Answer in Lapland Fashion to a Proposal

By ELEANOR L. BRITTON

Copyright, 1911, by American Press Association.

Spitsburger was a great traveler. He had visited every country on the globe, and I verily believe that if aviation had come up in his day he would have sailed up beyond the clouds to find others. When I made his acquaintance he had settled down in a place he called by a jawbreaking name signifying "dwelling" that he had picked up among the Eskimos or some other benighted people. It was in the country situated on the top of a hill and looked more like a Chinese pagoda than any other structure.

Spitsburger was a widower, with one child, a daughter. She was twenty years old and for half her life had traveled during half of each year—the summer season—with her father. Heredity and travel had made her as odd as he. Rather she was unique. She was of medium height, lithe, wiry—indeed, a feminine athlete of the featherweight type. Her hair was black and straight as an Indian's; her eyes large black ones, with lashes of the Spanish type. I wondered if her mother had not been some dusky semicivilized creature her father had picked up on the underside of the world. But he told me his wife had been an American creole.

The inside of the house in which these two lived was as curious as the outside. The furniture and ornamental articles had apparently been gathered from all points of the globe, ranging from the south sea islands to Greenland. There was a mill for grinding from the Holy Land similar to those used in Bible times, a wheel from India to spin flax on, and the bathtub had been the sarcophagus of an Egyptian mummy.

The reason for my making the Spitsburgers' acquaintance was this: I was taking a postgraduate course at the time, studying the customs of different races of men, the causes and effects which shape them and their relationship. Desiring some information as to the people of Tibet, a land forbidden to foreigners and therefore little known, I was recommended to Spitsburger as one who had penetrated to the interior of that country. I went to see him, and my visit led to my studying with him.

How long I remained there doesn't matter, but it was sufficient for my enthrallment by that "little savage," as I called his daughter, Irene. Not that there was any outward intimation on my part that I was coming under a spell, and, as for the girl, I had no idea that I was any more to her than another man. Indeed, I sometimes fancied that she might have left her heart in New Zealand, Kamchatka or some other barbarous land. Whether Spitsburger suspected the drift of my inclinations I don't know, but one day he took occasion to mention with approbation the marriage customs in Lapland, where one who marries a girl without her parents' consent is adjudged guilty of a crime next below murder and is punished accordingly. I thought that he looked at me very hard, but "a guilty conscience needs no accuser," and I may have attached more meaning to his words than they covered.

The only thing to indicate that Irene and I were drifting together as lovers was that we took long walks together. I made an excuse for this that in her company I could both exercise and study. This was true. I could get from her certain information of the domestic habits of the people she had visited that I could not get from her father. One day while we were on one of these walks I said to her:

"Your father tells me that in Lapland to marry a girl without her parents' consent is punished as a crime. Please tell me how a man in that country does his courting."

"He doesn't do any courting."

"Then how does he proceed?"

"He goes to her parents and asks for her. If he is refused there is no hope for him. If they approve of his suit they tell the girl of it. She may or may not have seen the lover, but the process is the same in either case. Her parents give a feast at which they, the girl, her suitor and mutual friends are present. The two principals are placed opposite each other at table, where they can observe and talk with each other all they like."

"Well, then what? I suppose the girl has something to say in the matter, else this looking over her suitor would be useless."

"Yes, she has a good deal to say about it, but she doesn't yet make it known. She indicates her decision later. After the feast all go to an open space suitable for running a race. A course is marked off—a quarter of a mile usually—and the girl is given a handicap of a third of the distance. The handicap is intended to enable her to win the race easily if she wishes, and if she wins that indicates her refusal of the offer. But if, on the contrary, she purposely lags and her suitor catches her, that indicates she accepts him for her husband."

When Irene finished giving me this bit of a lecture on Lapland customs I walked for some distance without speaking.

"What are you thinking of?" she asked.

"I am thinking how popular this method would be at our universities, where athletics are so much in vogue. Every undergraduate would be married before the end of his course."

It was a month after this that, having got all out of Spitsburger in the line of my studies that I desired, I began to think of leaving. A singular something there was in Irene had continued to grow upon me, and—well I wanted her. Remembering what her father had said on the subject, I went to him and asked him for his daughter.

"I will inform her of the honor you do her," he said.

I waited a day for a reply, and as I received none the suspense threw me into an awful fret. At the end of the second day, the situation being the same, I was almost demented. On the morning of the third, determined to have the matter out with Irene, I asked her to go for a walk with me, the last we would take together before my departure. She assented and went up to her room for her wraps. She was some time getting them, and when she came down what was my surprise to see that she had put on a skirt reaching but little below the knees, and instead of a hat she had wrapped a veil about her head.

I didn't dream for awhile what this meant, but when she led me along a path and across a stile to a space used in season for pasture I suspected at once that she proposed to satisfy a whim by giving me an answer to my proposal after the Lapland custom. I was too hungry for it to object to the terms and was quite ready to run for my answer. Indeed, so impatient was I that I opened the subject myself.

"Splendid."

"And a fine morning for it too. The air is crisp and full of ozone."

"I love to snuff it in and get the odor."

"Do you see that tree yonder?"

"The oak split into two trunks near the ground?"

"Yes. I have a mind to race you for it."

"How much advantage will you give me?"

"What you like."

She pulled off a fur jacket and threw it on the ground, and I saw at once that she had divested herself of her corsets—indeed, there was nothing to interfere with any movement. Her short skirt, a tight fitting jersey and the veil about her head made an excellent racing costume.

But these preparations appalled me. What could they mean but that she desired every advantage that she might surely beat me in the race?

"I wish no handicap," she said. "I think I can beat you on equal terms. I will go over to that stump, which is about the same distance from the tree as we are here. One race would be little fun. Let us make it the best two in three. You give the signal."

"Agreed," I said, and she went off to the stump.

"One, two, three—go!" I cried.

She ran like a deer; but, spurred by love, I kept an equal pace with her. I won that race.

The second race was very different. Irene permitted me at first to gain a few yards on her, but before we had traversed two-thirds of the distance she forged ahead and reached the tree full ten feet ahead of me.

I knew now that she could beat me if she wished. Nevertheless I deemed it my proper part to do the best I could in the third and deciding race. Burning to know my fate, I wished to start at once. But she declined to go until she got her breath. While we waited I endeavored to see something encouraging in her eyes—something to indicate that these races were the answer I was expecting. But there was nothing in her expression to indicate that we were running for any purpose except pastime. She studiously ignored every other consideration.

Finally, when my patience was nearly exhausted, she signified a willingness to start. I gave the signal, and for the first half the distance she seemed determined to win. Surely she could not have put forth greater effort. I saw her glance aside to see where I was, and she dashed on, seemingly bound to reach the goal before me. But when within ten yards of it, my distance being twenty, she tripped and fell. I ran on to the tree, touched it and then back to her. Raising her, I said impatiently:

"I suppose we must try this one over."

"No," she said; "I couldn't run again."

I still held her in my arms, and, taking this for the answer I craved, I wound them about her, covering her face with kisses.

Supposing that my love had been injured by her fall, I proposed to carry her home, but she stepped out quite readily.

"How about that tripping?" I asked.

She looked at the ground, but made no reply, and I knew she had tripped on purpose.

When we returned to the house Spitsburger looked at us both curiously. I knew at once that he was aware that his daughter had given me my answer and that she had given it in accordance with the Lapland custom. He first scanned her face, but receiving no satisfaction there bent his gaze upon mine.

He did not require a long examination of my features to know that I had been made very happy, and the cause was evident. I took Irene by the hand and, leading her to her father, told him the story.

When I came to the part where Irene stumbled and fell he burst into a laugh, saying that she could run for hours without a stumble or a misstep.

$30,000,000 Railway Scheme.

The Prime Minister of Queensland has just brought forward a railway construction scheme which will involve at least the amount of $30,000,000. For this money it is proposed to construct 700 miles of new railway. This line will link up the coastal line between Brisbane and Cairns. The scheme will make it possible to take a train at Cairns in the far north of Queensland, and travel to Adelaide, the capital of South Australia. It will also bring Northern Queensland a week nearer to London. Engineers estimate that the carrying out of this scheme will occupy seven years.

Garden City's Report.

The annual report of Letchworth, Eng., says that 126 houses, shops, and factories were built within the year ending September 30, bringing the total of new buildings erected since Letchworth became a garden city to 1,334. The estimated value of these buildings is $2,032,500, with a gross revenue of $92,750. The death-rate for 1909 was only 5.2 per thousand, and the infantile mortality per thousand births 31.7, the lowest rates for any town in the country.

BURIED TREASURE.

War-Time Secret Lurks in an Ontario Marsh.

Many and varied are the stories of lost treasures. It would seem almost that in all the earlier settled districts of Ontario there are treasures buried to find which would mean eternal opulence to the fortunate finder. Many of these stories are undoubtedly myths, but it is equally true that a goodly number are based upon more or less authentic facts, so that a story of a lost treasure that in itself evidences a considerable degree of reasonableness, and is substantiated by material evidence and the word of people yet living, may not be uninteresting.

About halfway between the towns of Oshawa and Whitby, on the north shore of Lake Ontario, is situated what appears at the present time to be nothing more than a bleak, barren marsh, with its uninviting bogs and dense overgrowth of rushes and vegetation peculiar to such places. It was not always thus, however, for many years ago this same area was a body of water of considerable depth, being in reality a bay of the lake. The story goes that during the war with the United States in 1813 the bay afforded shelter to a Canadian schooner while engaged in carry gold specie from Kingston for the pay of the militia stationed at York. The vessel was sailing up the lake before a brisk sou'easter late in the afternoon of a September day in the year 1813, and when a few miles west of Oshawa harbor it sighted an American boat, one of the pirate type that were prevalent on the great lakes during the war and wrought havoc with Canadian vessels. The captain knew the coast fairly well, and he immediately thought of the bay as a means of escape, reasoning that the American boat, being of greater draught, would be unable to navigate the comparatively shallow entrance. With all haste he put into the bay, and his surmise proved to be correct, for, while he was able to work up the bay till he was a considerable distance from the lake, the gunboat, by reason of its draught, was unable to enter. Not to be defeated, the Americans stood off as close to the shore as they dared and commenced to bombard the Canadian boat. The captain, fearing lest they might land and attack him on shore, thought it best to unload his cargo and endeavor to conceal it in the woods back from the shore. The task was extremely arduous because of the absence of any semblance of a dock, involving the necessity of carrying the gold in small boats as far inshore as possible, and shouldering it the remainder of the distance over the bog and uncertain footing which old stumps and sunken logs provided.

By dint of perseverance inspired by the momentary fear of assault at the hands of the enemy, the task was finally accomplished and the treasure temporarily secured in concealment. Darkness began to fall over the land, which added security to their position, since it afforded more complete concealment, and because of the fact that the Americans, when there was sufficient light to enable them to direct their fire, simply sailed away, to the great delight of the defenceless Canadians. Anxious to reach York and the protection of its fort, as soon as they felt assured that the enemy had abandoned the attack, they began the work of reloading preparatory to continuing their voyage. It is not hard to believe that the task was most difficult, considering that all was absolute darkness by now and the nature of the ground over which they had to carry the kegs of gold, nor is it at all improbable that, as the story goes, one of the kegs was dropped during the handling from the small boat up to the side of the schooner. Means were not at hand to recover it, and indeed had they possessed facilities it might have been impossible to locate it from the muddy bottom of the little bay. So, having finished loading, they weighed anchor and were soon glad to be once more on the open lake and on a fair way to a place of safety.

Chiefly through one of the crew, who was on the spot and saw the bag drop into the water, a William McGanna, has the story been handed down. The bay has been long since emptied of water by reason of the lowering of Lake Ontario and the deposit of sediment, but it is not known that the treasure has ever been recovered. Many have sought in vain and some have made the spot the means of their financial peregrinations. Divining rods and various devices have been used in the endeavor, and the appearance presented by many of these treasure-hunters working in the light of a lantern at the dead of night is extremely ghost-like. A number of cannon balls have been picked up in the vicinity, both by those engaged in the quest and by farmers working in the fields nearby, but the nest of the sandsnipe or the piping curlew is more apt to be encountered than the now submerged treasure of war times.

Tossing Bouquets.

Prominent among the leaders of the recent farmers' lower tariff deputation were three former Ottawans who have risen to eminence and fortune in the west.

At the head of the manufacturers' higher tariff deputation, also, was Mr. W. H. Rowley, who, remaining in Ottawa, has built up a great manufacturing concern that supplies millions of people with certain necessities of civilization.

Ottawa men, whether they go on their travels or remain at home, seem to have the knack of rising to the top and taking a leading part in the life of the community or class of which they form a part.—Ottawa Journal.

A London "Guff."

The following is part of a despatch sent from dear old London recently to Canadian papers: The Standard says: "Let us be perfectly frank. The commercial arrangements between Canada and the United States must and can only be the thin end of the wedge of political union."

Beginning of the Year.

January 1 was not made New Year's day in England until 1751. The proper beginning of the year is in March, which is the beginning of spring, when all nature is new. Before January 1 was adopted by the English Parliament as the legal beginning of the year March 25 was the late. In the Roman calendar also March was the first month.

PREMIER IS ARRAIGNED

London Minister Says His Answer Was an Insult

Special to The Examiner.

LONDON, ONT., FEB. 27.—Rev. George W. Dewey made a severe arraignment of Premier Whitney regarding his answer to the Temperance deputation. He condemned the answer as an insult to the Christian manhood and womanhood of the Province, when fifteen sober men have to measure up to the votes of 100 drunks. "No matter how solidly any Premier may be in the saddle," he said, "people will not stand conduct of the kind and will overthrow him."

Drawn Into A Cutting Machine

John Delbridge, Well Known Stock Breeder, in a Critical Condition

Special to The Examiner.

LONDON, ONT., FEB. 27.—John Delbridge, of Winchelsea, was drawn into a cutting machine and before he could throw the gears out his hand and arm were drawn into the knives and so badly mangled that the right hand had to be amputated above the wrist. His condition is critical owing to the loss of blood. He is one of the best known breeders of prize stock in Western Ontario.

THIRTY ARE ON TRIAL FOR WHOLESALE MURDER

ROME, ITALY, FEB. 27.—Examinations began to-day in the trial of Enrico Alfano and forty associates, alleged to have committed wholesale murder, including one within the sacred walls of the Vatican, where a servant was killed. Alfano was the leader of the dreaded Camorro, more terrible by far than the Black Hand.

ASTRONOMICAL SOCIETY TO MEET TO-MORROW

There will be a meeting of the Peterborough centre of the Royal Astronomical Society to-morrow night in the chemical laboratory of the Collegiate Institute. Rev. Dr. Marsh will give a lecture on "Saturn, the Queen of the Skies," in the course of which he will explain the rings, the marking on the disk, Saturn's seasons, the probability of it being inhabited and other interesting features. The meeting promises to be most enjoyable and there should be a large attendance. There is no admission and the public is cordially invited to be present.

A PITCHED BATTLE IN TORONTO TO-DAY

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, FEB. 27.—There was a pitched battle, with hammers, hatchets and sticks as weapons between rival Greeks and Macedonians here this morning over some religious dispute, resulting in several going to the hospital severely injured and six arrested.

TREATY MAY BE PASSED AT THE PRESENT SESSION

WASHINGTON, FEB. 27.—Congress which expires at noon Saturday, has now less than five days in which to make up its mind to adopt the tariff agreement with Canada. Until to-day the feeling was strong that the expiring congress would not pass the agreement, and that the President would call an extra session of the House. The latest word, however, is that the fear of more radical measures being taken by the Democrats, who are in majority in the new congress, is having its effect, and that the agreement will not unlikely be passed during the last few hours of the life of the Congress.

Junior Athletic Contest Was A Great Success

In the junior athletic contest held Saturday morning, the final events were contested and proved to be most exciting to the boys. Horsefield defeated Arnott in the broad jump. Arnott won from Stewart in the 60 yard potato race. Stewart lost relay race to Brown and the obstacle race to Arnott, the high jump going to Brown. The standing of the teams at the close of the contest follows

Clare Arnott's team was second with 223 1-2 points.

Arthur Horsefield's team was third with 209 1-2 points.

Clare Stewart was fourth with 142 1-4 points.

The winning team was composed of the following men: Cecil Brown (capt) Jewell, Quinn, Talford, H. Stewart, Devins, M. Thompson, B. Hamilton, Clark, Hunter, Simpson.

The bowling contest down for competition to-night between the Midgets and Mivvies should be some game, as both teams are out after the championship.

The city basketball league will hold a meeting in the Y.M.C.A. rooms on Wednesday evening at 8 when the schedule will be drawn up. Teams wishing to enter had better have their application in before that date, for no teams will be admitted after the schedule is drawn up.

FUNERAL OF MR. JOHN SCOLLARD AT ENNISMORE

The funeral of the late John Scollard took place this morning from the family residence, Ennismore, to St. Martin's church, thence to St. Martin's cemetery, for interment. The service at the church was a very solemn and impressive one, there being a large congregation, which included many friends and relatives from Peterborough, Young's Point, etc.

Solemn requiem mass was sung by his Lordship Bishop Scollard, a son of the deceased. Father McColl, Rector of St. Peter's Cathedral, Peterborough, was deacon, Father Phelan, of Lakefield, sub-deacon, and Rev. Dr. O'Brien, of the Sacred Heart Church, master of ceremonies. Those present in the sanctuary were his Lordship Bishop O'Connor, assisted by the Ven Archdeacon Casey, Lindsay, and Rev. Father McGuire, Downeyville, Father Fitzpatrick, P.P., of Ennismore.

Bishop O'Connor preached an eloquent sermon on the advantage of living a holy and pious life, since it means eternal happiness in the next world. He also referred to the example of the good Christian life led by the deceased, and prayed that God may grant him eternal rest in the Kingdom of Heaven.

The pall-bearers were Dr. Moloney of Cornwall, P. P. Young, and Capt. Scollard, of Young's Point; Maurice O'Connor, Cornelius O'Connor and James Scollard of Ennismore.

Amendment Is Moved

Debate on the Veto Bill Measure Will Likely Last For Days

Special to The Examiner.

LONDON, FEB. 27.—"If this is the Government's last word, it cannot pass," declared Austen Chamberlain in the Commons this afternoon, when the second reading of Asquith's Lords veto bill was pressed. Chamberlain moved an amendment providing for the reformation Lords, but maintaining its individuality and power. The debate will likely last for days.

OBITUARY

ANNETTIA LEWIS.

Annettia Lewis, the beloved wife of George Scott, passed away yesterday morning at St. Catharines Heart failure was the immediate cause of death. The remains were brought here last night and conveyed to the home of the deceased's sister, Mrs. M. J. Costello, 274 Thomas street, from which place the funeral will take place to-morrow at 2 o'clock, to St. Peter's church, thence to St. Peter's cemetery for interment.

The deceased leaves a husband and one son to mourn her loss, one sister and two brothers also survive, Mrs. Costello and Stanley Lewis, of this city, and one brother in St. Catharines.

Deceased was 31 years of age and was a daughter of Mr. T. M. Lewis, of Vancouver, B.C., formerly of Peterborough. She was well and favourably known by a wide circle of friends with whom she associated, and previous to her departure for St. Catharines occupied the position of leader of the choir of St. Peter's Cathedral for a number of years. Some beautiful flowers accompanied the remains, among them being a beautiful wreath from the employes of the firm of Crocker and Wheeler, with whom Mr. Scott was employed.

J. R. RADCLIFFE DIED TO-DAY

Man Who Officiated as Canada's Official Hangman for Many Years Died in Toronto To-day

SHORT ILLNESS

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, FEB. 27.—John R. Radcliffe, who was official executioner for all Canada for many years, died here to-day after a short illness. Radcliffe, whose real name was Rattley, has made his headquarters here for a long time, but, forsaken of his family, has always lived in obscurity.

THIS IS THE LIMIT SURELY

When, after all other argument fails, your local school appeals on the ground of "home industry". Yet, the very people who are often the first to raise this cry will pass up their local contractors, mechanics, manufacturers or jobbers, if they are assured a saving by so doing. The hotel registers will verify this. If you are ruled by sentiment, we quit; but if a saving of one-half of the fee and four-fifths of the time would appeal to you, we think our catalogue regarding 30-day Shorthand would interest you. Special to The Examiner:

MONTREAL, FEB. 27.—The famous harem skirt has broken loose in Montreal. One skirt has been purchased by a lady already. She states she will wear it on the street.

Appreciation

1910 was a banner year with us, but 1911 carries even greater promise, because we have thousands of patients in this city and vicinity who are wearing glasses prescribed by us, many of whom could not be fitted elsewhere, and we know that they will not lose an opportunity of speaking a good word for us.

We take this occasion to acknowledge our indebtedness to our friends and patrons, our appreciation of their good will and faith in us, which have helped to make our success so great. We need not disguise the fact that we believe that we have deserved well of you. That if you have had confidence in us and have benefited upon us your patronage it is because we have done something to warrant it. We have done "the best we could" and we purpose to keep right on doing so.

We are deeply grateful to our friends and customers for their loyalty. We ask for and hope to merit a continuance of the same.

BAGGAGE SMASHING.

While Parliament is greatly occupied with the consideration of the wide interests involved in reciprocity Mr. E. N Lewis, M.P., takes time to look after less momentous, but equally pertinent and personal interest. He has introduced a bill "respecting baggage smashing" by railway porters—to regulate the reckless and careless handling of trunks and valises. The bill proposes a fine of not more than $50 upon any railway employee proven guilty of damaging carelessness, and to make railways responsible under the decision of a magistrate, for the damage done. This is a matter that should not be above Parliament. There are few travellers that have not suffered from time to time from the reckless, and it sometimes seems, vicious, handling of baggage by railway employees. If passengers were handled with the violence which some employees devote to baggage, there would be need of an ambulance car and a coroner on every train. Of course there are baggage smashers and—others. All are not reckless and all do not come under the same condemnation. When there is a large quality of baggage and a small staff of handlers, there is sure to be hurry and carelessness. But the railways might provide, as they do now to a certain extent, mechanical aids to handling baggage, thus relieving employees and facilitating the proper and safe transfer of baggage to and from cars Railways have made great improvements in travelling facilities and without much expenditure of either care or money, they might provide better protection from the violence of the "baggage smasher."

TIMBER CONSERVATION.

The Ontario Legislature has set apart $500,000 for the repurchase of timber licenses in the Algonquin Park district. This represents an important step in forest conservation, since it is presumed to prevent depletion of forest wealth. But would it not serve every conservation purpose, and, at the same time, not interfere with the lumbering industry, if stringent cutting regulations were devised and enforced. If, for instance, it was provided that only mature timber should be cut, and the cutting done in such a manner that the resulting debris should not be left as a nucleus for forest fires. While it is desirable to preserve our timber, that is not the whole object. Timber is like any other crop; it reaches a stage of maturity; and if not cut at that time it deteriorates. There is no such thing as the original forest In our most thickly-wooded districts there is not a tree now standing, that was standing two hundred years ago. Trees mature every year, trees die every year; and their place is taken by young growth. It is necessary, to get the full value of our forest growth, to cut judiciously, so as to harvest the mature timber. If one of our best areas of forest were enclosed to-day and left undisturbed for a hundred years, at the end of that time not one of the mature, merchantable trees standing to-day, would be found standing then. Such a course would not be true conservation. True conservation consists in proper cutting and marketting of the mature timber, the preservation of the growing trees and the prevention of the awful destruction by forest fires.

No greater thing can engage the attention of any government than the preservation, perpetuation, and increase of our forest growth It is unselfish and altruistic; it is not legislation or administration of a selfish, narrow kind, for it is in the interest of coming generations; it is an imitation of the beneficient providence that has stored up ages in advance natural wealth for the generation of to-day. We should like to see the Provincial government and all the governments take a deeper interest in reforestering operations, in order to compensate the damage wrought by the mistakes of the past. We have, in the past hundred years, made awful waste and wreck of our timber resources, to the injury of our climatic conditions and of our agricultural operations. In all parts of this province there are, on every farm, one to many acres unfit for agriculture. If these were planted with trees we should have not only a fuel supply, but an improvement of climatic conditions that would give us more equable rainfall and temperature, and a general improvement in the conditions of comfortable living. In order to secure uniformity and universality of action the government should take the initiative. The expense would not be great and the benefits would be incalculable.

A REMINISCENCE.

(London Advertiser)

There is something reminiscent in the present prophecies of evil in this country. Opponents of the Government are taking out of cold storage the funereal baked meats cooked for the obsequies of Canadian industry fourteen years ago. We seem to catch the echoes of Sir Charles Tupper's justly-celebrated oration over the grave of his country when the first Fielding budget was introduced in 1897. Here it is:

"The result is that this tariff goes into operation, and the honourable gentleman knows that the industries of this country are already paralyzed in consequence, while honourable members gloat over the destruction of Canadian industries. I was reading the wail, the sorrowful wail, of these industries in the Montreal Gazette, when one manufacturer after another declared that their industries were ruined; that their mills must close, and that they saw staring them in the face a return to the deplorable state of things that existed when the honourable gentleman who last addressed the House was in charge of the fiscal affairs of this country. I say that a deeper wrong was never inflicted upon Canada. I feel that, so far from rejoicing at it, from a party standpoint, I deplore from the bottom of my heart the ruin that is going to be inflicted upon the best interests of Canada and upon its great industries."

The country survived the Fielding budget and the Tupper jeremiads, and has lived happily ever since. It is just possible that it will survive the reciprocity agreement and the present lamentations of the pocket-patriots.

PARTLY POLITICS.

(Manitoba Free Press)

Mr. Foster, speaking in Hamilton the other night in denunciation of the reciprocity pact, recalled his journey to Washington in 1891. On that occasion the United States asked that Canada should open her markets to United States manufacturers and should discriminate against Great Britain. The proposition was rejected by Mr. Foster; quite properly. Neither in 1891, 1911, or any other time would Canada stand for any such arrangement.

Still Mr. Foster went to Washington in 1891. What did he go there for? Mr. Foster skates around this point; but the fact is that he went there hoping to make just such an arrangement as has now been made. If Secretary Blaine had made Mr. Foster, in 1891, the proposition which Secretary Knox made to Mr. Fielding in 1911, it would have been accepted joyfully. The Conservatives throughout the campaign of 1891 repeatedly declared that they would get reciprocity in natural products with the United States; more than this, they claimed that they were the only party which could get this boon for the Canadian farmer. Sir Charles Tupper, speaking only three days before polling day, said:

"I say, Sir, that the means of obtaining fair reciprocal trade arrangements with the United States would be utterly defeated, if the party who were now professing to carry out a thing they knew to be an utter delusion, could obtain power. But, Sir, with my right honourable friend sustained, as he will be, when he goes down on the 4th of March to Washington, in response to the invitation received from the United States, of which I am able to speak personally, when he goes down there, strengthened by the electors of Canada, then, I say, the prospects are very good indeed."

If reciprocity in farm products will be so injurious to Canada in a national sense now would it not have been still more deadly twenty years ago, when Canada was a mere framework of a nation, in place of a real nation as she is now. Yet Sir John A. Macdonald, Sir Charles Tupper, Mr. Foster and the other leaders of the Conservative party—men who certainly were not fools—strove to secure this enlargement of trade relations with the United States in the expectation that it would be a national benefit.

Does not this suggest that a good deal of the opposition of the reciprocity arrangement is political? It is undoubtedly true that there are many Canadians who are honestly opposed to the proposed interchange of natural products for reasons which are entitled to respectful consideration, but the Conservative leaders are not in this class.

If the United States Government had made an offer of free trade in farm products to the Canadian Government and had been told that this country wanted no further business relations with them, Mr. Borden, Mr. Foster, Mr. Roblin, and the rest of them would have been lifting their voices to heaven in denunciation of the folly of Sir Wilfrid Laurier and his colleagues. A short and straight road to office would have been opened to them; and they would have travelled it joyously.

Opinions Of Lake Front Conservatives In Favour Of The Trade Agreement

(Toronto Star Staff Correspondence)

BELLEVILLE, FEB. 25.—The most influential Conservative in Belleville, not excepting Sir Mackenzie Bowell, is Mr. Harry Corby, for twelve years a member of the Commons, and known the country over as an ardent supporter of Conservative doctrine. There was a banquet early in February at which Mr. Corby was reported to have made "a straightforward pronouncement" in favour of the new tariff arrangement." There have been rumours that Mr. Corby was misunderstood on that occasion, and the Star therefore appealed to the most authoritative source, Mr. Corby himself.

"Yes," he said, "my remarks were somewhat misquoted. There had been no opportunity, at the time, for discussing the ultimate effect of the schedules, and I distinctly stated that I would not attempt to pronounce upon that question."

"How far did you go with regard to the agreement?"

"I went only so far as to say that it was worthy of a trial. I expressed the confidence I felt in Messrs. Fielding and Paterson. I stated that I believed they had gone to Washington with the interest of Canada at heart, and that they deserve credit."

"And now that there has been opportunity for discussion of the new schedules, what opinion would you express?"

"None, except that which I have already expressed. I have said that reciprocity is worthy of a trial, and I will not go back on that. Of course I have formed my own private opinions as to the schedules, but I have no desire to enter upon a political controversy.

"This country," he added, "has been crying for reciprocity for years. Both sides have wanted to get it. So now, let them give it a fair wial."

This statement from Mr. Corby is of especial interest, because he reaffirms Mr. Fielding's statement that both Conservatives and Liberals have sought reciprocal relations, and because he reiterates his opinion that reciprocity should be given a trial—which is exactly what Mr. R. L. Borden does not want.

A Tory Testimony.

In this, as in other districts, the sentiment of farmers is favourable to reciprocity. "I would estimate that not one farmer in twenty in this neighbourhood is opposed to the reciprocity agreement," said one of them.

This is the statement, not of a Liberal, but of George Anderson, of Mountain View, son of William Anderson, a former Conservative member of the Ontario Legislature. "I am proud to say," he added "that I don't stick to the Conservative party when such a course is folly."

Mr. Anderson is one of Prince Edward's most influential farmers, and he says that reciprocity as now proposed is "the best thing that ever happened Canada."

"Unquestionably," he went on, "the dairy interests will profit. We have been producing milk and selling our cheese on the English market. What have we made? Well, we have netted about two cents per quart for our milk. That's the net average price, and there is no money in that. No farmer can afford to do it.

"Now, as to the English market, what have we to hope? Five or six years ago Canada supplied that market with 76 per cent. of its cheese. In 1909 the percentage had fallen to 65 per cent. So you see there is little promise of an increase. With dairy produce free in the States, we confidently expect to get two cents a pound more for our cheese."

F. R. Mallory, of Frankland, is another Conservative farmer, who favours the agreement. His statement is all the more telling because of the moderation and even the reluctance with which he spoke. "It is a big question," he said, "and so many are better qualified to speak about it. I don't pretend to be able to forecast its effect upon the whole of Canada."

"But speaking as a farmer, what do you say?"

"The question is one which requires a great deal of thought. As far as my personal, and perhaps, selfish, standpoint, is concerned, I approve of the arrangement. I think we farmers will get better prices for our cheese, butter, cream, milk, and everything."

Mr. Mallory is well-known as a Conservative, and is one of the district's most noted Holstein breeders. Being what one man described as a "red-hot Tory," he naturally puts his case mildly, but none the less clearly and emphatically.

Another Conservative Speaks.

Mr. Wm. Barber, another of the district's farmers, has good words to say for tariff reduction, though he is a well-known Conservative.

"I'm certainly in favour of it so far as the farmer is concerned," he told the Star. "Dairy products will find a better market, and no doubt beef and pork. We have grown good barley before now, and there is quite a demand for seed this year, with free barley anticipated. I sold mine to go to Picton at 85 cents, a high price for recent years."

"Do you hear other Conservatives talking like you are?"

"Yes, a good many of them around here."

"And what about the annexationist cry?"

"Why, of course, I wouldn't want anything like that. I don't think there's anything in it."

Thus speaks another Conservative who is not afraid that he'll want to join the "Yankees" when they buy his farm produce.

At Tory Trenton.

"Tory Trenton" sounds suspiciously like a slogan; and to anyone who has visited the place, it also sounds suspiciously true. Hastings is Conservative by over a thousand, and even those farmers who feel at heart that their party's attitude is wrong hesitate to speak out.

Mr. W. H. Dempsey, however, was quite frank in expressing his convictions. Mr. Dempsey, who is a farmer on the Wooler road, is probably as influential and progressive an agriculturist as the district boasts. He has shown as many as 400 varieties of apples at Toronto Fair, and is looked upon as the premier apple grower of a wide stretch of country.

"So far as apples are concerned, I am not afraid to beat the world," he told the Star. For that reason I welcome the American market. I do not feel in a position to discuss every aspect of the tariff reductions, but I don't see much to grumble about, and so far as my business is concerned there is nothing wrong with it. For years we have been labouring under great difficulties. In fact the tariff has been most unfair to us, with 75 cents duty on our fruit going into the States. That has certainly been a drawback. I think there is a great future for the apple-growers if they would take care of their orchards."

A number of other farmers in the Trenton neighbourhood have similar testimony.

Charles Higgins, a market gardener and fruit grower, remarked that he had not figured out how the agreement would effect small fruit, but considered it a fine thing for the apple grower.

R. C. Way declared the agreement all right every way. "It's a fine thing for the dairymen. I do not hear many opposing it."

D. L. Jones said that he is very much in favour of the proposed arrangement. "As regards fruit, especially it will be of very great benefit of this neighbourhood. We used to have a grand barley market in the States, and will again."

"What do you think of the annexation cry?"

"Just the old trick of trotting out a bug-a-boo. If loyalty is only a thing of dollars and cents, it does not amount to much. When people look into the agreement itself and study its provisions, they will see that it should be adopted on its merits."

Another Anderson Approves.

Mention has already been made of the approval expressed by George Anderson of Mountain View. James R. Anderson, of the same place, is quite as enthusiastic. This prominent Conservative, a man of ability as a speaker, and in demand at all farmers' gatherings hereabouts, was not at home when the Star called, but he has placed his views on record in no uncertain style. In a letter to the Belleville Ontario he says: "We have everything of gain and nothing to lose by having free access to the markets of the great consumsuming public to the south of us. He speaks out in meeting about "our friends that are not interested in farming, but have so much sympathy at the present time for the farmers." He notes that the manufacturers "feel justified in letting the farmers know how to conduct their business," and warns them that "so long as the manufacturer is enabled by law to put his hand in the farmer's pocket, he will need to be careful about placing his hand on the farmer's arm."

EARLY MORNING BLAZE

A dangerous looking blaze in the second story of the Grand Hotel gave the firemen a run for their money at about half-past five this morning.

The fire originated from an overheated kitchen range, and ensconced itself in the wall, eating its way up to the second story and burst out into the bedroom. It was found necessary to tear away a portion of the lath and plaster of the partition before the fire could be subdued, which was done with the use of chemicals. A line of hose was laid but it was not found necessary to resort to the use of water, altough all the available chemicals was consumed before the fire was finally extinguished. Damage done to the building amounted to about $50, and to the contents about $50

BALDHEADED MEN

Getting Scarcer Every Year

Ninety-nine times in one hundred baldness is caused by dandruff germs which dig down deep into the roots of the hair, destroy its vitality and cause it to fall out

If you have dandruff, the little invisible persistent devils called dandruff germs are at work. Destroy them at once, or sooner or later they will cause your hair to fall out and you will be compelled to take your place in the bald-headed class.

Parisian Sage is guaranteed by Wm. Madill to stop falling hair and itching scalp and to drive out dandruff and kill the germs, or money back. It is the most delightful hair dressing in the world, not sticky or greasy. Large bottles 50 cents.

MARKET REPORTS.

Liverpool and Chicago Wheat Futures Close Lower—Live Stock—Latest Quotations.

LIVERPOOL, Feb. 25.—The market opened ⅛ lower, being influenced by the disappointing American markets yesterday. Following the opening the undertone was heavy with realizing and prices further declined ⅛. Selling at this time was induced by the predictions of larger shipments to the United Kingdom this week and a poor inquiry here for both parcels and cargoes with a weakening in spot markets and free Australian offers. The decline, however, was checked by less favorable reports from Russia and a fair demand from the continent. At the close the market was easier, ⅛ lower than yesterday.

Corn market was quiet and unchanged. The predictions of large American shipments to Liverpool this week offset the covering of March shorts.

CHICAGO, Feb. 25.—Wheat to-day slid under easy down-grade record made in the last three years. Scantiness of domestic demand, no foreign outlet, and reciprocity delay at Washington furnished plenty of reason. The close was weak at a net decline of ⅝c to a full cent a bushel. There also was a net loss of ⅜c to ½c in corn, ⅛c in oats, and 15c to 35c for pork, lard and ribs.

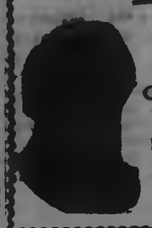
PEOPLE'S PULPIT.



Sermon by CHARLES T. RUSSELL Pastor Brooklyn Tabernacle.

Why Jesus Refused to Pray.

Pastor Russell on God's Times and Seasons.

Fall River, Mass., Feb. 26.—Pastor Russell preached twice here to-day. He had fine audiences and excellent attention. We quote one of his instructive discourses from the text, "I pray not for the world, but for those whom Thou hast given" (John xvii, 9). He said:

When, years ago, I believed that an eternity torture awaited all who do not accept God's "call" of the present time, I had great difficulty with this text. I asked, Is it possible that our Redeemer was selectively unjust in his dealings with our race? Can it be true that the Heavenly Father merely calls and draws a predestinated few to himself and to everlasting bliss? Can it be true, as our catechisms recite, that God and Jesus "passed by" the great mass of mankind without drawing them, without calling them, without giving them the hearing ear, without opening the eyes of their understanding? Can it be that all these blind and dead, unsought, undrawn, uncalled and unprayed for by the Saviour are going down to eternal torment? My heart answered, No! But my brain was confused by the errors, the misinterpretations of the Bible, which I had received.

Trained in the Doctrine of Election and Predestination I, like hosts of others, felt somehow that Brother Wesley's teaching of Free Grace was more noble, more God-like, than Brother Calvin's teaching respecting Election and Predestination.

Nevertheless, when I reasoned on the subject I said, Can I think of the omniscient God preparing a great place of sufficient size to hold the entire human family and outfitted with every devilish appliance for their torture, and yet being ignorant of the conditions under which they would be born? Can I think that he did not know that we would be born in sin and shapen in iniquity? Can I think that he did not know of the present reign of Satan, Sin and Death and that it would last for six thousand years and injuriously affect our entire race?

Brother Wesley's theory of God's Love and good intentions—of his endeavor to save everybody—seems inconsistent when contrasted with his teaching that only a saintly few reach eternal bliss and that the thousands of millions must spend eternity in torture. Thus I was once confused, as millions are still confused to-day, in respect to the Divine Character as exemplified in the Divine plan of the ages. So far as I can see, Brother Calvin had a wise and powerful God such as I could admire and reverence, if he had only been kind and loving instead of diabolical. And Brother Wesley had a kind and loving God such as I could admire and worship, if he had only had the wisdom and power of Calvin's theory.

So long as we have such confusion in our minds faith and hope and love and trust shake upon the foundations of our reason. We recognize that we know nothing of the future of ourselves; that we are wholly dependent upon Divine Revelation. But we cannot expect that our Creator would give us a Revelation which to sanctified minds would appear Satanic instead of Divine. We must remember that our Creator invites us to reason, saying, "Come, let us reason together; though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be white as snow." Surely a right understanding of the Divine Revelation, the Bible, should be a reasonable one to a sanctified mind.

Hearken to the Word of the Lord: Their fear toward me is not of me, but is taught by the precepts of men" (Isaiah xxix, 13.)

Hearken again: "As the heavens are higher than the earth, so are my methods higher than your methods, and my plans higher than your plans" (Isaiah lv, 9). And so we find, my dear friends—God's Word is true. His Character is glorious. Only the mist and smoke of the "dark ages" have confused things for us and mystified matters and darkened the eyes of our understanding.

Now as the six thousand years have passed and we have entered upon the Sabbatic Seventh Thousand we are beginning to realize that it marks a New Dispensation—that the night is passed; that the dawn is upon us. The wonderful inventions of our day along earthly lines are in full harmony with the clear light now shining upon God's Word, making its dark places bright and its rough places smooth and enabling us to remove the stumbling stones from the "path way of the just, which shineth more and more unto the perfect day."

Now we can see why Jesus did not pray for the world. It was because the world was not in any danger of a fiery Hell. More than that, it was because God's time for dealing with the world had not yet come. The world, however, is to be dealt with by the great Redeemer. After He shall have set up His Kingdom in power and great glory; after He shall have bound Satan for a thousand years that he might deceive the people no more, the glorious Saviour, Messiah, will cause a general enlightenment of mankind and a full opportunity for all, rich and poor, great and small, to rise up from dust and ashes and the grave to the full perfection of human nature.

The Sun of Righteousness will arise with healing in his beams, blessing mankind, healing their diseases, mental, moral and physical, and causing the knowledge of the Lord to fill the whole earth. No longer will any need to say to his neighbor or his brother, "Know thou the Lord, for all shall know Him, from the least to the greatest." And only the wilfully wicked and disobedient will be cut off from life in the Second Death—not torture; but, as St. Paul declares, "They shall be punished with everlasting destruction."

We see, then, that our Lord's reason for not praying for the world was that He knew the Father's Plan that the world was not to be dealt with during this Age, but during the next, the Kingdom Age. The Master prayed for His own, for the class which He has been selecting during the past nineteen hundred years. These are variously called "the elect," the "disciples," "His followers," "members of His Body," a "Royal Priesthood," the "Bride," "the Lamb's Wife," the "little flock," to whom it is the Father's good pleasure to give the Kingdom.

Seeing, then, that there is a difference between God's provision for the world, to be dispensed in the next Age, and his provision for the Church to be given now, we ask, What is the difference between these? The answer is that the world's salvation is to be to human nature and an earthly Paradise world-wide; while the elect class is a special one called of God, chosen in Christ and faithful in adversity and, by the Lord's grace, is to have a heavenly nature, like unto that of the angels, but superior. Theirs is a "heavenly calling," a "high calling." They are to be like their Lord and Redeemer and Head and Bridegroom, Jesus, in His glorified state, "far above angels and principalities and powers, and every name that is named."

Is this an arbitrary election? Does God arbitrarily draw and call one above another? Yes. He thus selected the Jewish nation to be His peculiar nation—not, however, to the detriment or injury of other nations He thus called Isaac instead of Ishmael, and Jacob instead of Esau to be the progenitors of His chosen nation Israel, whom He foreknew as a people and predestinated to a certain service. But this selection worked no injury to either Ishmael or Esau. Similarly during this Gospel Age God chooses from the world a certain class and grants them the hearing ear and the seeing eye, and He passes by others and gives them not this special favor. This, however, is not to be to the disadvantage of the others—non-elect, unchosen, uncalled.

St. Paul speaks of the Church as "called according to His purpose." He even tells us what the purpose is, namely, that in Ages to come He might show forth the exceeding riches of His grace in His loving kindness toward us in Christ Jesus (Ephesians ii, 7). Toward this specially called class God will to all eternity manifest special favor. But we are not to suppose that there is no reason for this selection and favor. There is a reason. It is because of certain intrinsic qualities or characteristics possessed by this class which God is now selecting. They will all be "saints." They will all love the Lord more than they love houses or lands, parents or children, self or any creature. They will all possess the fruits and graces of the Holy Spirit.

Indeed, this is God's particular predestination. St. Paul tells us that He foreknew that He would provide His only-begotten Son to be the Saviour of mankind and the Head over the Church, and He foreknew that He would have a Church, a Royal Priesthood under the great High Priest, as members of His Body. God foreknew also the kind of a Message He would send forth and that it would be attractive only to a certain class possessed of a love for righteousness. These only would hear His call. These only would have the eyes of their understanding specially opened, because these alone would accept of His assurances and make a full consecration to His service. Such He would beget of His Holy Spirit, and such, in due time, would be born of the Spirit in the resurrection and enter into the fellowship and companionship and kingly joys of their Master.

It is of this special class that the Apostle declares, "Whom God did foreknow, these He also did predestinate to be conformed to the likeness (image) of His Son" (Romans viii, 29). That is to say, God's predestination was not only that He would have a Church, but, additionally, that the terms or conditions of fellowship in that Church should be that each one would become Christ-like. Surely this is a good predestination, with which no one could find fault. Whether we shall gain a place with the "elect" on the heavenly plane, or a place with the non-elect world in restitution to earthly nature, we cannot do otherwise than recognize the justice of God in so deciding, that none but the saintly copies of their Lord, could be members of the elect Church and joint-heirs with Him in His Kingdom.

"True and righteous are Thy Ways, Lord God Almighty!" "Who shall not come and worship before Thee, when Thy righteous acts are made manifest?" Truly it is written of this great King of glory, Head and Members, Bridegroom and Bride, "Unto Him every knee shall bow and every tongue confess to the glory of God."

Although our Lord did not pray for the world, He will yet pray for them, and His prayer will be answered. The promise reads, "Ask of Me and I will give Thee the heathen for an inheritance and the uttermost parts of the earth for a possession" (Psalm ii, 8). Jesus did not make this request on the night of His crucifixion because it was not the Father's time to answer that prayer. Appropriately He waited, and while gathering the "elect" from every nation, people, kindred and tongue, the Scriptures declare that He is seated at the Father's right hand of glory expecting or waiting for the time to come when the Kingdom under the whole heavens shall be delivered to Him by the Father. This will be done at the end of this Gospel Age, when the saintly Body of Christ shall have been completed. Then "He shall take unto himself His great power and reign."

A great time of trouble will [illegible] the pathway of sorrow will made ready the hearts of mankind for the great blessings which Messiah will then be ready to bestow, because that will be the due time. St. Paul tells us that Messiah's reign will be a victorious one: "He must reign until He shall have put all enemies under His feet (in full subjection); the last enemy that shall be destroyed is death." Then, after a thousand years, after having accomplished the purpose of the Father in the uplifting of all the willing and obedient of mankind to earthly perfection the great Prophet, Priest, Mediator and King of Glory will at the end of the thousand years' reign deliver up the Kingdom even to God the Father, that God may be all in all (I. Corinthians xv, 28).

While Satan will be bound at the beginning of Messiah's reign and every form of unrighteousness will be rooted out, nevertheless the raising of mankind up out of sin and degradation to perfection will be a gradual work. As the regenerating influences operate in mankind, they will become more and more alive, less and less dead—until at the end of the Messianic reign Adamic death will be no more; it shall have been fully destroyed by the raising of mankind completely out of it; the last enemy that shall be destroyed is death—Adamic death.

The Second Death will never be destroyed, but will be everlasting. It is not an enemy to God and His righteousness, but a valuable servant to destroy everything wilfully and intelligently out of accord with the Divine Government—righteousness.

All who are seeking to walk in the footsteps of Jesus; all who have taken up their cross to follow Him, may well rejoice in that feature of His prayer which says, I pray for those whom Thou hast given Me, that they may all be one, as Thou, Father, and I are one, that the world may believe that Thou hast sent Me (John xvii, 20, 21). The oneness of God's people is not represented in the various sects and parties of the present time. It is represented in the fact that all the consecrated followers of the Redeemer are individually united to Him as the Head and united to each other as members of His Body. "The Lord knoweth them that are His." By and by, by the power of the First Resurrection, all these shall be perfected on the spirit plane and constitute the Kingdom for which we pray, "Thy kingdom come; Thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven." As a result of that Kingdom's coming the world will all be brought to the point of believing in Jesus and will all have the opportunity of obtaining through Him the gift of God, eternal life.

Our Lord's solicitude was not merely for the Apostles and earliest members of the Church whom the Father gave Him in the special sense, as His personal companions and helpers in the founding of the Church; He prayed on, saying, Neither pray I for these alone, but for all those also who shall believe on Me through their Word. The Master's words outlined to us the Divine Program. And Jesus himself began to declare the Gospel and brought life and immortality to light. He commissioned His twelve Apostles, St. Paul taking the place of Judas, to speak in His Name and as His special mouthpieces. Whatever they would declare to be binding on earth would be binding in the sight of God in Heaven. Whatever they would loose and declare to be non-essential on earth, we may know would be so by Divine decree (Matthew xvi, 19).

In a word, Jesus, the Apostles and the Prophets alone are to be considered the special guides and standard-bearers for the Church. We are to believe on Him through their word and not through the word of councils or synods or presbyteries. Each individual of the Church has his personal responsibility. This is in harmony with our Lord's declaration, "My sheep know My Voice and they follow Me; a stranger will they not follow, but will flee from a stranger." It behooves us to-day to hearken back to the words of Jesus as He personally uttered them and as He personally sent them to us through His chosen twelve.

Soon the Master's prayer for His disciples will have fulfillment. They will be one with Him beyond the veil, sharers of His glory and Kingdom. Then will come the time when the world will believe. The knowledge of the Lord will fill the earth and all the binding and stumbling influences of the present will be at an end. The Saviour will not need to pray for the world then, but instead will exercise His power on their behalf, overthrowing evil and uplifting every good principle and all who love righteousness and destroying those who would corrupt the earth.

Cups For Aviators.

Boston, Feb. 27.—Six new cups for ballooning records in New England during the year 1911 were offered on Saturday at the "College Night" dinner of the Aero Club of New England at the Boston City Club.

U. E. Dandurand, acting mayor of Montreal, and Eugene Tarte, editor of La Patrie of Montreal, were special guests, and brought greetings from the Canadian Aero Club. Mr. Dandurand, as vice-president of the Automobile Club of Canada, offered a cup to the balloon pilot landing nearest Montreal during the coming year, while Mr. Tarte offered a similar cup on behalf of his paper. The other cups were offered by The Boston Herald, A. Leo Stevens, Charles J. Glidden and Col. Everett C. Benton of Boston.

A Lively Town.

Gary, Ind., Feb. 27.—One dead and several injured are the results of a number of brawls in the city early last night. Henry Dorsey is in jail, charged with the murder of John Brown, aged 60, by cutting his jugular vein, and biting off the ear of Orrin Brown, son of the murdered man.

In a steel workers' riot a little later, Ald. E. L. Bowser and Pontius Heintz, a steel company officer, were injured by bricks hurled in the melee.

"Throw Up Your Hands."

London, Feb. 27.—"Throw up your hands," shouted twelve-year-old Earl Sloman, as he pointed an air rifle at his fourteen-year-old cousin, Sidney Soloman, Saturday afternoon.

Sidney entered into the spirit of the game, but instead of doing as ordered, he grabbed a 22-calibre rifle from the wall and fired at Earl. The bullet entered his playmate's stomach, inflicting a wound which may result fatally.

Father Morrisey's Remedies

Now on Sale in Ontario

When Father Morrisey, the famous priest-physician of Bartibogue, N. B., died a year ago last spring, he left his prescriptions to the Sisters of the Hotel Dieu, at Chatham, to be used for the benefit of humanity and of the church.

Not being in position to make up and distribute the prescriptions themselves, the Sisters arranged with a number of gentlemen, who had been Father Morrisey's friends, to do it for them. These gentlemen working under the name of the "Father Morrisey Medicine Co., Limited," had by the first of the year placed the remedies in nearly every store in the Maritime Provinces.

So gladly were they received, and so satisfactory has been their record of cures, that the Sisters and the Company have decided to place them on sale throughout Canada.

Father Morrisey's "No. 7", for Rheumatism and the Kidneys—"No. 10", Cough Cure and Lung Tonic—"No. 11", Stomach Remedy—"No. 26", for Catarrh, and "Father Morrisey's Liniment"—can now be obtained from most dealers in this Province. If yours does not keep them write the Father Morrisey Medicine Co., Limited, Chatham, N. B.

Favor Fortification.

Washington, Feb. 27.—After nearly five hours of debate the House, shortly before 10 o'clock last night, voted overwhelmingly in favor of the policy of fortifying the Panama Canal, and appropriated $3,000,000 to begin the work, the total cost of which has been estimated at $12,000,000.

The erection of the House practically settles the question of fortification, for the sentiment in the Senate is said to be made than two to one in favor of protecting the Isthmian waterway by seacoast batteries.

The real test in the House came on an amendment proposed by Representative Downey of Minnesota, chairman of the committee on appropriations. It provided that no part of the money set aside for fortifications should be used until the President of the United States had attempted to negotiate treaties with all of the leading maritime nations, guaranteeing the neutrality and international protection of the canal. This was defeated by a vote of 130 to 63, after a slashing speech against the amendment by Representative Sherley of Kentucky, a Democrat. The appropriation was finally carried by a vote of 123 to 61.

Mardi Gras at Quebec.

Quebec, Feb. 27.—Over 20 allegorical and other cars have now been entered for the grand mardi gras procession, which is to take place on Tuesday evening, and the event promises to be one of the most spectacular ever seen in Quebec. There will be six bands of music in the procession, and thousands of gaily-garbed masqueraders are expected to participate.

Widespread interest is being taken in the event in and outside localities, and it is stated that no less than three special trains will be run from Montreal. The Montagnais Snowshoe Club of the latter city are coming down in full force to form the procession, and all the Quebec and Levis clubs will be seen, most of them turning out with handsome cars.

Mice Chewed Matches.

Toronto, Feb. 27.—Mice chewing matches caused a fire in the roughcast residence of J. Green, 381 Sumach street, at two o'clock Sunday morning. The damage was $25.

Fire from a cause yet undiscovered by the fire department, gutted the stationery store of Mrs. Elizabeth Rae, 1,472 West Queen street, at 11 o'clock yesterday morning, doing $500 damage to contents, and $200 to the building. The building belongs to George Evans. Insurance covers everything.

Boy Scouts' Council.

Ottawa, Feb. 27.—The annual meeting of the Dominion Council of the Canadian Boy Scouts will be held in the railway committee room of the House of Commons on Tuesday afternoon at 3.30 o'clock. His Excellency, the Governor-General, who is the chief scout in Canada, will be present and address the meeting.

DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS

You feel pains in the back, find the urine heavy and unduly coloured, have indigestion and irregularity of the bowels and these may be the rheumatic twinges.

You wonder what has gone wrong until you recollect that you have been exposed to sudden changes of temperature, perhaps sitting in a draft or passing from a very warm room to be chilled by the outdoor air.

The kidneys are most susceptible to cold, and a sudden lowering of temperature throws an extra burden on them by closing the pores of the skin, which are ordinarily a great aid to the kidneys in removing poisons from the blood.

The danger lies in not understanding the meaning of the symtoms given in the first paragraph. Once you know that the kidneys need assistance you can help them promptly by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

Every day you put off treatment you are taking the risk of developing Bright's disease, dropsy or rheumatism. Because of the inactivity of the failing kidneys your system is being loaded with poisonous impurities, and that means pains and suffering.

FINE DEBATE

The inaugural meeting of the St. James' Methodist Brotherhood Literary and Debating Society, which took the form of a debate, was held on Friday night last; subject, "Resolved that all bachelors should be taxed." Mr. Bedworth opened in the affirmative. Mr. Robinson replied for the negative. Mr. Howarth supported the affirmative, and Mr. Davis, the negative. Mr. Bedworth replied. The meeting was then thrown open for discussion, with quite a number of those present taking part. A very interesting meeting was closed by Rev. Mr. Brown. At the close Mr. Davis was elected Vice-President and Messrs. Robinson, McLaren and Bedworth were elected as a committee to prepare a programme and arrange for speakers for the coming session.

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

There is a certain woman whom I know who prides herself greatly on the fact that she sleeps with her chamber window wide open even in the dead of winter.

"My sleep wouldn't do me half so much good," she says, "if I didn't have all that good oxygen."

This woman is also very careful about the airing of her beds—pulls all the clothes off and lets them air at least until the middle of the forenoon, and thinks the woman who makes up her bed before breakfast a sort of hygienic Pariah.

All of which, except the harsh judgment of course, is most praiseworthy.

BUT—and here's the rub—what I don't understand is why she doesn't extend her interest in fresh air to the day time, why she thinks she needs oxygen when she is asleep and not when she is awake.

For I have visited at her home and I know that this is the case. That is, I know that the living rooms and dining room and kitchen where she and her family spend much of their fourteen to sixteen waking hours are not treated to any such systematic daily airing as the bedrooms, where they spend their eight or ten hours of sleep.

Isn't that a queer inconsistency?

And isn't it a common one?

In the average household I don't believe that the living rooms are given a systematic all-the-windows wide-open airing once a week in the winter, except on sweeping days.

And I think they should be treated to one at least once a day—better twice.

One housekeeper I know, who believes as I do about this, always opens all the windows downstairs as soon as she gets up and leaves them open for a few minutes, no matter how cold. The fresh air heats so much more quickly than the stale air that she says by the time the rest of the family are down the rooms are as warm as they would have been if she had not done this, and are filled with fresh air instead of the stale air of the night before.

This same housekeeper has another notion which I think is worth passing on. She believes that it is wicked to lose the least bit of that best germicide that ever was, or rather ever wasn't, manufactured—sunshine.

So every night before she goes to bed she goes about the living rooms and puts all the shades that have been pulled down for the evening up to the very top notch so that if the sun is up before she is none of the sunshine will be lost from her home.

Modern housewives are beginning to realize the value of manufactured germicides as weapons with which to fight disease and dirt.

That is good, but they ought not to fail to realize also the incalculably greater value of those germicides which the greatest wealth cannot buy nor the most absolute poverty deprive one of—sunshine and fresh air.

SPLENDID SERMON WAS PREACHED TO THE MEN

Rev. Jas. Rollins' Eloquent Address at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church Last Evening.

LARGE CONGREGATION

Despite the inclemency of the weather, quite a large number of people turned out to hear an excellent sermon given by the Rev. James Rollins, of St. Andrew's, last night.

On account of the sermon being specially intended for men the male portion of the choir were permitted to occupy seats in the body of the church, in order that they might face the speaker. The text was taken from Isaiah, 13th chap. and 12th and 17th verses, "I will make a man more precious than fine gold; even a man than the golden wedge of Ophir."

"Behold I will stir up the Medes against them, which shall not regard silver; and as for gold, they shall not delight in it."

The basis of the discourse was taken from the Babylonian period of prosperity, when the wealth of the land was taken as a standard measure of power and force. Saint John uses the word "Babylon" to describe the power of the great growing empire with its enormous wealth and its great legions of soldiers all significant of the reign of force, insolent in her pride, lifting her haughty head against 'God' and her blood stained hand against the 'Saints.'

Babylon trusted in her immense riches to protect her, but money or wealth are not the sinews of war.

What avails gold when the battle is at the gates. The true wealth of the nation can not be judged by the state exchequer or by the resources of the country. This period of Christian civilization should not permit of the wealth of the country being judged on that basis.

One thing we have learned is the value and sacredness of human life. It must have been a shock and surprise to the public at large when the "Hon. McKenzie King" during an address in the House of Commons recently, concerning railroad employees said taht during the course of a year, one out of every twenty-eight were injured, and one out of every one hundred and seventy-eight were killed outright.

A press account describes human life as being the first precious asset to the country, while Provincial and Dominion right rank as second. The speaker was thankful that there were some editors who looked on it from that point of view.

The backbone of the country was her sons and daughters. When they are lacking, the power of the country is weak. We should be led by an irresistible desire to improve the moral and spiritual conditions of the nation, thereby increasing the power of the country. The wealth of our country is not measured by the trade exports, the industries or the financial standing, but by moral developments and character of the people. Man is more precious than gold; he is not pledged by his possessions but by his moral and spiritual standing.

"John Ruskin" once said that "the true veins of a nation's wealth are purple and not in rock but in flesh."

During the course of the evening a duet was very beautifully rendered by Miss Howell and Mrs. Dormer.

For Constipation

A Medicine That Does Not Cost Anything Unless It Cures

The active medicinal ingredients of Rexall Orderlies, which are odourless, tasteless, and colourless, is an entirely new discovery. Combined with other extremely valuable ingredients, it forms a perfect bowel regulator, intestinal invigorator and strengthener. Rexall Orderlies are eaten like candy and are notable for their agreeableness to the palate and gentleness of action. They do not cause griping or any disagreeable effect or inconvenience.

Unlike other preparations for a like purpose, they do not create a habit, but instead they overcome the cause of habit acquired through the use of ordinary laxatives, cathartics and harsh physic, and permanently remove the cause of constipation or irregular bowel action.

We will refund your money without argument if they do not do as we say they will. Two sizes, 25c. and 10c. Sold only at our store.—The Rexall Store, McDermid and Jury, corner George and Charlotte streets.

A STUBBORN CINDERELLA

"When You First Kiss the Last Girl You Love"—catchy title, isn't it? The song is just as catchy and there are twenty more good ones to keep it company in the musical play of quality, "A Stubborn Cinderella," which is to play at the Grand Opera House on Friday, March 3. This much talked about musical play is by the same authors who wrote "The Goddess of Liberty" and other big successes. The play was produced at the opening of the new Princess Theatre in Chicago, and since the initial performance has been playing to tremendous houses, with records of 500 consecutive performances in Chicago, six months in New York and twenty weeks in Boston and Philadelphia.

The plot of the piece hinges on the love affairs of a young college chap who meets a titled woman from Scotland, who, previous to her acquaintance with Mac—the college youth—has never spoken to a man. The situations following their meeting are ludicrous in the extreme, and one gets only a breathing spell from the laughs during one of the many pleasing song numbers introduced throughout the play.

A most capable company is supporting Cort Albertson, who is heading the organization, with Miss Hazel Kirke in the prima donna role. Miss Kirke has a beautiful soprano voice added to her many other charms which she uses most effectively in her several song numbers. Springly little Lillian Goldsmith, Mable Charlebois and Neil Burns are some of the principals assisting, and besides these there are a goodly number of pretty little girls, the "broilers," and exquisitely gowned show-girls with voices of quality. Among the song hits are "Love Me Just Because," "What's the Use," "Don't Be Cross With Me," "I'm in Love with All the Girls I Know," "Adios Senorita" and "Don't be Anybody's Moon But Mine."

MUSIC AND DRAMA

DADDY DUFARD.

Before Saturday Albert Chevalier was but a name to very many Peterborough citizens; to a small minority a name that brought back memories of pleasant evenings in England, spent in listening to the famous artist, singing coster songs in his inimitable fashion. Now, however, he has proved himself a remarkably clever actor, whose work in the comedy "Daddy Dufard" is a brilliant, finished piece of character acting. His role, that of an old, French actor, is widely divergent from the work that has made his name a house hold word, but he succeeds so admirably that those who have seen him before could scarcely realize that it was really Albert Chevalier that was before them. His mannerisms, his accent are as typically French as his coster songs were typically cockney, and he makes the title role at once realistic and lovable. Incidentally the action of the play is ingeniously contrived to give him an opportunity to sing some of his favourite variety of songs and his three numbers were received with the greatest enthusiasm by the audiences on Saturday. His numbers were "Mrs. 'Enery 'Awkins," "Right as Nine Pence" and "The Work House Man," the latter a pathetic number sandwiched between two humorous songs. He was equally at home in all three and the audience clamoured for more. Mr. Chevalier is supported by a splendid English Company, Miss Violet Hemming, a remarkably winsome and accomplished young actress, giving a capitol interpretation of the principal feminine role.

The story of the play is briefly that the daughter of Achille Talma Dufard, an actor of the old French school, is madly desirous of achieving success on the stage like her father. Paul Hammond, a young playwright, who is in love with Rose Dufard, enraged at his daughter's disappointment, comes forward with a scheme to obtain the coveted role for her. In the futherance of this scheme he consents in consideration of a large reward, to pose as a Baron and preside over a gambling house and to lend the influence of his assumed baronial name to the discredited institution. When it becomes known that Dufard is a Baron, Rose is deluged with offers of theatrical engagements. The "Baron" pretends to object to his noble daughter's so demeaning herself, but he finally consents and she thus replaces the disconsolate Celia at the premiere of Hammond's play. Rose Dufard wins an immense success in this play and in the final scene of "Daddy Dufard" we are shown the "behind scenes" scene at the Caledonia Theatre on that momentous and exciting occasion.

The offering was one of the most enjoyable of the season.

ALL SAINTS' CHURCH IS PRESENTED WITH A BELL

Mrs. Fitzgerald, a Member of All Saints' Congregation, Purchases the Bell of St. John's and Presents it to the Church.

The rector of All Saints' announced yesterday the gift of a bell to the church by Mrs. Fitzgerald, Charlotte street. Mrs. Fitzgerald is one of the oldest members of All Saints, and has seen it grow from its earlier days to its present status as a strong parish. In all these days she has been a liberal supporter and promoter of the work, and now she has added to all her past generosity this gift of a bell. The bell is the sweet-toned bell which has been used for some years in St. John's church. The opportunity to purchase the bell presented itself to Mrs. Fitzgerald. Owing to the successful efforts of St. John's to procure the chimes and availing herself of this opportunity, she has donated it to her own parish. Needless to say the congregation of all Saints is deeply gratified, while all Peterborough pople will rejoice that provision has been made to keep the bell in the city. The bell will probably be installed in the tower sometime in May or June.

An Exhibition To Be Held at Elliot's Store

At Elliot's store next week there will be an unusually large exhibition of ready-to-wear goods.

In addition to their own much enlarged stock the noted manufacturers of United States and Canada have arranged to send their representatives to Peterborough all next week in Elliot's store.

They will show the dainty garments that are going to be worn by America's most select people.

The display will be thoroughly representative, embracing all the latest ideas of the season, even the divided skirt will be shown.

There will be a lavish display of new dresses form the lowest prices to the most luxurious gowns—hundreds of them—the latest skirts, suits, coats, dresses, waists, etc., will be shown in the newest designs.

Among the better dresses there will not be two dresses alike, as the manufacturers are confining to Elliott's store their makes for this district. There will be no possibility of two ladies having the same pattern.

The sales staff has been reorganized and greatly strengthened.

In the ready-to-wear department thoroughly experienced ready-to-wear specialists will be in charge of every department.

Miss Brady, of Quebec, who has had wide experience in the best ready-to-wear stores, a thoroughly competent manager in ever yway, will be in full charge of the department, and to assist her, she will have experienced sales ladies. The altering department will be looked after by dress makers of many years' experience.

There will be no charge for alterations. Elliot's store is to be congratulated on their enterprise. Their ready-to-wear department will be one of the finest in the province.

RECIPROCITY

The Board of Trade will hold an important meeting, Monday night, February 27th, in the council chamber. Subject Reciprocity. 3d-46

Goodfellowship League's Meeting On Sunday A Splendid Address

The usual meeting of the St. John's Guild of Good Fellowship was held in the Princess Theatre yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock, when the series of addresses on "A Wonderful Library" was continued by the Rev. C. Carpenter. The subject of yesterday's address was "The Influence of the Bible on Modern Literature and Thought."

After reviewing the teaching of the last two addresses, Mr. Carpenter went on to show that as in the earlier stages of literature the Bible had had a tremendous influence upon it, so also in the modern. The thought of the modern writer is inevitably tinged by its teaching, and the consequence is that in nearly every book we read, Biblical words, phrases and references find a place. When translated into other languages it does not lose its force or beauty, but by its inherent power of attraction it reaches the heart and is placed in the forefront of the country's literature, henceforth to influence it for good. It acts as a conserving force in preventing the decay of words and becomes the standard of purity and excellence. We feel grateful for the high tone of Biblical language and cannot conceive it clothed in modern slang. It also has a refining influence on literature, encouraging the best and condemning the bad. Wherever the Bible goes it creates a thirst for greater intellectual attainment and the necessary consequence is a growing literature. Heathen countries before the advent of the Divine Library are generally dependent upon oral traditions, but afterwards a growing demand is made for other books. Today there are thousands of books about the Bible and its teachings, which after a period will pass from mind, while the Bible will still live, so great is its hold upon the world, literary as well as religious.

With regard to its influence upon thought, it undoubtedly unifies all English speaking peoples. It is a book common to all, with a message to all. It has to guard and protect the morals of man, and has to be adapted to meet the needs of his every day life. In the near future in the struggle for supremacy the conditions of life will depend largely upon the way in which the Bible is received. Without it there will be retrogression, for with its removal there will be nothing to guard the morals, and thought of men. The Bible alone can point the right way and must always be a nation's safeguard.

The address concluded with an appeal for its deeper study in every department of life. It must be read with the realization that its work is to bring out the highest and noblest in man, so that the offering of himself may be acceptable. The Bible alone can effect this, if only he will study it faithfully.

INVENTION AS APPLIED TO FOODS

It is interesting to reflect that the supersession of the tinder box by the match, and the messenger by the telephone, is simply an illustration of the manner in which invention changes the ways of the world and produces greater comfort in daily life.

Oxo Cubes are probably the greatest advance in food and dietetics which has taken place in 50 years. In the early fifties Liebig's Extract was unknown and the pot au feu reigned supreme. Since that day one invention has followed another until we get the perfection of concentration and ingenuity in the beef extracts and beef fibrine Cubes called Oxo Cubes.

The process of preparation known only to the makers of Oxo is so intricate and delicate that it ensures the nourishing and stimulating properties of Oxo being equally distributed in each single Cube. The Cube is gauged to the exact size of a cupful and five striking advantages are that they do away with the troublesome handling of corks, jars and bottles, and the trouble of gauging and measuring. Ladies realize what an immense saving this means.

If one goes into almost any house in Canada today a box of Oxo Cubes will be found in the sideboard or on the mantelpiece.

REV. MR. ARMSTRONG AT KNOX CHURCH

Assistant Secretary of Missions for the Presbyterian Church in Canada, Preaches Powerful Sermon---Refers to the Conditions in China.

Rev. A. E. Armstrong, M.A., of Toronto, the assistant secretary of Missions for the Presbyterian church, delivered a very interesting, instructive and eloquent sermon to a large congregation at Knox church last evening, in connection with the Young People's Missionary Institute work. He took his text from the 6th chap. of St. Mark, the 36th verse: "Send them away, that they may go into the country round about, and into the villages, and buy themselves bread; for they have nothing to eat."

"Jesus turned to the disciples and commanded the mto feed the multitude," said Mr. Armstrong. "He commanded them to do this, not in recommanded them to feed the multitudes He was sent to feed us, and He needs must do so. To-day there are millions of human beings starving, and Christ has not changed any since the time of this story. But, there is a difference between physical starving and starving spiritually, and unless we open our hearts and our pockets, the famine will not be overcome. $1.50 will keep a man alive in that famine stricken land until spring, until the crop of rice is harvested. The managers of some of the local banks, are taking subscriptions for these people, and I hope you will contribute freely. I give this as an illustration of our Christian faith. If any one of us see a man starving and in trouble and we shut ourselves off from him, there is no religion in us. Our hospitals, for sick and poor, are associations for moral and physical relief, and they are characteristic of our Christian faith.

The passage here has a wide meaning—it means that we should give spiritual bread to the starving Chinese as well as physical bread. "Give ye them to eat," said Christ. They had only five small loaves of bread, but He commanded them to share what they had—give them what has meant so much to us — Christianity; look what it has done for us. Speaking of the Canadian West, if it were not Christianized, if it were entirely destitute of religion, what would the conditions be? One half would be under arms protecting the other half. Think of the conditions in India and see what they are, compared to other lands, China and Africa for instance. Where the British government rules the conditions are good, because as Queen Victoria said, "The Bible is the secret of England's success and greatness." If we would close up our Bible for ten years we would see the difference. It would not be safe to live in this country — we would be living in constant danger of losing our lives, so, we see what it has done for us—what it is doing for us, and we know what it will do for us. What it has done for us, it will do for the Chinese.

I am glad to think that you have started out so well in your new church and I am sure that as long as you are under the leadership of my good friend, Mr. Keith you will be nothing else but strong missionary workers—therefore benefits come back to us by reason of our good work. There are things in our religion and faith we would never have known if we had not seen Christ operating in other countries. Look at Corea. The gospel is being preached in many homes and in the course of a few years there will not be a house in Corea in which the gospel will not have been preached. I hope in the two weeks' missionary work you get the right spirit. The voluntary services of the people in Corea shows the spirit. People will give up their work to carry the gospel and so before our very eyes we are witnessing what Christ is doing. Within twenty-five years, Corea will be a Christian country. Is it therefore worth our while spending money. We have not yet learned how to give. You have given to the church, but you have not learned how to sacrifice yet. In Corea the farmers will sell their rice crop and buy millet, which is cheaper, to live on during the winter and they give the difference to the cost to the missionaries. Our money goes only to keep up our own missionaries. To Christianize these people, is our duty, and with Christ nothing was impossible. Therefore, it will have to be so with us, of it takes millions we will have to do so, but it is not going to cost much. If all members of the Christian church would give ten cents a week, it would be sufficient to carry out the work, but some are too old to give, some too young, some too poor and that is the way. There are people who say, "If I were sure that the money I give reaches the missionaries, I would give more." I sometimes wonder if these people give anything. Candidly, 98 cents of every dollar goes to the missionaries in China, India, or wherever it is sent. The men who audit the books, etc., are astounded to see how cheap it really is. We should share our faith with other people in the world if it were for nothing else but what it will do for trade. Would it be possibly for us to have trade with other countries that we do trade with, if it were not for the missionaries. Take the Hawaii Islands for instance. Honolulu a half century ago was nothing but heathen and cannibals. The same may be said of South Sea Islands, and look to-day. The heathens have been transformed to Christians, who are cultivating the soil. Trade follows the flag, and it is the missionary that carries the flag; he brings the trade. There is yet a great section to be developed, so we shall, therefore, continue in the missionary work, even for one reason, which is a secondary one, trade and commerce. We are driving in one direction and for one conclusion, international and universal peace. The Hague Conference is the first step—all difference will be settled by arbitration, and we are getting there fast, and it is worth while sharing our faith with all these countries."

In concluding his remarks, Mr. Armstrong said, "If this was a heathen country we would have plague in it, but owing to the sanitary conditions, this is not the case, a fact which we may attribute to our Christianity. There are millions in India who get no more than one meal a day. The only way we can lift these people up out of this terrible position is to give them the gospel. Christ has commanded us to do it, and we shall obey Him. By so doing we shall carry out the prayer that we repeat every day. We shall never grow old in His service and whatever He commands we will do cheerfully. He is the one to whom we have sworn obedience. Therefore, within a few years we expect our work to be carried out.

Ladies of Culture and Refinement Use Salvia Hair Tonic. It makes the Hair Beautiful

At last a remedy has been discovered that will positively destroy this pest.

That Dandruff is caused by germs is accepted by every sensible person. Dandruff is the root of all hair evils.

SALVIA will kill the dandruff germs and remove Dandruff in ten days, or money back.

The Warne Drug Store guarantees it. It will grow hair, stop itching scalp, falling hair, and make the hair thick and abundant. It prevents hair from turning gray, and adds life and lustre.

SALVIA is a hair dressing that has become the favourite with women of taste and culture, who know the real value of beautiful hair. A large, generous bottle costs only 50c at leading druggists everywhere, and in Peterborough by the Warne Drug Store. The word "SALVIA" (Latin for sage) is on every bottle.

The fortnightly meeting of the St. John's Young People's Association will be held in the school room to-night at 8 p. m., when the Rev. Charles Carpenter will give an illustrated lecture on "Newfoundland and its Products."

The Y. P. A. will be glad to welcome the members of the congregation and the public generally to this meeting. The slides, illustrating the address, are full of interest and instruction, and will be shown through Mr. Fisk's magnificent lantern.

TO CURE A HEADACHE

The experience of Mr. O. Barber, Simcoe, Ont., is of interest to all who suffer from headaches. He writes: "For a long time I was troubled with headaches which came on about once a week with such violence that I could not eat or do my work. Headache powders and quick cures did me no good. I then used six boxes of Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Food and have not been troubled with headache since. That was eight months ago."

FIRST VIEW OF SNOW A SCARE AND A DELIGHT

There is one woman in Canada, who, through her experience of the last few days, would undoubtedly accept as the truth the mythical tales of "Alice in Wonderland" and "The Arabian Nights," she is Dona Agusta Robinson, 65, a negress, raised by Violet Seaton's grandfather. Miss Seaton is the winsome prima donna in the big musical success "The Goddess of Liberty" which comes to the Grand Opera House Monday, March 6. The negress refused to accept her freedom, at the close of the Civil War insisting that she would never leave the Seaton family.

When Miss Seaton's mother decided to visit her daughter, Violet, and enjoy a few days of Canada's delightful winter weather, she insisted on bringing Mamma Dona Augusta with her, and, after considerable persuasion, Mamma Dona consented.

As the Lake Shore train neared Toledo one morning last week Dona glanced out of her Pullman window, and for the first time in her life she saw snow. Excitedly she exclaimed "Lordy I' knows I'se awake, but the groun' am all painted white. Where am I?" A snow flurry added to Dona's bewilderment. "Look! look!" she cried, "De air am filled wif feathers." The explanation that the "feathers" was snow meant nothing to Mamma Dona; she gazed at the panoramic scene, at first with fear, but gradually she became as enthusiastic as a child, when she realized that her fellow passengers felt no alarm.

The chilly atmosphere was also a novelty to the woman, when she transferred to the Grand Trunk station at Detroit en route to Toronto; she walked timidly towards the carriage over the snow-laden station platform, laughing almost hysterically. The negress gazed in wonder at the passing sleigh, which she at once designated as a "slider." She touched the silvery flakes to her lips and laughed excitedly. "I sure am going to take some of dis back when I go home." Mamma Dona has been in the Seaton Family for sixty years, and was born near the Seaton plantation in the town of Seaton, on the Gulf border of Southern Texas, and had never been out of that warm climate until she made this trip last week.

SPLENDID RECITAL

A recital was given at the Conservatory of Music on Saturday, at 5 o'clock, by Miss Beatrice Starke's pupils. It reflected great credit both on the teacher and individual members of the class. The parents and intimate friends of the children were present, and were much pleased with the talent displayed by the latter. The programme was arranged as follows:

Piano Trio—School Festival — E. Bogue, O. Gliddon, S. Scott.
Krogmann—Little Prince—Ruth Fee.
Villagers' Waltz—Betty Mowat.
Streabogg—Papa's Letter — Stanley Bogue.

APRIL 4 THE DATE

Extra Session of the American Congress Will Be Called for That Day—Treaty Will Not Go Through This Session

NOT TIME ENOUGH

Washington, Feb. 27.—So probable is it that an extra session of Congress will be necessary in order to get action on the Canadian reciprocity agreement, and the leaders see no hope of bringing to a vote at this session the McCall bill to carry the agreement into effect. Many rumors were circulated of moves to remedy the situation, but apparently they were all without foundation. The most persistent of all was one that Senator Aldrich, famed for winning legislative battles, which his colleagues thought lost, was speeding to Washington at the urgent solicitation of President Taft to take charge of the situation in the Senate.

The Aldrich rumor, apparently, was a distortion of a telegram which the Senator sent from Jekyll Island, Ga., asking that a pair be arranged for him in favor of the McCall bill if it comes to a vote this session.

As a matter of fact, no one believes that the coming of Senator Aldrich would alter the situation in respect to the McCall bill. The measure is opposed by Senators Cummings, Bristow, Clapp and many other insurgent Republicans. The arrival of Mr. Aldrich and any attempt by him to force the consideration of the bill upon the Senate would be like shaking a red flag in the face of a bull. It would serve, according to the consensus of opinion in the Senate, only to intensify the insurgents' fight against the measure. Not only that, but his friendship for the bill unquestionably would alienate some of his best friends, like Senators Hale, McCumber, Smoot, and others who aided him in framing the Payne-Aldrich tariff law, but who are opposed to the Canadian agreement.

Senator McCumber spoke against the bill Saturday, basing his argument upon the disastrous effect which he said its enactment would have upon the farming industry.

Robbed of $130,000 In Jewels.

New York, Feb. 27.—Mrs. Baldwin Drummond, formerly Mrs. Marshall Field, jr., of Chicago, was robbed of a fortune in jewels Saturday night on board a transatlantic liner. Diamonds, pearls and other gems to the value of approximately $130,000 disappeared mysteriously from her stateroom on the steamship Amerika of the Hamburg-American Line some time between 9.30 o'clock Saturday evening and 5.30 yesterday morning.

To the police Mrs. Drummond described the missing jewels as follows: Two strings of pearls of 273 pearls each; one string of 283 pearls; one large black pearl ring set with diamonds; one large white pearl ring set with diamonds; one pair large pearl earrings set with diamonds; one black pearl brooch set with diamonds, with a black pearl; pea-shaped pendant.

A wireless message sent from the Amerika as she neared port summoned detectives down the bay in a tug. They learned from Mrs. Drummond details of the theft and began a combing of the ship and a search of the crew. But not a trace of the jewel was found.

Need Not Fast.

Ottawa, Feb. 27.—Owing to the amount of sickness in Ottawa during the typhoid outbreak, Archbishop Gauthier has announced that Roman Catholics will not be under the usual obligation to fast during the Lenten season.

Discovered Oil and Gas.

St. Thomas, Feb. 27.—Crude oil and gas were discovered during the week on the farm of Ed. Webb, near Middlemarch, at a depth of 300 feet, while a well was being bored. The extent of the find will be investigated at once.

Sixteen Killed by Avalanche.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 27.—An avalanche overwhelmed a school in the village of Albge, in the Black Sea government Friday, and killed 16 persons.

WRECK AT THE HUMBER

Sixteen Cars Smashed and Sixteen Thousand Bushels of Wheat Scattered Over the Track

TRAFFIC TIED UP

Toronto, Feb. 27.—Sixteen box cars fully loaded with wheat were smashed to matchwood in a wreck on the main line of the Grand Trunk at the Humber yesterday morning and all traffic through this important point—Grand Trunk and C.P.R.—was cut off for nine hours.

It was as bad a wreck as could well be imagined. Sixteen cars, and 16,000 bushels of wheat were squashed into a beautifully scrambled heap, within a space of five cars lengths.

It occurred at 10.10 a.m., and, with a full auxiliary crew, with a crane, and, three section gangs working like beavers, it took until 7 o'clock in the evening to get the north (west bound) track cleared so that trains east and west could be run over it between Mimico and Swansea. The other track was not cleared until early this morning.

No one was injured; but a brakeman and a Humber native had close calls. The brakeman was trotting over the top of the train and just hopped from the last car that was smashed when it mounted the heap of debris.

"Lefty" Macdonald, who is to pitch for the Toronto ball team this year, and who resides close to the scene of the wreck, was on the track—just going for a pail of water—when the train began to crumple up beside him and he had to step lively over the embankment to save his skin. He was right where the cars buckled, and one of them made for him endwise across the tracks.

Engine No. 674, with Engineer W. Perry and Conductor T. Stebbard, was hauling 35 box-cars laden with wheat from the Grand Trunk elevators at Point Edward to Portland, Me., for export, and two empties.

The front truck on the eighth car from the engine broke at a point 250 yards west of Billie Miles' hotel and trailed along the ties until it struck a switch frog about fifty yards west of the hotel. Then it tried to take the siding and in a minute sixteen cars were piled up in the hollow behind the hotel, over the tracks and down on the other side of the narrow embankment.

Wheat, worth about 90 cents a bushel poured out of every crack in streams, filling up the mud holes and burying the underneath cars. Superintendent W. H. Farrell and the auxiliary were soon on the spot and thought at first to have one line open in time for the International Limited to get through at 4.40 p.m.. But they couldn't do it. The pile was to dense.

The C.P.R. threw open its Mimico-Islington spur, and both companies used it, landing their trains into Toronto about twenty minutes late, and missing South Parkdale station.

When the north track was cleared in time for No. 2 from London to get through, the traffic came and went as usual, save for the fact that it was a single track service between Mimico and Swansea.

"Lefty" Macdonald, the twirler, seems to have been the only eye-witness. He says that he could hardly remember what happened. He was on the track, heard a scraping sound, saw fire flying up and ducked just as the cars piled up. One car plunged right at him as he went over the bank.

"They all piled up as quickly as you could fire off a gun," he said.

Superintendent Farrell said the train was not traveling faster than twenty miles an hour. He estimated that each car would hold 1,000 bushels of wheat and figured that about two-thirds of this could be saved.

Former Secretary for India Dead.

London, Feb. 27.—Viscount Wolverhampton, formerly secretary of state for India, and from 1908 until 1910 lord president of the council, died here Saturday.

Henry Hartley Fowler, the first Viscount Wolverhampton, was born May 16, 1830, and was the youngest son of the late Rev. Joseph Fowler. He was created a viscount in 1908.

Viscount Wolverhampton was financial secretary to the treasury in 1886, president of the local Government board, with a seat in the Cabinet, from 1892 until 1894, and during the following year had the portfolio of secretary of state for India. He was appointed chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster in December, 1905, and was lord president of the council, from 1908 to 1910.

Mob Law In Georgia.

Augusta, Ga., Feb. 27.—Robert Jones and John Veazey, negroes, charged with the murder of white men, were taken from the Warrenton, Ga., jail, by a mob at midnight, Friday night, and lynched. The negroes were strung up to the limb of a tree on the outskirts of the town and their bodies riddled with bullets.

"MY BACK IS KILLING ME"

"FRUIT-A-TIVES" WILL CURE

Backache means Congestion of the Kidneys. Dull ache in the back—sharp, shooting pains—headache and nervousness—mean that the Kidneys are overworked. The Bowels are constipated and the skin is inactive, so that the Kidneys are compelled to do the work of both bowels and skin in throwing off the waste of the body. The Kidneys thus become irritated and inflamed and backache results. The only possible way to relieve the congestion and cure the pain is to force the bowels and skin to do their share of the work.

"Fruit-a-tives", the great fruit medicine, is the best and most scientific Kidney Remedy in the world.

"Fruit-a-tives" will always cure Pain in the Back and Kidney Trouble. 50c. box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. Dealers, or from Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

Fire did $5,000 damage to the jewelry stock of Bradley Bros. at Windsor.

Vancouver Liberals have demanded an investigation of Judge Grant's graft charges.

Troops were called out in Amoy, China, to quell a fight in the city between rival clans. Several were wounded.

In trying to escape from two men who were following him Mr. Charles Andsell of Hamilton fell over the railway embankment and was seriously injured.

A "blind pig" with complete outfit was found by the police in the confectionery store of a Syrian named Nicholas Khoury, St. Thomas, late on Saturday night.

James Bower, president of the Canadian National Council of Agriculture, is in Ottawa to urge the Government to grant in full the demands of the farmers' delegation.

Miss Florence Hewitt, aged 30, died of heart failure while taking a bath in her home, 314 Euclid avenue, Toronto, yesterday. The young lady's mother discovered her.

Preaching at Empress Avenue Church, London, Rev. Geo. W. Dewey, the pastor, advised for taxation of church property as proposed in the Ontario Legislature by Mr. McKeown.

The Canadian immigration officers at Windsor on Saturday turned back 26 undesirables, including ten miners from Nevada, who claimed they had work in Cobalt. This was a record day.

While looking for a leak of natural gas in the cellar of W. C. Dillon's liquor store, Sarnia, a plumber lit a match and an explosion followed. The building was slightly damaged, but the workman was not injured.

While at work in Wilder's new building on Balmoral street, Montreal, John Henderson, 60 years of age, fell down the elevator shaft from the first floor to the basement and was instantly killed. His neck was broken.

The Gas Was no Good.

Cornwall, Feb. 27.—Emile Barlatier, the Montreal aeronaut, and his venturesome wife, did not succeed in leaving Cornwall by their balloon yesterday, as was contemplated, in their effort to fly through the air from Ogdensburg, N.Y., to Montreal. The first stage of their journey was made on Sunday and Monday of last week, and they landed in Cornwall on the latter day, and have been here since waiting for favorable winds.

On Saturday night at 12 o'clock the work of inflating the big gas bag was commenced at the Cornwall Gas Works, and shortly after 7 o'clock Sunday morning the bag was filled. By 9.30 o'clock the traveling basket was attached and everything looked favorable for a magnificent start, as the weather conditions were ideal, when it was discovered that Cornwall gas was not suitable, being too heavy and damp, and the trip had to be abandoned.

The party returned to Montreal by the night train, and it is understood that the balloonists will go to Ottawa and attempt a flight from that city to Montreal, which will probably be made on Tuesday.

Neglected the Dominion.

New York, Feb. 27.—Here to join Mr. and Mrs. Fred. W. Vanderbilt as their guests for a four weeks' stay in Florida, the Duke and Duchess of Manchester arrived Saturday night on board the Lusitania of the Cunard Line from Liverpool. A representative of Mr. Vanderbilt was at the pier to meet them, and they were at once taken to the Pennsylvania station, where they started southward in Mr Vanderbilt's private car.

Keen on the subject of reciprocity between the United States and Canada, the duke, asked about the outlook, said: "The English have only themselves to blame for the fact that they have not made an arrangement with Canada before this. For the last twelve years Canada has been begging for reciprocity with the Mother Country, and has been met with deaf ears I shall have to be in England in May, when the subject of the veto power of the House of Lords will come up again."

Paris, Feb. 27.—Auguste Loutre Fil, who was born a peasant and became one of the richest French financiers in Russia, died recently. He had been impressed by the meagre endowment of science in France in comparison with the United States, and determined to set an example for his countrymen. His will, which has just been made public, discloses that he bequeathed $700,000 to the Academy of Sciences, $500,000 to the University of Paris and $20,000 to the Pasteur Institute for research work.

Afloat on Ice Fields.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 27.—Despatches from Helsingfors and Narva report that a portion of the ice floe on which 500 fishermen went adrift in the Gulf of Finland several days ago, has been driven ashore at Heiskar Island. Forty of the fishermen had found safety on this floe. Another portion, with many men, grounded near Kolva Isle, in Barko Sound.

MONEY ORDER RAISING.

"Bible Agent" Shows Court How It Is Done.

Ingersoll, Feb. 27.—After expressing willingness to "take his medicine right away," Wm. Bradshaw, who was arrested in London Friday by local detectives on a charge of raising Canadian Express Co. money orders, received a sentence of five years in Kingston penitentiary from Police Magistrate Patterson at Ingersoll Saturday evening.

Before Bradshaw received sentence, he signed his name to a statement in which he confessed that under the guise of being an agent for a bible firm he effectively raised money orders at a score of places in Ontario, and at a number in New York State and Michigan. So fully did the young man make clear his guilt that to the officers of the court and officials he made a complete demonstration of the methods he employing in erasing the so-called indellible ink of an original money order and increasing its face value to the limit of the marginal guards. The neatness and despatch of his work amazed the officials.

The navy of the United States was blamed by him as the cause of his downfall. Against the petty officers of Uncle Sam's ships of war the prisoner laid his education in ways that are dark. He made the statement that it was common practice in the navy to raise vouchers and pay orders and to put it in his own words the entire department was "rotten with graft."

Rumor Drew Crowd.

Montreal, Feb. 27.—Some person started a story last week that a baby had been born to Mrs. Alfred Plante, 411 Joliette street, Hochelaga Ward, with horns resembling a goat.

The family at first paid little attention to the report, and their neighbors were aware that nothing of the kind had happened. Mrs. Plante is the mother of eight children, the youngest of whom is a girl, eight months old, a healthy child of normal proportions.

The story of the baby with the horns spread until curious people were attracted to the house.

So bothersome did the curiosity seekers become that the father appealed to Capt. Murphy of the East St. Catherine street police station, for protection. Capt. Murphy said he could not prevent people from calling at the house if they wished to do so, but would stop them collecting in the street or blocking the sidewalk.

One policeman was sufficient Saturday to keep the crowd that gathered in front of the house from blocking the street, but yesterday it required two men and an officer to keep them in motion. Capt. Murphy stated that in the early part of yesterday afternoon there were between 500 and 600 persons in front of the house.

Brutality to Insane.

Poughkeepsie, N.Y., Feb. 27.—Dan Riley, an attendant at the Matteawan Asylum for the criminal insane, was arrested here Saturday night, charged with manslaughter in the first degree in connection with the death of John J. Nugent, a patient in the institution.

Nugent died on Feb. 3, and charges that he had been subjected to violence resulted in his body being disinterred on Long Island only a few days ago. The majority of the physicians were inclined to think that he was a victim of heart disease, but rumors of violence persisted, and Saturday County Judge Hasbrouck examined witnesses here and afterward ordered Riley's arrest. According to the testimony given yesterday by Geo. Galbraith, also an attendant at the hospital, Nugent was brutally treated two days before his death. He swore that Nugent had been brought under submission by winding a pillow case about his neck, after which he was thrown on a bed and "kneed."

Unhealthy for Fish.

Ottawa, Feb. 27.—As a result, it is considered, of the hypochlorite that is being put into Ottawa's water supply to kill the typhoid germs, the Government fish hatchery station here has already lost a number of valuable fish and may lose thousan ls more.

Several complainta have been made to The Citizen by owners of gold fish that since the hypochlorite treatment has been commenced many had died. Precisely the same result has been met with at the Government hatchery, except that the loss there will be many times greater if, as is feared, the hypo has had a deleterious effect on the thousands of fish eggs that are being hatched out.

If, as feared, the eggs should be spoiled, the loss to the Government will be considerable, as the varieties being hatched include salt water salmon and other fish not easy to procure inland and the number of eggs is an enormous one.

Had Severe Pains In His Back.

Could Hardly Work.

Mr. Alfred E. Davis, Gaspe, Que. writes:—"For some years I suffered from severe pains in my back and could hardly work at all, and when I stooped down to pick up anything felt as if my back must break. I was advised to try Doan's Kidney Pills, and after taking two boxes I was entirely cured, and feel that I cannot speak too highly in their favor.

"This was nearly four years ago and I still remain cured."

Those who have never been troubled with kidney trouble do not know the suffering and misery which those afflicted undergo.

Weak, lame or aching back comes from the kidneys, and when the kidneys are out of order the whole system becomes deranged.

They help the kidneys to flush off the acrid and poisonous impurities which have collected, thus clearing out the kidneys, bladder and urinary passages.

Price 50c per box or 3 for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited Toronto, Ont.

Woman's Power Over Man

Woman's most glorious endowment is the power to awaken and hold the pure and honest love of a worthy man. When she loses it and still loves on, no one in the wide world can know the heart agony she endures. The woman who suffers from weakness and derangement of her special womanly organism soon loser the power to sway the heart of a man. Her general health suffers and she loses her good looks, her attractiveness, her amiability and her power and prestige as a woman. Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N.Y., with the assistance of his staff of able physicians, has prescribed for and cured many thousands of women. He has devised a successful remedy for woman's ailments. It is known as Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It is a positive specific for the weaknesses and disorders peculiar to women. It purifies, regulates, strengthens and heals. Medicine dealers sell it. No honest dealer will advise you to accept a substitute in order to make a little larger profit.

IT MAKES WEAK WOMEN STRONG, SICK WOMEN WELL.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate and strengthen Stomach, Liver and Bowels.

PARKDALES ARE OUT ARGOS WON 6 TO 2

TORONTO, FEB. 27. — Though Parkdale Canoe Club made a draw, three all, with the Argonauts in the first of the O.H.A. senior semi-finals last Wednesday, the play went far to suggest that Argos, not Parkdale, would be found battling with Eatons in the finals this week. This sensation was made good before a crowded house on Saturday night, and Argos won by 6 to 2, or 9 to 5 on the round. The ice was soft, but the game was hard enough to suit the most exacting demands for strenuous play. The half time score was 2 to 1 in favour of the Argos, just as in the first game, but the Oarsmen did not fade away in the last few minutes this time. Instead they increased their lead and looked like winners throughout. Murphy got both of the tallies for the Argos in this period, both from a long way out. In the next half Murphy put in another and Gordon got three, monopoly of the successful shots for the winners, while Davidson had a monopoly o fthe successful shots for Parkdale. The teams, unchanged from the first game were

Referee—Lawson Whitehead, Toronto.

On ice that made puck-carrying impossible or uncertain and with teams as ready to mix it as these, a game calling for many penalties was pretty sure to result, and the infractions that brought visits to the penalty box totalled twenty-three. Fourteen of these terms off the ice were served by Parkdale, who at one time had only three men in the game. It can hardly be said, though, that this had any material effect on the outcome. The Argos pressed harder and took more chances from far out, while Parkdale tried a game that was hardly warranted on slushy ice. Murphy lifted the first goal from the Argonaut side of centre and slammed the second in from away out on the boards, while Parkdale were trying to take the puck down and get in close before shooting. The Parkdale defence did too much mixing-up and were caught at it, Lawson and Stockton going to the box half a dozen times. Combination was not of much value under the conditions of ice and checking, and much of the play was of the lone-hand variety. Murphy was the most brilliant and effective player on the ice, and it was his aggressiveness and attack of the Argos that distinguished their game from that of their opponents and kept them well in front throughout. Brady and Gordon were masters of their jobs on the wings. With the defence men so frequently off the ice Davidson had a harder task than usual, but at that he was hardly up to his best form. Adams showed improvement as compared with his previous appearance, but missed a couple of chances. He was taken with a cramp in the second half and retired, Fleming going off to even up. Ridpath mixed it up with the big fellows in his usual gallant way, but was too closely checked to get away.

Argonauts will play Eatons the final games on Wednesday and Saturday.

DATES FOR THE O. H. A. FINALS ARE ARRANGED

Only Argonauts and Eatons are now left in the senior series of the Ontario Hockey Association, and they will decide the championship by the majority of goals in two games to be played in the Mutual street rink next Wednesday and Saturday nights.

In the intermediate, because of the disqualification of the Chatham team after the discovery that they had won their group championship by fraud Watford is given a second-round chance, and will play a sudden death game with Preston on London ice tonight. The winners will have home-and-home games with Midland, and the sub-committee will decide at which place the first will be played.

A similar stage has been reached in the junior series, and to-night's game will bring the survivors down to two teams. Orillia goes to Preston with a lead of three goals, and if the northern lads can stay in front they will be in the finals with the Kingston Frontenacs, last year's winners. If Preston win, last year's situation will be duplicated, Kingston and Preston battling for the final honours.

The arrangement of games begins the final struggles on Wednesday, and continues them till next Tuesday, without interruption, and with no two on the same night. The remaining fixtures of the O.H.A. season are Senior—Finals.

Argonaut Rowing Club and Eaton Athletic Association, at Mutual street rink, Wednesday, March 1, and Saturday, March 4. Goals to count.

Intermediate—Semi-final.

Preston vs. Watford, at London, Monday, February 27. Sudden death.

Intermediate—Final.

Junior—Semi-final.

Orillia at Preston, Monday, February 27. Score in game at Orillia, 5 to 2 in favour of Orillia.

Junior-Finals.

Kingston Frontenacs vs. winners of Orillia-Preston, Thursday, March 2, and Monday, March 6.

Suffered for Years From Constipation and Sick Headache.

Headache seems habitual with many people; indeed, some are seldom, if ever, free from it, suffering continually, and wondering why they can get no relief. The most frequent of all are bilious or sick headaches, and are caused by some derangement of the stomach or bowels, or both.

Burdock Blood Bitters regulates the digestive and biliary organs, removes acidity of the stomach, improves digestion, regulates the constipated bowels, and promotes a perfect circulation of pure blood to all portions of the body.

Mrs. C. Meadows, Clarksburg, Ont., writes: "For years I was troubled with sick headache and dissiness, and was also constipated. I was advised to try Burdock Blood Bitters. I only took three bottles of the medicine, and now feel like a new person as I am completely cured. I can truthfully testify that B.B.B. is the best medicine I have ever used."

Burdock Blood Bitters, has, during the last 35 years, built up an unrivalled reputation as a cure for all troubles arising from a constipated condition of the bowels.

NOVA SCOTIA FARMS

Had Banner Year in 1910—Secretary of Agriculture's Estimates

Prof. M. Cumming, Secretary for Agriculture for Nova Scotia, has issued a crop report for the year 1910, which shows a banner year in production, spite of a signal failure in the apple crop, and a partial failure in potatoes. The report was compiled with the assistance of one hundred and eleven correspondents, every county in the province being represented.

MILITARY PUNISHMENTS

Code of Old was Very Stern—Some Strange Ways of Punishment

In times past the military code was no less stern and uncompromising than the civil. Sentence of death was readily decreed and as promptly executed. Where offences multiplied, and wholesale executions would have weakened the Army numerically, decimation—the slaughter of every tenth man—was the rule, or the troops gambled for their lives by casting dice upon a drumhead or drawing lots under the gallows-tree.

Lesser penalties, not capital, but physical, and causing pain with permanent degradation, were maiming, branding the cheek or forehead, boring the tongue, or cutting the nose and ears. These last-named were retained upon the military statute book until the reign of Queen Anne. The "trapado" was a fiendish device by which a delinquent was hoisted on high by a rope fastened to his arms, and then dropped down by a sudden jerk that often dislocated his shoulders. Hanging by the thumbs, sometimes called "picketing," was also practised; while the body was raised to such a height and its whole weight rested on on toe, and that again on a sharp-pointed spike.

To "ride the wooden horse" was to be mounted on a razor-edge, with weights fastened to the extremities.

Running the gauntlet, or "Sante lope," was as old as the Cromwellian army, and it is thus described in an Army order about 1649: The culprits (who had been guilty of blasphemy as well as deer-stealing) were to be "stripped naked from the waist upward, and a lane made by half the Lord General's regiment of foot and half Colonel Pride's, with every man a cudgel in his hand. They were to be run through in this posture, so that every soldier might have a stroke at their naked backs, breasts, or arms wherever it might alight."

FAMOUS MARYS OF FICTION'S PAGE

Always a Favorite Name With Novelists, Poets and Playwriters—In Romance Also

One of the gifts that the Queen will treasure most is the one that will be presented to her by the Marys of the Empire at the coronation of King George and herself. It is proposed that every Mary, Marion, and others with similar names shall contribute a small sum towards this gift.

Mary has always been a favorite name with novelists, poets, and playwriters. From "Mary, Mary, quite contrary," of our nursery days to the "Merely Mary Ann" of Israel Zangwill, the name will be found scattered freely over the pages of romance. The most famous novelist of all, Charles Dickens, whose centenary is celebrated this year, uses Mary in one form or another dozens of times. There are in his novels over a score of Marys pure and simple, to say nothing of Marthas, Mollys, and other versions of the name. Most of his Marys are, however, humble characters. There is Mary Anne, Dora's servant in "David Copperfield," for example, and another Mary Anne was the maid of the clerk Wemmick in "Great Expectations." In the "Pickwick Papers" there are no fewer than five Marys. One was a servant at the Manor Farm another the wife of the Marshalsea prisoner, two were maids, one in a pot shop and one to Nupkins, and the last was a barmaid at the Peacock.

Not all the Marys of fiction are, however, placed in humble positions. Lady Mary Carlisle is the most important woman character in that delightful play and book, "Monsieur Beaucaire." The author of "Peter Pan" gives his first place in his novel "When a Man's Single," as Mary Abinger, the charming daughter of a fiery colonel. And did not the famous dramatist immortalize her name in that best-known of all phrases and titles "Little Mary"? In his "Little White Bird," too, Mary is the name of the pretty young governess who has such a great influence on the life of the supposed teller of the story.

In the late Count Tolstoi's "Resurrection" the Princess Mary Kortchagin was the good woman whom Prince Nehidu Nehidudoff expected to marry. Many well-known foreign novelists have been fond of this essentially English name. In Maarten Maarten's "Some Women I Have Known," for instance, Mary Bates is the good-natured, loyal daughter whose dearest "aspiration was to possess a Sunday class of her very own."

First Lady:—"How very happy the bridegroom looks! Really, it is pleasant to see a young man looking so joyful."
Second Lady:—"Hush! That's not the bridegroom; that's a gentleman the bride jilted six months ago."

BRITISH AIRSHIP HAS EIGHT TANKS

Will Have a Storage Capacity of 2,000 Gallons of Petrol—Built for Long Voyages

Some additional particulars from a reliable source are to hand respecting the British naval airship now under construction at Barrow. The envelope, constructed of a silk similar in character to that used in the latest Zeppelins, is divided into seven sections. Its length is given as 510 feet, its diameter is 48 feet, and its gas capacity 706,336 cubic feet. To each of the two sets of eight-cylinder Wolseley engines—each engine being rated at about 200 horse-power—there are attached eight sheet-metal tanks. Each tank has a storage capacity for 2,000 gallons of petrol, so that the total storage capacity of the tanks when full is 32,000 gallons. The tanks are welded together in oil-tight sections. Consequently accident or injury to any section would involve the loss only of a minute fraction of the supply and would not destroy the buoyancy of the airship. In consequence of these features of her equipment the airship is fitted with some 300 yards of aluminum piping. Her lifting capacity is estimated at 21 tons, as against 16½ tons, the lifting capacity of the Zeppelin VIII., and her computed speed is 45 miles an hour, obtained from the three propellers, designed to run at 4,500 revolutions per minute. In order to minimize the weight, the framework has been constructed of the new alloy of aluminum known as "durallium," which is stated to be both lighter and stronger than the pure aluminum used in the construction of the German airships. From these particulars it is evident that the new airship is designed to undertake long voyages and to maintain efficiency even if struck during an attack. As the tests to which all parts are being subjected are very thorough, it is not likely that the ship will be ready for her trial flight before May next.

MORMONS IN ENGLAND

Liverpool is Very Much Disturbed Just Now Over Their Activity in that City

At the present time Liverpool is very much exercised at the activity of the Mormons in that city. It may not be generally known that the Mormons have been established in England for the past eighty years or so, and that they maintain a regular staff of missioners there. During that time they are said to have converted some 125,000 Britons to the faith. Their headquarters in London are at Tottenham, where they acquired the Markfield Hotel some three years ago. There are pretty well a thousand of the sect in London alone. There are about forty missionaries in London, working by house-to-house visitation, and as many as fifteen converts have been baptized at one time. These baptisms have taken place in different towns, the public baths usually being called into use. House-to-house visits are made, tracts being left at first, and afterwards interviews are solicited. A year or two ago it was announced that 27,856 of these calls were made in six months.

The gentlemen who gave these figures also stated that there were 200 tract distributors in the United Kingdom, who disposed of 2,000,000 leaflets in the twelve months, and that one steamship company received $60,000 in fares every year, thanks to the journeys of Mormon missionaries and converts. The Elders at Utah and other places call for volunteers to work in God's Vineyard, and young men respond to the "call," maintaining themselves during their travels on their own private means.

THE MEUX MUMMY

Superstitious People Are Much Concerned Over the Recent Gift to the British Museum

Believers in the supernatural are rather concerned in their minds at the moment regarding a mummy which is included in the Assyrian and Egyptian antiquities bequeathed to the British Museum by Lady Meux. The mummy is that of Neo-Amsu, who died about 2,250 years ago, but does not seem to be able to rest comfortably unless he is doing somebody a bad turn. Neo first came into the possession of the late Mr. Walter Ingram, who bought it while serving in one of the Nile Campaigns.

Owing to a misunderstanding, Mr Ingram did not pay the price the dealer expected, and in his wrath he heaped an ancient curse on Mr. Ingram's head. And when the mummy came home, and Mr. Ingram presented it to Lady Meux, who was then getting her collection together, certain hieroglyphics were found to read thus:—

"If any person of any foreign country, whether he be black man, or Ethiopian, or Syrian, carry away this writing, or it be stolen by a thief, then whosoever does this, no offering shall be presented to their souls, they shall never enjoy a draught of cool water, they shall never more breathe the air, no son and no daughter shall arise from their seed, their name shall be remembered no longer upon earth, and most assuredly they shall never see the beams of the Disc" (the Sun God).

Curiously enough, two years later Mr. Ingram was killed while elephant shooting in Somaliland, while in 1900 Sir Henry Meux died childless, and his baronetcy became extinct, another clause of the curse therefore being fulfilled. And now some people are wondering what is going to happen to the Directors of the British Museum if they accept the bequest.

A Newspaper Serial

It Was Written For One Purpose, But Accomplished Two Purposes

By F. A. MITCHEL

Copyright, 1911, by American Press Association.

"What we want," said the managing editor, "in our serials is plot. We must have our characters or some one of them at the end of an installment hanging over a precipice a thousand feet deep, to be rescued in the next, tumbled overboard in midocean, left to drown, rescued again, etc. And you needn't bring it all out happily in the end. Kill the hero if you like. There's Tess of the D'Urbervilles, who was strung up at the end of the story, and the whole world read it and wept over it. Big sales, large profits."

"You want it true to life, don't you?"

"Truth is stranger than fiction. If you'll strike a plot that every one says couldn't possibly have happened you'll get a selling story. The critics will call it 'rot,' but the people will want to read it. Try to do something startling. My object is to put the paper on its feet. Many a newspaper has been made by an ingenious serial."

I had no confidence in the paper's being established by any serial I could write, however improbable I should make it, and I told Heaton so, but he told me to get out and do as he had instructed. He had no more time to talk about the matter. "You know what we want," he said; "go and do it."

I puzzled for a considerable time over a plot, but could invent nothing original. Then it occurred to me that there is nothing original except in real incidents that occur from time to time, and even these repeat themselves. After all, the novel Heaton had quoted had nothing startling in the plot. It was the writing of it and the tragedy at the end. I determined to be content with a commonplace plan and rely on hanging somebody to do the rest. I would drag in all the horrid details of an execution, and I hoped in this way to serve the managing editor's purpose to a limited extent. In order to make the story more harrowing I determined that the man who dangled at the end of a rope should be the innocent victim of circumstances.

Haycroft was my hero, Gwendolin Montelaverius my heroine. They loved. Haycroft was a distant connection to a millionaire who was a bachelor, and, since Haycroft was the only child of several generations of older children descending from the millionaire's only brother (or sister, for that matter), in case the millionaire died without will Haycroft would inherit all his property. Pitblado, the villian of the story, also loves Gwendolin, and I must invent some plan for him to get Haycroft out of the way. It was very easy for me to kill the rich man under suspicious circumstances—at least I had Pitblado manufacture the circumstances—which went to show that Haycroft had poisoned the old gentleman to get his money. The ingenuity required was to weave a lot of circumstances that would convict Haycroft and yet he must be innocent.

Nothing very original about that, you say. Well, if there is any originality in the matter at all I didn't supply it. Fate lays all the plots for stories, and all we scribblers do is to write them up. Nevertheless, though I didn't know it, I was doing the biggest job of my life. And do you know while I thought I was writing a blood and thunder love tragedy I was turning bitterness and gall in a real household into a great happiness.

The story was coming out, the installments appearing once a week. I had convicted the hero, and he was waiting the result of an appeal which I intended to have denied by a merciless judge. I was writing the description of the hanging and intended as soon as it was over to drive the heroine insane and conclude with her shrieks dying away gradually as doors were closing behind her in a madhouse. The issue of the paper had appeared containing an explanation of that chain of circumstances which had convicted the murderer. Though they were not to save him, I felt bound to show my skill in finding a key to them which if brought to light would save the victim. But, relying as I did on a double tragedy at the end, I proposed to bring out the key when it was too late to do any good. You see, I didn't intend to spoil the tragic effect by being chicken hearted, especially as the people involved were merely creatures of my own brain. Besides, I remembered the instructions of the managing editor, and I was to attract the attention of the reading public, which increases the circulation of the paper and brings in the advertisements, the ultimate object of the whole thing.

About a week after the appearance of the issue containing the explanation of the incidents that had proved Haycroft guilty, while I was engaged writing the removal of Gwendolin to a madhouse, a servant knocked at my door to say that a man was downstairs who wished to see me.

"Get out of here," I cried, "and tell the man to get out too! I'm doing work that must not be interrupted."

The maid went away and returned to say that she thought the man was having a fit. It required something of the sort to cause me to break off from my work, and, throwing down my pen, I hastened away. The man had buried his face in the lounge pillows and was giving way to violent spasmodic contortions. Hearing me enter, he arose and faced me. I never saw greater agony on any face. He looked from me to the maid and pointed to the door. I told her to leave us and closed the door behind her. Then I turned to my visitor.

"How did you get on to it?" he asked, his eyes starting out of his head.

"Get on to what?"

"My making up that prescription wrong."

"What prescription?"

"That killed the man in your story."

"Killed the man in my story!" I repeated, my eyes bulging with astonishment. I had been writing of an imaginary lunatic, and my first impression was that I had a real one before me.

"You called him Chesterton."

"Well?"

"Oh, my God! He was Middleton. You might as well have given the real name as one so like it."

I stood staring at the man for awhile, then said to him:

"My friend, you must pardon me for excusing myself, but I have no time to devote to cranks. I am putting the finishing touches to the serial you speak of, and the copy must be ready this afternoon. The hero has been executed, the girl who loved him has gone mad, and"—

I didn't finish the sentence, for the fellow fell in a fit true enough. I picked him up and laid him on the lounge. As soon as he quieted down a bit he started up and began to talk in a hoarse whisper just as people on the dramatic stage do when they have something harrowing to communicate.

"I'm a drug clerk. One day a prescription came in and I put it up. Hours after it had gone out I found a small vial of deadly poison standing on the board where I had mixed the medicine. I had taken it up by mistake and put enough to kill any one into the mixture. I darted out to stop the patient from taking it. A boy rushed past me selling newspapers and crying, 'Sudden death of Banker Middleton!' That was the name given when the medicine was called for.

"I went back to the store, told my employer that my mother was dying and left town within an hour. My secret has preyed on me, but I never dreamed it would involve another life."

The man had given the key to the circumstances that had convicted an innocent man as I had concocted it for my novel. I saw at once that it was fate and not I who had been writing a detective story, the parts of which fate had evolved in its way, not mine.

In a distant town the drug clerk had picked up a copy of our paper containing that installment of my story which gave my concocted key, it being identical with his own act. Later his eye met a newspaper item that the man who had poisoned Middleton for his money would be executed in three weeks. He had come to me as the author of the story, supposing that I had his secret.

In this sequel to the product of my brain I saw what the story itself would not produce. I am a newspaper man, and my newspaper instincts came to the front.

"You come with me," I said. "Put yourself in the hands of our paper, and we'll give you the best defense for your fatal mistake one can secure for you."

He assented, and, taking him to the office, I told the story to Heaton.

"Shake!" he said, thrusting out his hand and grasping mine in an iron grip. "The paper's made!"

Then I called the drug clerk in and introduced him to the managing editor. Heaton gave him what money he wanted and told him to go where he liked—leaving his address, of course—and keep his mouth shut. The next morning out came scare heads announcing that a remarkable combination detective-fiction exploit had led to the discovery that George Barton, the man who had been convicted of the murder of Banker Middleton, was innocent. This set everybody agog for the next issue.

In the morning we announced that the paper had produced a drug clerk whose mistake had caused the poisoning of Middleton. A hint was thrown out that an author-detective who wrote exclusively for the paper had built a theory of his own as to the cause of Middleton's death and had written the story with the intent of bringing out the real culprit.

And so it came about that an innocent man was saved from a hanging because people like to read about such tragedies and because I was instructed to hang an imaginary character. But, after all, did it not come about on the principal of an ad.?

We got the drug clerk off with light punishment and had Barton up in our editorial rooms, where I was introduced to him as the man who had saved him from a felon's death. He asked me if I had really written the story on the theory that Middleton had been poisoned by the mistake of a drug clerk. The look of noncommittal wisdom I put on was a stroke of genius. It claimed nothing for me, but helped the paper.

There was another coincidence which I have left to the last, for it is the touching part. Barton was engaged to a very lovely girl. She had stood by him during his trial, confident in his innocence. Barton asked me to go to see her, and I did so. The interview was very affecting. She told me that if her fiance had been executed she believed she would have gone mad, as did the heroine of my story. Then I realised that better things had been accomplished by my serial than the building up of a newspaper.

Luxurious Barracks.

The barracks which have been recently erected at Windsor, England, at a cost of $180,000 are on a luxurious scale. In addition to a separate sleeping cubicle for each man, there are dining halls, billiard rooms, recreation rooms, libraries, and studies, as well as a theatre. In the lavatories hot and cold water is provided for washing, and there are separate rooms adjoining for shaving purposes. There are also baths, as well as shower and foot baths.

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

"NEITHER Theodora nor Angelina felt as if they could bind themselves to any preconceived form of woords and accordingly uttered such as the Lord gave them at the moment."

I ran across that delicious description of a Quaker wedding in an old letter the other day, and as I read it, I wondered, just wondered what Theodora and Angelina who balked so vigorously at anything so formal as a "preconceived form of words" have thought about a modern fashionable wedding.

And if they would have been aghast at the agonizing conventionality and cutand-dried formality of that performance—yes, that's quite the proper word for the average fashionable wedding—what on earth would they have thought at that most humorous and yet most painful of all modern conventionalities—the wedding rehearsal.

It almost seems to me as if wedding rehearsals ought to be forbidden by the church, they are such a desecration of the solemn ceremony.

"But then suppose things didn't go right before all those people," I can hear some fashionable bride protesting.

What then—is it a vaudeville show for society with yourself and the groom as headliners that you are getting up, or is it that you are inviting your friends to help you solemnize a sacred and wonderful contract?

If it's the vaudeville, Miss Fashionable Bride—here's a suggestion for you. Don't be stingy but have it for charity and charge an entrance fee. That would make a great sensation. Just think of all the people who would come. You'd surely have enough to give a big sum to charity and to defray all expenses of the most handsomely trimmed church of the season besides.

I heard of a couple the other day who weren't really married on their wedding day at all. For at the re hearsal the minister forgot and said the final, "I do pronounce thee man and wife," which makes the ceremony binding. So on their wedding day they were really already married and merely went through the form. They tried to keep the story secret, but it leaked out and they were laughed at almost as much as they deserved.

The next thing you know we will be rehearsing funerals because "it would be so terrible to make a mistake before all those people, you know."

If I were a clergyman I think I should absolutely refuse to desecrate the wedding ceremony by a formal rehearsal of it.

If the bride and groom want to know where to make the proper responses it is surely enough for them to read the service over in their prayer books.

Shall my wedding be a vaudeville show? is a question which is up to every bride and groom to answer.

By inviting a huge concourse of people who come in the same spirit in which they would go to any other "show"—by rehearsing the performance—by surrounding themselves with a train of bridesmaids and ushers and maids and matrons of honour and flower girls and what not, as elaborately gotten up as the chorus of a modern comic opera, they answer in the affirmative.

By refusing to rehearse the ceremony and by inviting only those people who love them and whom they love, to see them made man and wife, and by trimming down this unruly growth of fuss and feathers which has come to obscure the true beauty of the marriage ceremony, they may answer in the negative.

HOUSE OF COMMONS DISCUSSED SENATE

Sir Wilfrid Wants Fair Consideration of the Problem---M. T. McLean, of South Huron, Moves for an Elective Senate but the Premier Tells Him He Favours a Half Elected Body.

Ottawa, Feb. 28.—Reform the Senate, the merits of the Quebec bridge plans and the announcement by the Minister of Labor that the "shoe combine" would be investigated under the provisions of the act of last session, and the resolution of Major Beattie to prevent Americans from flaunting their flag in public places in Canada without, or in an in an inferior position to the Union Jack, furnished the chief bill of fare of the House of Commons yesterday.

The motion of M. Y. McLean (South Huron) to make the Senate elective was dropped, when Sir Wilfrid Laurier announced his willingness to consider with the Opposition a plan whereby the Legislatures might elect a proportion of the members of the Upper House.

The discussion on the Quebec bridge brought out the opinion from the Minister of Railways that the "Scientific American's" criticisms were not worth considering. It was not so much of an authority.

The shoe combine investigation will be the first under the new act.

The flag resolution of Major Beattie was rejected because of technical flaws by a majority of 40.

A debate on the desirability of making the Senate an elective body was initiated by M. Y. McLean (S. Huron), who moved "That in the opinion of the House the Dominion Senate as at present constituted is not in accordance with the representative institutions of this country, and the Government should take the necessary proceedings to have the Senate made representative of and directly responsible to the people."

Mr. McLean did not think it would be a wise thing to abolish the Senate, as suggested by E. A. Lancaster, because it was a legacy left by the fathers of Confederation. It was designed to protect the minorities of the smaller provinces.

The existing body, he said, consisted of three classes: (1) Those who valued their seats as a respectable refuge, where they may spend their declining years at the expense of the country. (2) Those who valued them for social position and for the facility afforded for advancing their personal and business schemes; and (3) those who gave freely of their time and long experience for the benefit of the country.

An elective Senate, said Mr. McLean, would result in the abolition of the first two classes.

Mr. McLean went on to say that Canada should be divided into Senatorial divisions, each division covering several Commons' electoral constituencies. The Senators should be elected for a period of seven or ten years.

The electoral qualifications, he thought, should differ somewhat from that pertaining to the Commons. Electors should have a small property qualification, and should be compelled to go to the poll and deposit a ballot.

Mr. McLean had also a proposal to make in regard to the veto power of the Upper House, and it was that any bill passed on three successive occasions by the Commons should become law, no matter what the Upper House might think about it.

In closing the discussion Sir Wilfrid Laurier said that Mr. Lennox would no doubt be satisfied if he were to appoint nothing but Conservatives to the Upper House.

The Premier remarked that Mr. McLean's motion had one advantage over those which had preceded it, in plan of reform. He did not think, however, that a proposal for an elective system would meet with the approval either of the House or the country. Upper and Lower Canada had not found the elective system satisfactory.

In view of the experience of the United States, Sir Wilfrid did not think it would be wise to have the members of the Senate all elected by the Legislatures, but he said he was prepared to consider with the Opposition a plan whereby the Legislatures would be given the right to elect a proportion of the members of the second chamber. A reform of the Senate along these lines, he thought, would be more in keeping with our constitution than the plan proposed by the mover of the resolution.

Mr. McLean then withdrew his motion.

Arthur Meighen (Portage la Prairie) moved for a return including all documents and papers and information of every kind available touching on the methods and operations of trusts an combines in the United States.

He expressed the view that if these mergers were not checked they would become more powerful than Parliament.

Hon. Mackenzie King said that the Government had decided to appoint a special solicitor to assist complaining parties who seek to take action under the Combines Investigation Act. Much of the information was hard to get at. He had received word that the first order for an inquiry under the Combines' Act had been granted by Justice Cannon at Quebec for the investigation of the United Shoe Machine Co., an off-shoot of the American company of the same name. The enquiry would be proceeded with at once.

INDUSTRIAL TRAINING

Dr. Pyne Introduces a Measure Into the Legislature—Under Local Commission—Other Features

YESTERDAY'S SESSION

Toronto, Feb. 28.—Monday records were broken at the Ontario Legislature yesterday, both by the length of the sitting and mass of public business cleared off the order paper. The sitting was equally notable for the important nature and popular interest of most of the measures under discussion. The Government implemented the promise made in the speech from the throne by introducing a series of proposals for the extension of industrial education, and Sir James Whitney spoke out with characteristic frankness in reference to amateur law reformers who desire the enactment of revolutionary changes in the general law as it now exists.

Hon. Dr. Pyne, Minister of Education, presented the Government's plan for the extension of industrial training. The bill authorizes any urban school board to establish general industrial schools, special industrial and technical high schools, co-operative and industrial schools, schools for instruction in fine and applied arts, industrial and technical and evening art schools. The regulations for the schools are to be provided by the Department of Education in the same way as in the case of a high school, and, subject to those regulations, the Minister is to apportion all sums of money appropriated by the Legislature for the establishment and maintenance of such schools. The high school grant at present is apportioned according to the number of pupils, the equipment, and the qualifications of the teachers.

The classification of industrial schools follows the recommendations of Dr. Sneath. General industrial schools are those in which, to the regular course, there are added special classes calculated to prepare pupils for industrial life. Special industrial schools are those providing instructions in theoretical and practical work of particular trades carried on in the district where the school is situated. Co-operative schools are those in which an apprenticeship system is combined with the school course.

It is provided in the bill that every technical school, whether at present in operation or established hereafter, is to be under the management of a committee of twelve, six from the Board of Education, three persons not members of that board who are engaged as employes in manufacturing or other industries carried on in the district, and three employers of labor. This is to be known as the advisory industrial committee.

Rev. Father McCabe of Maidstone defended Bishop Fallon from the attacks of the French-Canadian section of the Church.

Charles Dupont and Capt. Moran of Marine City plan to build a $20,000 hotel at Walkerburg, on the site of the old Arthur House.

The coroners jury investigating the death of Robert Townsend of Gobles, the sectionman who was killed near Eastwood on Thursday, Feb. 23, decided that blame is not attached to anyone.

The famous harem skirt has broken loose in Montreal. The Hart Manufacturing Co. yesterday morning showed a line of samples of the much-discussed garment. One skirt has been purchased by a lady already.

Alfred Wake, Winnipeg, Alfred Constable and E. T. Nevison, three of the men accused of stealing grain from the Empire elevator at Fort William, were yesterday morning sentenced to five years each at Stony Mountain.

Debt of N.T.R.

Ottawa, Feb. 28.—A return placed on the table of the Commons on Saturday, showed that up to December 31 last, a total of $49,563,749 has been spent on the National Transcontinental Railway construction. It is estimated that it will take $55,705,899 more to complete the road between Winnipeg and Moncton. The total mileage of track laid is 1,226.

Sir Alphonse Pelletier Better.

Atlantic City, N.J., Feb. 28.—Dr. Walter P. Conway, late yesterday afternoon, pronounced Sir Alphonse Pelletier, Lieutenant-Governor of Quebec, out of danger. The aged statesman is improving steadily. Capt. Victor Pelletier, his aide-de-camp, will take Sir Alphonse home next week.

IMPORTING ALIENS?

G. N. W. Telegraphers Allege Breach of the Law.

Toronto, Feb. 28.—Local officials of the Commercial Telegraphers' Union are up in arms against the Great North Western Telegraph Co. for alleged infringement of the alien labor law, and a thorough investigation of the methods employed by the company in importing men from the United States to replace those who were dismissed will, it is believed, be demanded by the Toronto men.

Two weeks ago 25 employes of the G. N. W. were served with notices of dismissal for taking part in organizing for higher wages, and of these six Toronto men and five Montreal men will leave the company's employ to-day. Twelve of the Montreal men were given two weeks' notice, but a week ago yesterday seven were reinstated.

To fill the vacancies thus created six men, it is alleged, have been brought over from Detroit and Buffalo to take the places of the Toronto men, and five from New York and Boston, to replace those dismissed in Montreal. The Commercial Telegraphers' Union of America, who have been championing the rights of the men, suspected that the G. N. W. were engaging these men in the States, and in so doing were violating the alien labor law.

A local official of the union complained to the superintendent of immigration at Ottawa, and drew attention to the fact that a telegrapher had been engaged in Detroit for employment in Toronto, to take the place of an employe dismissed by the Great North Western. The man's name was given to the Department with the additional information that he had been instructed to call at the G. N. W. office in Windsor for his transportation to Toronto.

"Ottawa, Feb. 24, 1911.

"Sir,—I beg to acknowledge the receipt due course of your letter of the 21st inst. and to say in reply that the enforcement of the provisions of the alien labor law is left entirely to the local courts and aggrieved parties, and under the circumstances stated in your letter, I think it would be well for you to seek legal advice.

"I regret that I am unable to assist you in the matter.

"Your obedient servant,

"For superintendant of immigration."

The committee representing the men over the entire system will reassemble to-day, when it is expected the matter of taking action will be decided upon.

Fire In Montreal.

Montreal, Feb. 28.—Fifteen thousand beds of various sizes, styles and make, representing a value of approximately $150,000, were destroyed by fire in the four-storey warehouse of the Ives Modern Bedstead Co., 117 Queen street, yesterday afternoon. The warehouse is completely gutted, the fire, which originated in the second storey, ravaging it clear to the roof. The ground floor was occupied by the offices of the concern, while the three floors above were given entirely to the storage of manufactured beds.

The fire was a fierce one, due to the fact that the bedsteads in storage were covered with many wrappings of paper and in some instances with light wooden slats intended for protection in shipping.

Within thirty minutes after the first alarm there were 27 individual streams at work and one water tower. The force for these was supplied by seven steamers of the highest power, some of which can eject 1,400 gallons a minute.

Two firemen were injured during the fire. One came in contact with a live wire while at work on a ladder, and was thrown to the ground. He was attended to by the surgeons of Notre Dame Hospital. Another, A. Gauthier, had his hand cut and was also patched up by the surgeons of Notre Dame. There were several men who received minor cuts.

"Call a Halt."

Washington, Feb. 28.—That the President and Congress shall "call a halt and take hands off" in the matter of the Mexican Revolution is the "demand" of certain residents of San Antonio, Texas. The demand reached the Senate yesterday in a petition bearing fifty signatures. The document was addressed to "the President of the United States Senate and to the Speaker of the House of Representatives," and said in part: "There is not an honest, liberty-loving man knowing the cause of this revolution but who is heart and soul in sympathy with those revolutionists; we therefore demand that you call a halt and take hands off of same, and let old despot Diaz and the revolutionists fight it out."

Cut His Baby's Throat.

Cleveland, O., Feb. 28.—Following a quarrel with his wife yesterday afternoon, Anton Senecik killed his baby by cutting its throat with his razor. He then attacked his wife, and after seriously wounding her, he cut his own throat, inflicting a probably fatal wound. The neighbors became aware of the tragedy when they saw Mrs. Senecik run into the street streaming with blood and shrieking "My baby, my baby."

Bold Bank Robbery.

Clover, Va., Feb. 28.—Five armed men rode into town before daylight yesterday, blew open the safe of the Bank of Clover and escaped with $4,000 in cash. Residents aroused by the explosion, rushed into the streets, only to be met with a fusilade of shots from the revolvers of two of the men who stood guard outside the bank. No one was wounded.

An Athenian Invitation.

Brockville, Feb. 28.—The Presbyterian congregation of Athens has extended a call to Rev. W. W. Montgomery of Scombra, in the Barnia Presbytery. The matter will be dealt with by the Brockville Presbytery at a meeting to be held here shortly.

Would Give Shorter Route.

Moncton, Feb. 28.—At a representative meeting of the Sackville, N.B., Board of Trade last Friday evening it was unanimously decided to favor the absorption of the New Brunswick and P.E.I. Railway by the Intercolonial. This branch road runs from Sackville to Cape Tormentine and is a good feeder for the Government road.

It is urged that a shortened service to Prince Edward Island could be maintained via Cape Tormentine, as the distance across the straits is only from seven to nine miles at this point. The Government steamers, it is claimed, would easily keep this route open in the winter.

Fielding Hung In Effigy.

Montreal, Feb. 28.—A effigy of Hon. W. S. Fielding, Minister of Finance, hanging from some electric wires 25 feet above the ground, was the spectacle which greeted a number of Grand Trunk employes at the Point St. Charles yards, as they passed the corner of Knox and Hibernia streets, early yesterday morning on their way to work.

The effigy was draped in the Stars and Stripes, upon which was crudely painted in big black letters the name of the Finance Minister. The "body" was not "cut down" until 10 o'clock.

Team to Go Early.

Ottawa, Feb. 28.—The Canadian Bisley team will arrive in England in time for the coronation. It was decided at the meeting of the D. R. A. council yesterday afternoon that arrangements would be made to give the riflemen a chance to see this great ceremony. Since this takes place on June 22, the team will sail about the 15th of that month for Montreal. The Bisley matches start early in July.

May Reduce Charge.

Brantford, Feb. 28.—Gistoni Diarado, the Italian charged with "intent to murder" in connection with the stabbing affair in which Mike Gerrard, a Hungarian, was stabbed in the abdomen, was yesterday committed for trial in Police Court. It is likely that the charge will be reduced to one of felonious wounding, in which case the prisoner will come before Judge Hardy.

This is said of the woman whose blood is rich and red and whose complexion has the natural healthful glow. You can restore the healthful colour of the skin by using Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Food, because it actually forms new, red blood. The form is rounded out by firm, healthy flesh, serious and torturing kidney and bladder trouble by the use of this great medicine.

Appreciation
1910 was a banner year with us, but 1911 carries even greater promise, because we have thousands of patients in this city and vicinity who are wearing glasses prescribed by us, many of whom could not be fitted elsewhere, and we know that they will not lose an opportunity of speaking a good word for us.
We take this occasion to acknowledge our indebtedness to our friends and patrons, our appreciation of their good will and faith in us, which have helped to make our success so great. We need not disguise the fact that we believe that we have deserved well of you. That if you have had confidence in us and have bestowed upon us your patronage it is because we have done something to warrant it. We have done "the best we could" and we purpose to keep right on doing so.
We are deeply grateful to our friends and customers for their loyalty. We ask for and hope to merit a continuance of the same.

AFTER 7 YEARS SUFFERING

I Was Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Waurika, Okla. —"I had female troubles for seven years, was all run down, and so nervous I could not do anything. The doctors treated me for different things but did me no good. I got so bad that I could not sleep day or night. While in this condition I read of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and began its use and wrote to Mrs. Pinkham for advice. In a short time I had gained my average weight and am now strong and well." —Mrs. SALLIE STEVENS, R. F. D. No. 3, Box 31, Waurika, Okla.

Another Grateful Woman

London, Ont.—I feel as if I could not tell others enough about the good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I was so weak and tired that I could not rest nights. A friend recommended your Compound and I soon gained health and strength and could not wish to sleep better. I know other women who have taken it for the same purpose and they join me in praising it.—Mrs. Wm. A. Buffy, 905 Dame St., London, Ont.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has surely cured many cases of female ills, such as inflammation, ulceration, displacements, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, and nervous prostration.

CONVICTS HAUNT HOUSE

A Ghost Story From an Australian Township

Just a hundred years ago, outside one small Australian township, now the capital of one of the States, a clearing had been made, and the work of building a large residence was in hand. The Government official in charge of the convicts who were employed to do the work, was most inhuman in his treatment of his laborers. Hampered as they were by their heavy chains, which bound one to another, they might work as hard as they could, but they never satisfied him.

He was a sullen, cruel tyrant, and on the slightest excuse, and sometimes absolutely without provocation, he he would order the convicts to chain one of their fellow-prisoners to a tree, and then compel them to watch while he thrashed the helpless man with a leather-thonged whip. Fatigue alone would stop the inhuman brute from wielding the lash.

At last the house was finished, and was tenanted for the first time. But these occupants soon left, and no one since has remained for long; for the anguished cries of the tortured men and the sounds of their clanking chains haunt the house, sounding out in the stillness of the night at irregular periods, and proving more than a match for the most strong-minded man or woman. To-day that great house stands desolate, haunted by the restless spirits of those men who were tortured in the building of it.

BEDROOM ON FIRE

Boarder Proceeded to Extinguish It With Cups of Water

His great hobby was lying in bed. For weeks together he would never rise from his downy nest. One day, however, his landlady was surprised to see him—garbed in a heavy dressing-gown, with the collar turned up—walk slowly into the dining-room and, in a half-dazed, half-sleepy fashion, fill a glass with water and carry it carefully upstairs.

Five minutes later he returned again and repeated the performance. Still the landlady made no comment, for, when engaging his rooms he had requested that he should not be spoken to, because the noise of the human voice was apt to disturb the train of his thoughts. However, when, a few minutes later, he returned once more she felt constrained to ask him why he was indulging in this sudden fit of energy, for, like the good soul she was, she feared that he might be ill—and might die, in which case she would lose a good-paying lodger. Landladies are always disinterested.

"What is the matter, sir? You're not ill, I hope?" she asked, as, with eyes half-closed, and walking as slowly as the chief mourner at a funeral, he filled the glass for the third time and turned to leave the room.

"No!"—and he yawned sleepily. "No, I'm not ill; but my bedroom is on fire! That's all."

NOTHING TO DO WITH IT

"Weel, John, how are you the day?" said a minister to one of his parishioners on meeting him on the road.

"Gey weel, sir; gey weel," replied John cautiously; "gin it wasna for the rheumatism in ma richt leg."

"Ah, well, John, be thankful, for there is no mistake you are getting old like the rest of us, and old age, you know, doesn't come alone."

"Auld age, sir," returned John, "I won'er to hear ye. Auld age has nae thing to do wi't. Here's my ither leg, just as auld, an' it's quite sound an' supple yet."

Nerves Are Exhausted

And Nervous Prostration or Paralysis Are Creeping Steadily Upon You

DR. CHASE'S NERVE FOOD

You hear of people suddenly falling victims of nervous prostration or some forms of paralysis. But when you get all the facts of the case you find that they have had months or years of warning.

They haven't slept well. There has been frequent attacks of nervous headache. Digestion has failed. They have been irritable, easily worried and excited and have found memory and concentration failing.

Had they but known that these symptoms tell of exhausted nerves or had they realized their danger they would have restored the feeble, wasted nerve by use of such treatment as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

This great restorative treatment cures by forming new, rich blood and by rebuilding the wasted nerve cells. No medicine is more certain to prove beneficial, for each dose adds to the system a certain amount of rich, red blood.

Nervous diseases come on slowly and can only be overcome by patient and persistent treatment. Prevention is always better than cure, and for this reason you should endeavour to keep the system at high water mark by using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food at the first sign of trouble. 50 cents a box, 6 boxes for $2.50, at all dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

THE MILLIONS OF LONDON

Will be Counted—Preparation for the Great Census Week

To count London's millions for the purpose of sorting them out into groups of males and females, fathers, mothers, children, deaf, dumb, blind, mad, or otherwise, on Sunday, April 2, 1911, the large staff at the Census Office is working overtime.

Behind the Tate Gallery, in a temporary building of wood and iron, the officials sit at large tables gloating over Ordinance Survey maps, fixing the boundaries of registration districts, and sending out millions of blue-paper forms, by which the great numbering of the people will be made.

These schedules go to the registrars, who are enumerators in the various districts, and London, the wealthiest and most populous of all will have quite an army of officials pressed into the Civil Service for the Census week.

This is the first census of the twentieth century. The first English census was taken exactly 100 years ago. The growth of the population in a hundred years will be an interesting feature shown in the return.

When Thomas Potter, a son of the Archbishop of Canterbury, first proposed in Parliament that a "numbering of the people, of the marriages, births and deaths, and of the people receiving alms," should be taken the country became alarmed. One opponent of the bill (a Mr. Thornton, the member for York) said:

"I did not believe that there was any set of men, or indeed, any individual of the human species, so presumptuous or so abandoned as to make the proposal we have just heard - I hold this project to be totally submersive of the last remains of English liberty—

"Moreover, a registry of our people will acquaint our enemies abroad with our weakness."

Opposed generally, the bill was thrown out, and the proposal was not renewed until half a century later.

MAY ELECT WOMAN

French Academy of Science May Honor Discoverer of Radium

For the first time in history the French Academy of Science may elect a woman member. A seat is vacant, and some academicians are canvassing for Madame Curie as candidate. The choice would be, indeed, fair and appropriate, for it was jointly with his wife that the late Pierre Curie discovered radium, and the seat for which it is proposed to nominate her is precisely that which was held by him when his untimely death was caused by a street accident. But an ancient rule of the Academy of Science runs: "Forbidding the access of the hall of sittings to women," which would obviously have to be repealed. It has been at times applied to lady visitors, and it also bars lady members.

WORLD'S COALING RECORD

Three Notable Achievements by Prince Louis of Battenberg's Flagship

Admiral Prince Louis of Battenberg's flagship, H.M.S. Prince of Wales, of the Atlantic Fleet, has set up a world's record for fast warship coaling. She has taken on board at Dover 970 tons of coal in two hours thirty-six minutes. This is an average of 373.08 tons per hour, and is a magnificent achievement, seeing that the battleship coaled from a collier and not at a dockyard. H.M.S. Prince of Wales carries a Portsmouth crew, and the ship's success has caused great satisfaction at Portsmouth. This is the third time during her commission that the ship has set up a world's record. Her own first record she has twice beaten. The three records have been made in about two years. She took on board 329.8 tons per hour in August, 1908, and 366 tons in April of this year.

FUTURE OF THE UNIVERSITY

Dr. Wilhelm Ostwald Would Abolish Some Old Customs

One of the most popular professors of Berlin University, Dr. Wilhelm Ostwald, has been lecturing on the "Future of the University and the University of the Future." One at least of his proposals for the latter is likely to cost him some of his popularity.

Dr. Ostwald would be glad to see the old German customs abolished, especially that of meeting to drink beer. He would replace the beer sittings by "discussions and dissertations" on university concerns and topics of the day, though he would so far concede to the "won't go home till morning" spirit of such occasions by having the discussions and dissertations continue "till the grey of dawn."

The student of the songs of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, he says, no longer exists; the student of to-day must look for his ideals to the future, not to the past. Anyone who knows the German student can easily imagine the howl of indignation he is nightly giving vent to as he discusses and dissertates on the prospect of being thus robbed of his beer and the inroad on his cherished "academic freedom" it foreshadows.

Dr. Ostwald makes matters worse by condemning devotion to sports. "What should be aimed at," he declares, "is to develop the intellect, and particularly the will, not to train the members of the body for football."

DIVORCE TOO COSTLY

Giving evidence at the Divorce Commission in London, Dr. Adler, Chief Rabbi of the United Hebrew congregations of the British Empire, expressed the opinion that present-day facilities for divorce did not tend to raise the moral standard of the community. At the same time he thought that, in the best interests of Jews and Christians alike, the procedure for obtaining divorce should be made less costly than at present.

INSPECTOR DEW'S SUCCESSOR

Divisional Detective-Inspector Thomas Divall has been appointed to succeed Chief-Inspector Dew at Scotland Yard. Mr. Divall has been a member of the Metropolitan police for 26 years, and during that time has been concerned in many sensational and notorious cases. It is said that the rewards and commendations he has received in connection with such cases have hardly been equalled by any member of the force.

LORD JUSTICE TO RETIRE

Lord Justice Vaughan Williams, who has been away from his judicial duties for some days owing to illness, is credited with the intention of retiring from the English Bench, to which he was first appointed by Lord Halsbury in February, 1890, as a Judge of the then Queen's Bench Division. Seven years later the ex-Lord Chancellor, for whom Sir Roland Vaughan Williams, when a young man, did a good deal of "devilling," promoted him to the Court of Appeal, and for a considerable time he has, by virtue of being the senior Lord Justice, presided in one of the two Appellate Courts. In 1905 he was appointed Chairman of the Welsh Church Commission, the labors of which have only just been completed. Lord Justice Vaughan Williams could have taken his pension of $73,000 a year in February, 1905.

USED AS A TOY

A genuine Stradivarius has just been picked up in the streets of Strassburg under singular circumstances. A violinist was passing through one of the public squares in the town when he saw a boy dragging behind him a violin filled with sand. When the sand escaped from the interior of the violin the boy filled it afresh. The violinist's curiosity was aroused. He took up the instrument, and recognized it as a Stradivarius. He paid $2 to the boy's mother for the violin, the woman apologizing for asking so much

AN IMPECUNIOUS COUNT

Subterfuges of Dr. Castellane to Obtain Money

Some amusing stories are being related in regard to the subterfuges adopted by the always impecunious Count Boni De Castellane, former husband of Miss Anna Gould, to get advances from money lenders. He has, it is said, borrowed a million from these not usually innocent Shylocks by parading American heiresses past them in Paris, and thus leading them to suppose he was going to capture the heart and hand of another dollar princess. Count Boni is a most extravagant man, and even before he became the husband of Anna Gould would never think of wearing a pair of gloves twice, although they cost him $2.50 the pair.

When a young man tells a girl she is pretty she proceeds to give an imitation of being surprised.

IN PRAISE OF NELSON

"The Most Fascinating Man I Ever Conversed With."

Eight letters written by Nelson's chaplain on the Victory, the Rev. A. J. Scott, have just been sold by auction. While off Toulon Mr. Scott wrote to Lady Lavington:

"I never yet in my life met with so pure a mind as his, every thought flowing from the lusty family of selfishness is a stranger to his breast. He possesses that impulse of genius which, to whatsoever point the mind be turned, conceives, judges, and determines what is to be done, with promptitude."

It was his duty to accompany the body home after Trafalgar. On Dec. 10, off Spithead, he writes:

"Let the country mourn their hero. I grieve for the loss of the most fascinating companion I ever conversed with. The greatest and most simple of men—one of the wisest and most innocent—interesting beyond all. On shore—in public, and even in private life, men are not always themselves, and put on their behavior with their clothes—but if you live with a man on board of ship for years—if you are constantly with him in his cabin—your mind will soon find out how to appreciate him—the more you knew Nelson the more you loved him."

He was horrified later to find that a price was charged for viewing the coffin in St. Paul's, and remarks that no wonder the French call us a "nation boutiquiere." With this batch was a letter by Capt. Wells, of the Thunderer, describing the hero's death:

"I much fear his honors were the cause of his death, as he evidently was picked off from the rest, wearing his stars in action, which, in my opinion, was rather indiscreet. He loved to hear victory pronounced, and that the few ships of the enemy that were able were making off with all possible sail. It had a very great effect on him. He appeared pleased and happy, and thanked God for allowing him to outlive the day, and died almost immediately convulsed—his joy was too great."

This interesting series of letters realised $305.

THE ALTAR OF FASHION

Wholesale Destruction of Rare and Beautiful Birds

Addressing members of the Royal Colonial Institute, London, on the subject of "The birds of the Colonies and their preservation," Mr. Jas. Buckland said the critical condition of many of the more rare and beautiful birds of our colonies; due to their destruction in the millinery interests, was one which it was impossible to adequately realize or to exaggerate. Among ornamental feathers assumed for show during the courting season the strangely beautiful tail of the lyre bird of Australia was unequaled. A few years back over 400 lyre birds were killed in one district in a single season to supply the London plumage market. It was not so long ago that some sordid vandals surrounded a patch of scrub in which some representatives of this fast-disappearing genus were known to be breeding, and setting fire to it they shot down these avian marvels as they struggled through one pitiless ring of fire only to meet their death in another. The plumes having been cut off, the bodies were thrown aside to rot. No species could withstand such ill-timed slaughter as this, and it was a fact of sinister import that 152 tails only had been catalogued this year in the London feather sales. The egret had been practically exterminated in North America and in China, and was so thinning its ranks throughout the world that the best selected plumes were now fetching over $40 the ounce at London feather sales, double the value of gold.

LORD MAYOR DEPOSED

The office of Lord Mayor of Cork has been declared vacant in the King's Bench Division at Dublin. The present occupant, Mr. Donovan, after a tie for the office, gave a casting vote for himself, which, as there are emoluments attaching to the office, the court decided he had no right to do.

SUFFICIENT PROOF

A Yarmouth applicant for an old-age pension, who was unable to produce documentary evidence regarding her age, has proved her claim by showing that her daughter was already receiving a pension.

"Pneumonia"

Pneumonia is nothing more or less than "Lung Fever," or as it used to be called, "Inflammation of the Lungs" and the results come entirely from a local source, such as taking a violent cold.

There is more or less difficulty in breathing: a cough, at first dry, but soon accompanied by raising a thick, sticky, rusty-colored matter, composed of a mixture of phlegm and blood.

There is only one way to prevent Pneumonia, and that is to cure the cold just as soon as it appears. Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup will do this quickly and effectively.

Mrs. G. W. Bowman, Pattullo, Ont., writes: "Three years ago I caught a cold which ended in a severe attack of Pneumonia. Since that time, at the beginning of each winter, I seem to catch cold very easily. I have been so hoarse that I was unable to speak loud enough to be heard across the room. Last winter, however, a friend advised me to try Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, saying it had helped her. I bought a bottle and before it was half used I was completely cured. I also find it a good medicine for the children when they have colds."

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; the price 25 cents.

At Hull a pathetic story was related at an inquest on the body of John Wild, a six-year-old boy. The little fellow succumbed to burns, but before he died he told his mother how it happened. "I stood on the fender," he said, "and called up the chimney to ask Father Christmas to send me a pair of roller skates, a magic lantern, and some candles." The mother found the child with his clothes on fire, and extinguished the flames with a blanket, but the injuries proved fatal.

CONSUMPTIVES FOR THE NORTH

Sir Ernest Shackleton Thinks Spitzbergen a Good Health Resort

Sir Ernest Shackleton, who got nearer to the South Pole than any other explorer, has declared his intention of visiting Spitsbergen this summer. He further voices the opinion that it would be a good thing if a sanitorium for consumptives could be established in the polar regions. A two months' stay amid the ice and snow of Spitsbergen would do wonders for a person suffering from lung and chest troubles, declares Sir Ernest. He points out that Arctic air is absolutely pure, and beneficial to all chest complaints.

WHY HE WEPT

"Ah!" said the grey-haired wayfarer at the railway refreshment-room, "this is the old place. I recognized yonder landmark at once."

"What landmark?" inquired the waitress considerately.

"Years ago, when I travelled over this line," said the stranger, in a choking voice, "I carved my initials and the date on yonder bun. I see you have it still."

Run Down— Weak Heart

This Great Tonic and Heart Stimulant Quickened Mr. Causey's Heart Action, Built Up His System and Keeps Him Strong and Active, Although an Old Man.

Mr. T. P. Causey, R. F. D. No. 5, Box 23, Vandalia, Ill., wrote: "It gives me pleasure to say that I have been using Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey for several years and think it a great medicine. Before I commenced to use it I was all run down, could hardly do my chores. But this last summer I have worked in the field most of the time and felt much better.

"I have also been much bothered by my heart, so much so that I would have to go to the doctor's every little while to get medicine for it, but since I commenced using Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey I haven't had to go to the doctor for that trouble, and I feel much stronger. I have a good supply of the medicine on hand at present and will order more when it is gone."

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey

has done more to promote longevity and keep old age healthy than any other medicine or method of living. It is one of the greatest strength builders and tonic stimulants known to science. Its palatability and freedom from injurious substances render it so that it can be retained by the most sensitive stomach. It is invaluable for overworked men, delicate women and sickly children. It strengthens and sustains the system; is a promoter of health and longevity; makes the old feel young and keeps the young strong. It is recognized as a family medicine everywhere.

All grocers and liquor dealers, or direct, $1.25 per large bottle. Medical booklet and doctors' advice, sent free on application. The Duffy Malt Whiskey Co., Rochester, N. Y.

SUGAR-BEET PRODUCTION

Sugar beets are grown most extensively in Ontario and Alberta, where they supply roots for three sugar factories. The area in crop this year is 16,000 acres, which is a substantial increase upon last year. The yield per acre is 9.69 tons, the total yield 155,000 tons, and the quality 93.15 per cent. The roots supplied to the Berlin factory are testing 17 per cent. of sugar, and at the Wallaceburg factory 16 per cent.; but a product of 5,000 acres in Ontario is being shipped to factories in Michigan. The product of 8,200 acres in that Province is marketed at Wallaceburg and Berlin where the average price is about $5.86 per ton or better than $67.80 per acre.—Census and Statistics Monthly for October, 1910.

OUTLAW BUFFALO

Cause Trouble in Montana—Canada Makes Another Coup

Howard Douglas, superintendent of Canadian National parks, recently visited Missoula, Mont., to hold a conference with Pablo, and Henry Avare, the state game wardens, with regard to the outlaw buffalo, and a buffalo hunt with all its dash, heroism, and desperate risk was decided on. Mr. Douglas made the announcement of another clever piece of Canadian manipulation when he stated that on his way down he had stopped at Kalispiel and purchased two cars, 28 head, of the Conrad herd of full bloods. These animals are domesticated, and almost as gentle and easy to handle as ordinary cattle. They are virtually part of the Pablo herd, but were separated from the larger herd when Allard, the partner of Pablo, died. His executors took one half of the buffalo herd. This last Canadian coup practically places this country in possession of all the buffalo in the world.

But with regard to the buffalo hunt, it is not thought that the action of the U. S. authorities in vetoing the buffalo hunt had any particular effect upon the outlaw bulls, but it is known that since that decree went forth these old warriors have developed most murderous and destructive tendencies, and now, according to the Missoula papers, are terrorizing the Flatfoot reserve, and seem to be lying in wait for settlers, and take delight in chasing them to their shacks and then battering their shacks to pieces much to the discomfiture of the homesteader or settler.

BLESSING THE BEASTS

Quaint Ceremony that Obtains Yet in Normandy

The oxen, the asses, and the draught horses are assembled in front of a church. There may also be a bullock or two, and perhaps some cows. The procession of peasants, clad in their very best, issues from the church to the sound of a chant that is droned by the priest. The venerable cure sprinkles a few drops of water on the heads of the beasts, and when all the animals have received the benediction the next feature of the ceremony is to place at the pedestal of the cross facing the church certain bundles tied in coarse linen. These bundles contain bread and salt, which are to be given to those beasts not able to attend the ceremony.

A VERSATILE PEER

Is the Earl of Crewe—His Wife Noted For Attainments

Poet, book-lover, sportsman, model landlord, and a keen agriculturist, the Earl of Crewe has gained the reputation of being one of the most versatile as well as broadminded of peers. In addition, he is one of the best-dressed, and the term "Crewe's elegance" is often heard at St. Stephen's. He is married to the daughter of Lord Rosebery who, prior to the wedding in 1899, was known as Lady "Peggy" Primrose. Lady Crewe has developed into one of our leading political hostesses, and has proved of great service to her husband in his political work. She is an exceedingly clever, tactful, and witty woman. On one occasion at dinner she noticed her father seated between Mrs. Asquith and the late Duchess of Cleveland. "Look at papa," she said, "sitting between the nineteenth and twentieth centuries."

WILL BE DIRECTOR

Duke of Norfolk In Charge of the Coronation Plans

As Earl Marshal and Chief Butler of England the Duke of Norfolk will be one of the chief directors of the Coronation. A large amount of his time is always occupied with important questions of etiquette, in addition to which, as "lay Pope of England," as he is sometimes described, he is the acknowledged head and spokesman of the English Catholicity. The Duke has already shown his mastery over details of public ceremonies. Particularly was this the case with his splendid arrangements for the lying-in-state and the funeral of the late Mr. Gladstone. The time was so short and the precedents so few that the Duke had to devote about fifteen hours a day to the work.

EPIGRAMS FROM NOVELISTS

Have you never observed that if you conscientiously neglect to do your work it somehow manages to get done without you?—Henry Harland.

Civilization means universal civility, and to be civil to everybody argues a great power of telling lies.—Eden Phillpotts.

Relations, as somebody said, are disagreeable acquaintances inflicted upon us by Providence. But it is no use losing one's temper about what they say; it only pleases them.—Richard Bagot.

How exquisite in life is the art of not seeing many things, and of forgetting many that have been seen.—James Lane Allen.

There is nothing in life worth making a secret of—except one's income.—Seton Merriman.

Truisms, whether they lie in the depths of thought or on the surface, are at any rate the pearls of experience.—George Meredith.

WHAT THEY WANTED

With hisses and groans an audience greeted what had been hoped would prove the great scene of a new drama All hope of success was at an end.

"It's hard to tell what the public wants," murmured the heart-broke playwright standing in the wings wit the manager.

"It's easy enough to tell in thi case," said the manager, grimly. "I wants its money back!"

PARLIAMENT REFRESHMENTS

How the late Parliament refreshed itself is told in the report just issued of the Select Committee appointed to control such arrangements. From February 15th to August 3rd, 94,089 meals were served, made up as follows: 18,162 luncheons, 37,592 dinners, 216 suppers, 45,765 teas, and 2,377 meals at the bar. The receipts amounted to $60,000. There was spent on provisions $32,000; cigars, $3,300; wines, etc., $21,000.

CORONATION DIAMONDS

The coronation of King George will see the Cullinan diamond take its place among the Crown regalia for the first time. Since it was quite impossible to cut this wonderful stone as a whole, it was split into two main portions, each of which is considerably larger than any other diamond the world has ever seen. The larger of the two has just been placed in the centre of the front of the crown that the King will wear next June.

Palpitation of the Heart.

When the heart begins to beat irregularly or intermittently, palpitate and throb, skip beats, beats fast for a time, then go slow as to seem almost to stop, it causes great anxiety and alarm.

The least excitement or exertion seems to affect it.

Many people are kept in a state of morbid fear of death, become weak, worn and miserable, through this unnatural action of the heart.

To all such sufferers Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills can give prompt and permanent relief.

Mrs. John Thompson, Mill Cove, N.B., writes:—"Just a few lines to let you know what Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills have done for me. I have been troubled with weakness and palpitation of the heart; would have severe choking spells, and could scarcely lie down at all. I tried many remedies but got none to answer my case like your pills did. I can recommend them highly to all suffering with heart and nerve trouble."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c. per box or 3 boxes for $1.25 at all dealers or will be mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

E. F. MASON

He Worried the Judge.

A story was recently told of the elder Judge Peckham, father of the supreme court justice. In the early days of dentistry a hickory plug was put into the cavity to fill the space where a tooth ought to be. This plug had to be gently pounded into its desired position. The old judge was somewhat addicted to strong language, and when the dentist began his wor kthe judge indulged in some classic comment. As the tapping of the plug continued he threw all dignity to the four winds of heaven, and his language became decidedly "more forcible than elegant." When, however, he arose from the chair after what seemed to him an interminable period of agony he pulled out all the stops in his vocabulary for a grand climax. The impression on his listener seems to have been deep and lasting. As the judge passed out the dentist grimly remarked to a waiting patient:

"Wasn't it beautiful? It wasn't really necessary to pound half so long, but I did so enjoy his inflection that I almost pounded the hickory plug into splinters. Wonderful command of language the judge has!"—Case and Comment.

A Popular Game.

"Many games originated from ancient forms of worship, human sacrifice, marriage, burial and other ceremonies," Dr. A. C. Haddon remarked in an address at the Royal Sanitary Institute. "Leapfrog is a game common to almost every country, including New Guinea and Japan."—London Standard.

Elected by Lot.

Three candidates tied with 236 votes each for two seats on the Limerick Town Council recently and drew lots under the provisions of the Local Government Act to settle the election.

Marvels of Motion.

Many trades sedentary in appearance are the cause of a vast amount of motion. The carpenter who drives his plane over the plank, the polisher who leaves it shining like a mirror, the gardener who sweeps the paths, the carpet layer who drives his nails—all these people move or cause movement in a part of their person. Add together all these rapid and apparently trivial movements and you will discover that they cover at least once in the course of a lifetime the long route around the earth. It has been calculated, and the calculation is easy to verify, that the writer with a fluent pen who blackens the paper for five hours a day at the rate of thirty words a minute will thus cover a distance of about 30,000 miles a year by, so to say, mere strength of the wrist. That means a much greater distance than that of the circuit of the earth. And yet this unconscious hero has scarcely quitted his desk.—Strand Magazine.

Vernon Park Announcement!

VERNON PARK, CLARESHOLM, is a sub-division of blocks 89 to 112 of the Original Townsite, directly adjoining the Public School, and is all rich, level prairie land, "guaranteed."

The property is intersected in direct line by the Main Street, and is only three blocks from the Post Office, which point marks the centre of the business section.

The Canadian Pacific Railway Station and Offices are situated two blocks south of Vernon Park. The Railroad runs parallel with the east boundary of Vernon Park and there are some thirty TRACKAGE LOTS in this sub-division, including corners.

The four Terminal Elevators and grain-cleaning plants with a capacity of 300,000 bushels are within three blocks of Vernon Park. The assured fact that Claresholm is a grain centre means the building of many mills and storage elevators in addition to many warehouse and factory structures, and the direction of growth cannot be in any other direction but northerly to Vernon Park.

Watch for our advertisement in to-morrow's "Examiner"; a complete map of the property, showing its proximity to the Town and School will appear.

Vernon Park Allotments !

VERNON PARK has been held for several years by a syndicate of Claresholm men, who held it at a very high price, knowing that in due season the property would be worth double in value. The price in question was prohibitive for developers of sub-division property to handle, but through the efforts of Messrs. H. J. Stuart & Co. the price was reduced to a satisfactory figure, and in order for them to carry out their contract, it will be necessary to dispose of this property within thirty days. In order for them to consummate this undertaking it will subsequently be necessary to place the property on the market at a much less figure than under ordinary methods.

The present conditions and expectations of Claresholm afford every assurance of record activity in Town real estate, and all purchasers of Vernon Park property will experience the same degree of activity in their investment on the basis of the present market prices of town property.

W. P. TESKEY, Merchant:

Claresholm has never had a real estate boom. The rise in land values has been commensurate with the growing importance of the town. Real Estate investments in Claresholm rightly made and according to one's means will yield a sure return.

On Sale Saturday, March 4th

No allotments of the property will be made prior to Saturday, March 4th. Applications for reservation will be held for early purchasers anticipating the rush sale, but no receipts will be issued until that date.

We prophesy one of the quickest turnovers in realty on record, as the property is one of the best investments ever offered the public of a sub-division nature.

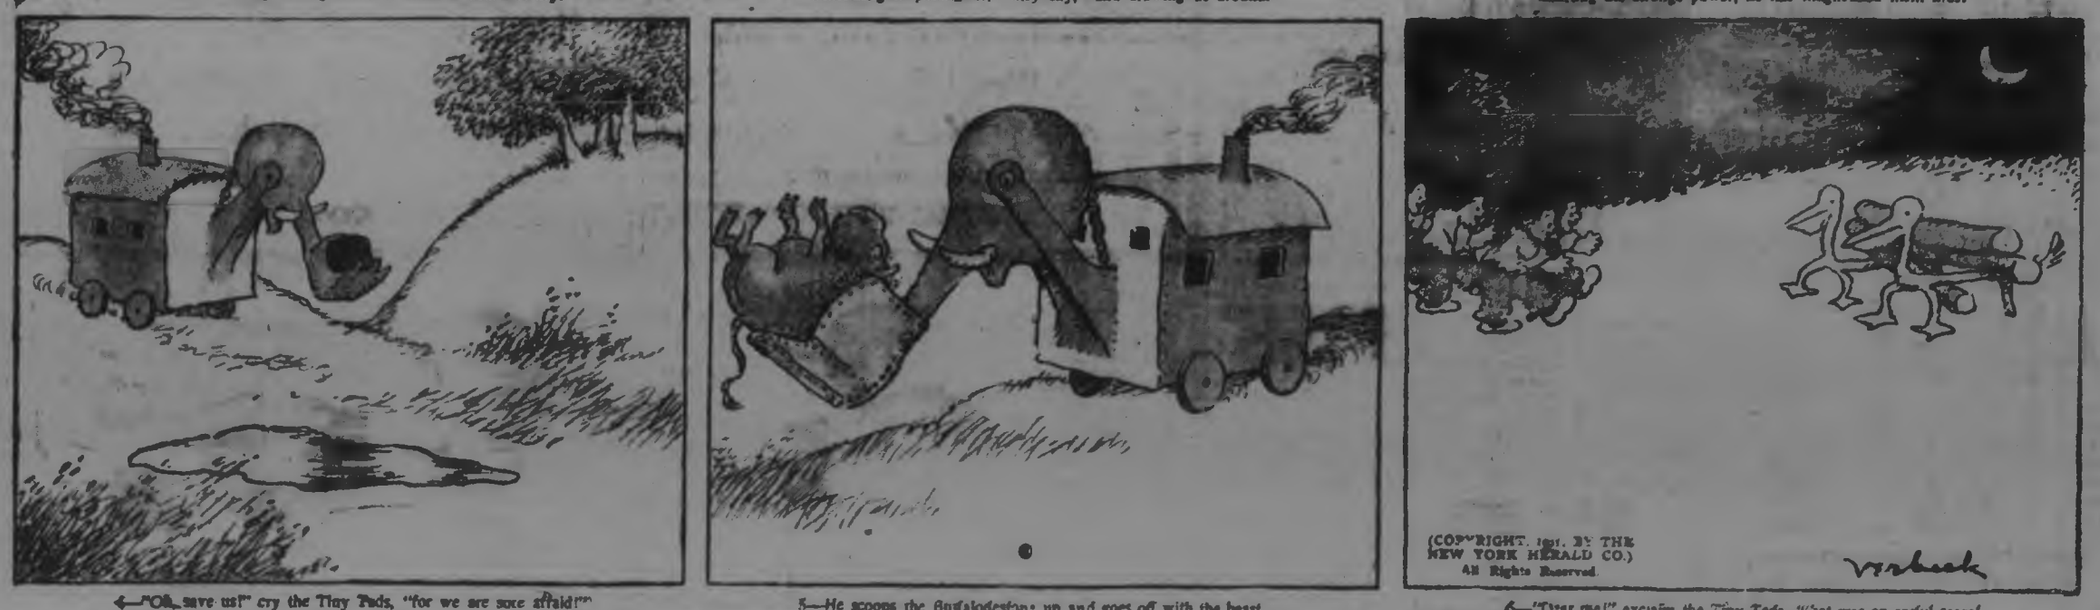
THE TERRORS OF THE TINY TADS

4—The Tiny Tads are wondering what they will do to-day.
"I have a funny feeling!" one of them is heard to say.

2—Then all at once they slip and roll and slide along the ground.
"Something is pulling us," they say, "and drawing us around."

3—It is a Buffalodestone who is causing all this fuss;
Exerting his strange power, he has magnetized them thus.



4—"Oh, save us!" cry the Tiny Tads, "for we are sore afraid!"
This Steam-shovelephant has heard! He rushes to their aid!

5—He scoops the Buffalodestone up and goes off with the beast,
To dump him o'er a precipice, three hundred feet at least.

SHE WAS SURPRISED

When Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills Cured her Chronic Liver Complaint

Mrs. R. Smith, of Winnipeg, Man., tells an interesting story of relief from almost intolerable sufferings:

"I can hardly tell you how great my sufferings have been. Chronic liver complaint accompanied by biliousness were a daily source of trial to me. Every day I experienced the sickening effects of these ailments. I longed for some medicine that should permanently drive them away.

Hearing of Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills, I thought they were worthy of a trial. My surprise was indeed great. From the very first I experienced relief. Continuing with them I found my troubles were slowly but surely leaving me, and before long I once more knew what it was to be free from the harassing effects of the ailments that had long sickened and weakened me. So great is my faith in Dr. Morse's Indian Pills that I shall never on any account be without them."

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills cure Bowel and Kidney as well as Liver troubles, and keep you healthy. 25c a box at your dealer's. 14

LAND REGULATIONS.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH WEST ANY PERSON who is the sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. The applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the district. Entry by proxy may be made at any agency, on certain conditions, by father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister of intending homesteader.

Duties.—Six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres solely owned and occupied by him or by his father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister.

In certain districts, a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter section alongside his homestead. Price $3 per acre. Duties—Must reside upon the homestead or pre-emption six months in each of six years from date of homestead entry (including the time required to earn homestead patent) and cultivate fifty acres extra.

A homesteader who has exhausted his homestead right and cannot obtain a pre-emption may enter for a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3 per acre. Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate fifty acres and erect a house worth $300.00.

The Writers.

Paul Heyse, the German novelist, who won last year's Nobel prize in literature, is recognized as a master of his art in his own language. He has been a writer for sixty years.

The death of Rudyard Kipling's mother in the early seventies accentuates the fact that the son, nearly twenty-five years after his first literary success, is still essentially a young man. As a matter of fact, he is only forty-five years old.

Edith Wharton, the novelist, was born in New York in 1862 and married Edward Wharton of Boston in 1885. Her first story was published in 1899. Since that time her industry has never flagged, more than a dozen volumes having come from her pen, though some of them were not stories, but records of travel.

SEA SCOUTS AT WORK.

London Scoutmaster Tells of Boys on the Briny Ocean.

In the following article a Scoutmaster describes the work of a London troop of boy scouts which has already had some sea practice.

The article is additionally interesting in view of the fact that Canada is now turning its attention to the important question of sea training.

London is the greatest port in the world. I learned that at school, and I suppose it was true then. Possibly it is true now, but it is an uncommonly difficult thing for a cockney to realize. He proclaims with ostentation that he does like to be beside the seaside, and forgets that the sea flows under London Bridge. Would he go yachting he entrains for Southampton—swimming, he seeks the public baths.

My tale is of those who take the good the gods send them and embark on the salt water at their doors. I tell of the Ratcliff Scouts.

There are possibly a few things that the Ratcliff Scouts can teach the average Londoner and what London river can be to a schoolboy is one of them.

The scouts' whaler lies safely among the lighters, for a scout is a friend to all, and most people are friends to scouts; the watermen keep an eye on her, and there is often a tow to be had from some steam tug when the scouts are getting under way.

And when the tide is high at night away we go, past the Tower and the Temple and the Houses of Parliament, where people talk about the navy that we are creating without them, till the trees of Battersea are seen through the twilight, and time and tide are ripe for the passage home.

You may see us some night as we pass below bridge with five long oars that swing to our chorus. "If you should look and wonder what we are, Why we are the Ratcliff Scouts."

Or it may be that we go down on the ebb past the observatory at Greenwich, to Blackwell, where the river widens and the lugs are hoisted to catch the evening breeze. For the scouts are real seamen and can work a boat to windward under service rig in a fashion that would not disgrace the navy.

There is no finer stretch of water for sea training than the lower Pool. Tugs tearing up and down, long strings of barges swinging round to anchor, lighters under no sort of command drifting down mid-stream, and Belle boats racing home with swell enough to swamp anything within half a cable; these are teachers with which there can be no trifling.

But the scouts' experience is not limited to the crowded Pool. Saturday and Sunday are holidays from school, and tide and a service rig are first-class carriers. Blankets, tent, and a camp kettle will stow up forward, and both up river and down good camping places abound on the banks. We have visited Guildford, on the Wey, we have camped at Canvey Island, and sailed on past Southend and round the Nore.

Of all the parts of scout's education swimming is the most essential and what swimming bath can compare with the river? We preach what we know; have we not swam from Tower Bridge to London Docks, and bathed, unknown to the police, under Waterloo Bridge?

But only scouts who have swum fifty yards are allowed in the whaler. Others must learn in the swimming baths or off the shore. By using Stony Stairs you get the cleaner water and save your penny, but of course you risk encounter with the "Jacks," or water police, and they have got a motor-boat lately and have a way of coming upon you suddenly from behind a barge, so that visitors to Ratcliff happen from time to time upon a small naked boy lurking up an alley a hundred yards from the river until the coast is clear again.

The whaler has other and more warlike functions. From time to time it patrols the river to guard against invasions from the Rotherhithe shore, and holds up neutral rowing boats, insisting on the right of search for scouts of the 2nd Walworth troop. There are friendly receptions, too, of neighboring troops, particularly the 1st Toynbee, who join us in sea-scouting practice; and, best of all, there is the summer camp in the Isle of Wight, when the whaler lies below the cliff that carries our tents, and we meet the Sandown troop ashore and afloat in friendly rivalry.

Now, the Ratcliff Scouts have been trying to point a moral, and the moral of their history is this. It is all very well to write to the papers commending sea scouting for seaside troops; let sea scouting, like charity, begin at home. The sea is at our doors, and it is to the swarming boys of London that we must look to man the navy and the merchant service.

London is full of yachtsmen, able and I believe willing to help; let them try; they will find few sports equal to navigating between the Tower and Barking Creek.

An Immense Undertaking

Canada, appreciating at last the vast possibilities of her great territories, is beginning to do things on a large scale. The latest proposition is to build a model highway from Winnipeg to Vancouver. If this work is carried to completion, it will serve as a shining example to the disciples of the gospel of good roads. The Canadian highway would be built under every conceivable difficulty, and should encourage road building in this country, where no such difficulties must be overcome.

The road will traverse the provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta, and British Columbia, and will cross some of the roughest parts of the Rocky Mountains. The plans, which have not yet been adopted by the various provinces, were originated by the Minister of Public Works of British Columbia. He feels that the undertaking would be of large value to all Western Canada, and is hopeful of speedy co-operation.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

HELP FOR OLD BACKS THAT ACHE

GIN PILLS Cure Them

Age is no barrier to the wonderful, soothing, healing properties of GIN PILLS, the great Canadian Kidney Cure. We have on record many letters from men and women of 60, 65, 70, 75, 80 and over, testifying to the great relief they received from taking GIN PILLS.

Mr. Samuel Martin of Strathroy, Ont. suffered for twenty years with misery in his back. Some months ago, he tried GIN PILLS and after taking only three boxes, was entirely cured. Mr. Martin is now 85 years of age and enjoys the robust health of a vigorous man of sixty, thanks to GIN PILLS.

All elderly people are troubled, more or less, with Kidney and Bladder Trouble, and pain and weakness in the back. GIN PILLS are a guaranteed cure for all these misfortunes. Money promptly refunded if they fail to give complete satisfaction.

NO INDIGESTION OR STOMACH DISORDER

No Gas, Heartburn, Headache or Dyspepsia Five Minutes Later

Why not get some now—this moment, and forever rid yourself of Stomach trouble and indigestion? A dieted stomach gets the blues and grumbles. Give it a good eat, then take Pape's Diapepsin to start the digestive juices working. There will be no dyspepsia or belching of Gas or eructations of undigested food; no feeling like a lump of lead in the stomach or heartburn, sick headache and Dizziness, and your food will not ferment and poison your breath with nauseous odours.

Pape's Diapepsin costs only 50 cents for a large case at any drug store here, and will relieve the most obstinate case of Indigestion and Upset Stomach in five minutes.

There is nothing else better to take Gas from Stomach and cleanse the stomach and intestines, and, besides, one single dose will digest and prepare for assimilation into the blood all your food the same as a sound, healthy stomach would do it.

When Diapepsin works, your stomach rests—gets itself in order, cleans up—and then you feel like eating when you come to the table, and what you eat will do you good.

Absolute relief from all Stomach Misery is waiting for you as soon as you decide to take a little Diapepsin. Tell your druggist that you want Pape's Diapepsin; because you want to become thoroughly cured this time.

Remember, if your stomach feels out of order and uncomfortable now you can get rid of it in five minutes.

This Home-Made Cough Syrup will Surprise You

Stops Even Whooping Cough Quickly. A Family Supply at Small Cost.

Here is a home-made remedy that takes hold of a cough instantly and will usually cure the most stubborn case in 24 hours. This recipe makes sixteen ounces—a family supply. You couldn't buy as much or as good ready-made cough syrup for $2.50.

Mix two cups of granulated sugar with one cup of warm water, and stir 2 minutes. Put 2½ ounces of Pinex (fifty cents' worth) in a 16 oz. bottle, and add the Sugar Syrup. This keeps perfectly and has a pleasant taste—children like it. Braces up the appetite and is slightly laxative, which helps end a cough.

You probably know the medical value of pine in treating asthma, bronchitis, and other throat troubles, sore lungs, etc. There is nothing better. Pinex is the most valuable concentrated compound of Norway white pine extract, rich in guaiacol and all the natural healing pine elements. Other preparations will not work in this formula.

The prompt results from this inexpensive remedy have made friends for it in thousands of homes in the United States and Canada, which explains why the plan has been imitated often, but never successfully.

A guarantee of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this recipe. Your druggist has Pinex or will get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

JOLLYING A STRANGER

BUMPTUOUS AMERICAN LEARNS ABOUT CANADA.

He Undertakes to Say How Much Better Things Are Done Over the Line and the Canadian Helps Him on His Way — Townships That Were Named After the Governor's Wife's Lap-Dogs.

On a train running from Penetang to Toronto, the other day, a Toronto man fell in with another of those ingrowing Americans. He was one of those summer visitors from across the border who, being outside his own country for the first time in his life, was able to see on all sides of him evidence in support of his opinion that there is but one country in the world fit to inspire the real affection of its inhabitants. From that country he came, and, as in that land all men are free and equal, he was the equal of any man in it—and the superior of most.

As the train ran out of Penetang he addressed his humble but inferior traveling companion.

"These Canadian railways," he observed, "can make fair speed down grades, but on the level they merely crawl."

Not being an American of the ingrowing type, his companion glanced hastily at the other passengers in the small smoking compartment, seemed embarrassed, said: "Never mind," and gazed resolutely out of the window.

The complacent tourist reclined in his seat and also looked out of the window, favoring the landscape with his important gaze. The stumps, he perceived (although he did not speak of it) were not the fine free and equal stumps that he was accustomed to see at home. The blasted stump of a pine looked as if it were the victim of monarchial tyranny.

"Do you live in Canada?" he said, turning to the Toronto man.

"Well, I exist here," was the reply, and the visitor smiled approval of the distinction made.

"Is this district considered good farming country?" he asked, waiving his hand towards the area of stones and stumps through which the train was passing at the moment.

"Oh, yes," said the Canuck, lighting his cigar, and quickly deciding to be as useful as possible to the stranger. "This is considered one of the finest agricultural districts in Canada. You'll travel a long way before you see any better. Why, lots of these farms aren't mortgaged."

"Quite a few stumps, though."

"Stumps don't matter. We have a narrow one-horse plow and can get around the stumps all right."

With his elbow he nudged his companion, evidently believing that the simple Canadian victim would not observe the action.

"Do you know what we would do with those stumps over in our country?"

"What?"

"We'd pull them up."

"Well, of course," admitted the Canuck, "that's what farmers do with stumps as soon as they get loose enough."

"But," leaning over triumphantly, "in our country we don't wait for them to get loose. We have what we call stumping machines, and we'd go into a field like that and yank 'em all out in one day."

"Oh, come off."

The stranger then gave a full explanation of the stumping machines, and how it works, to which the three or four Canadians listened with every show of interest and surprise.

"By the way," he added, "do you see the name on that mill? 'The Flos Milling Co.' Well, the way that mill got its name is worth knowing. This used to be the township of Flos. There were three townships here, and we had a Governor-General over, sent out from England to govern us, and he named the three townships Tiny, Tay, and Flos, after his wife's three dogs."

"Named three of your townships after his wife's dogs, did he? What did you say the names were?"

"Tiny, Tay, and Flos."

He wrote them down.

"They were lap dogs," added the Canuck. "King Charles spaniels."

"King Charles spaniels," gloated the tourist, adding these words to his notes, "and couldn't you people do anything to keep your townships being named after your governor's dogs?"

"Do! What could we do?"

Another violent nudge was here given to his silent and rather unconvinced companion, and his face clearly said, "Isn't this fine. Watch me draw this fellow out. I wouldn't have missed this for a good deal."

"Wasn't there anything you could do? Couldn't you have held a mass meeting and scared the stuffing out of the old skeezicks?"

The Canuck looked alarmed. "Don't speak like that," he cautioned; "you never know who's on a train like this. We could, as you say, have held a mass meeting, but the soldiers would have been down on us, in short order."

A glare in the eye of an elderly Canadian, who had entered the compartment in the middle of the conversation, warned his fellow-countryman that there would be an explosion in a moment, and as he wanted to go away and laugh, he rose hastily and excused himself, saying he would be back.

But when he returned in half an hour, it was only too evident that the smoking compartment had been a battlefield. The elderly Canadian had got into a hot wrangle with the ingrowing American, and they were no longer on speaking terms.

"Why," said the Canuck afterwards "what I did was all right. The man was a stranger in the country—in a sense he was a guest, and I just fed him what he wanted to eat."

But somewhere over in the great republic a man is telling the story of Tiny, Tay, and Flos as proof of the way in which Canada is oppressed by the operations of a tyrannous monarchy.—Toronto Weekly Star.

Salads.

Shredded pistachio nuts—the kind that come salted—improve the appearance as well as the flavor of the apple and celery salad if a dozen are sprinkled over the top.

In making salads do not chop your meats and celery in a chopping bowl. Cut into the desired sized pieces with scissors. This is quicker, neater and cleaner than the old way.

For delicious cheese balls for the salad course select a dry cream cheese, moisten it with olive oil and cream, mix with it minced parsley, salt, paprika and sugar and form in balls.

When Tolstoy Tried to Fly.

From earliest childhood Tolstoy was remarkably observant of the things that were going on in the world around him. Thus, while still in his teens, we find him taking an interest in the art of flying that was too practical to suit his devoted mother. With characteristic thoroughness he invented a design of his own and with equally characteristic courage proceeded to put it to an immediate test from a second story window. But the boy, who was afterward to find food for thought for the whole civilized world, was not destined to make his mark as an infant aeroplanist. He fell instantly to the ground, and, though by great good fortune no bones were actually broken, the concussion was so great that young Tolstoy afterward slept for sixteen hours on end.

TURNBULL'S
THE HOUSE THAT VALUE BUILT

IN EYE OF A STORM.

Ex-Premier Briand Was Assailed From Three Sides.

Paris, Feb. 28.—The French Cabinet organized by M. Briand on Nov. 3rd last, resigned yesterday afternoon.

The abdication of the Briand Ministry leaves the Socialists in power, at least temporarily. Louis Malvy and Paul Meunier, leaders of the radicals, were jubilant at the success of their campaign against the Premier.

Aside from the political aspect of the situation, Briand's friends yesterday declared that there was a personal element in the surrender of the Premier. He has been the target not only of bitter oratorical attacks recently but within the last year two attempts have been made upon his life.

The Premier has been assailed from three sides: First and foremost, from the radical Socialists, who declared that Briand failed to carry out his radical pledges; secondly, from the wing antagonistic to the church, who charge him with failure in enforcing laws aimed at clerical organizations; and thirdly, from the labor element, who are angry at the harsh measures adopted by the Premier during the great railroad strike.

There is a great deal of speculation as to M. Briand's successor, five names being mentioned. Leading these is M. Poincarre, the others being M. Delcasse, M. Combes, M. Bertaux and M. Barrion.

Powerful efforts are being exerted by President Fallieres to form a new ministry which will be able to unite the warring Republican factions as the chaotic conditions, which have existed for the past year, have given rise to much alarm.

The announcement of the Ministry's resignation was made yesterday, following the funeral of the late Gen. Brun, Minister of War in the outgoing Cabinet. It had been decided on Saturday that the Ministry should quit, but action was postponed until yesterday afternoon.

It is not thought possible that many, if any at all, of the last Cabinet, will have places in the new one. Announcement of the personnel of the next Ministry is expected some time this week.

The crisis may be of some duration as President Fallieres will hold conferences with the presidents of the Senate and the Chamber of Deputies, who are his remaining advisers in such situations as the present. Both those officials are believed to have favorites in view for the Premiership.

Passengers Escape Death.

Kingston, Feb. 28.—In a railway accident at inner diamond yesterday, 70 passengers had a miraculous escape. The Kingston & Pembroke express leaving the city at noon, was crossing the diamond, when a suburban train coming in from the junction over the Grand Trunk, ran into it. The engine crashed into the day coach of the Kingston & Pembroke train. The car turned over on its side and there was a panic, but luckily all the passengers were able to crawl out to safety. All were badly shaken up, some suffered scratches, but none were seriously injured.

The crew on the Kingston & Pembroke train claim the signal was up to give them right of way. One report says the brakes on the suburban train engine failed to work. The engineer and fireman jumped in time to save themselves. The passengers in the G.T.R. coaches were badly jolted, but none injured. Several women fainted.

A short time after this accident, the Kingston & Pembroke engine smashed into the rig of John Duggan, a farmer of Pittsburg, at a crossing nearby. Duggan escaped, but his horse was killed.

Eve Wears Pajamas.

Albany, N.Y., Feb. 28.—As a result of the efforts of Rev. J. A. McCuaig, a well-known parish, who recently made a tour through Albany's underworld, valuable oil paintings in a local saloon have been "done over" to conform with the rules of decorum and the mandates of the police. When the owner of the pictures was informed by officers Saturday that his paintings must either be "draped or removed," he hired an artist and put him to work. The result was startling. "Diana at the Bath," said to have been valued at $10,000, is no longer shocking. Diana herself has been clad in a bathing suit of brilliant hue, while her attendants wear suits of rainbow varieties. The man in the painting appears in a convict garb, wears a silk hat and smokes a pipe.

Another valuable work, "The Awakening of Adam," has been done over so that Eve wears a suit of blue pajamas and Adam a pair of overalls. Both have on boxing gloves.

Garrison Mutinied.

Vienna, Feb. 28.—A news agency despatch from Constantinople reports that the Yildiz Kiosk garrison at the Turkish capital mutinied yesterday when ordered to Yemen, Arabia, to crush the native revolt. The despatch added that the mutineers, reinforced by a battery of artillery, were besieged in the palace barracks by loyal troops and that a fight was expected at any time. Grave fears are felt that the mutiny will extend to the entire Turkish army.

$10,000 Fire at New Dublin.

Brockville, Feb. 28.—J. S. Rowson's large general store at New Dublin, caught fire yesterday afternoon, and, together with his residence and outbuildings, was totally destroyed, entailing a loss of $10,000, which is well covered by insurance. When the news reached Brockville, it was feared that the adjoining town hall could not be saved.

Citizens Are Happy.

Kingston, Feb 28.—Pumping above water was discontinued last night, repairs having been made to the valve in the intake pipe, the city getting good water again. The citizens are happy, as they do not take to boiled water.

Fishermen Are Safe.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 28.—The fishermen who went adrift on an ice floe recently in the Gulf of Finland, have reached Seskar Island [illegible].

Entire Crew Dead.

Odessa, Feb. 28.—A blizzard in the Caucasus and over the Caspian Sea has cost many lives. A derelict barge was found ice-bound near Astrakhan yesterday with the entire crew of 25 frozen to death.

THE VIEWS OF CANADIAN FARMERS UPON QUESTION OF RECIPROCITY AGREEMENT

Are Favourable Not Only in the West but in Ontario—Secretary Drury Tells of the Feeling in Eastern Part of Province.

INTERESTING INTERVIEW

(Toronto Star.)

The three prominent agriculturists quoted herewith held a caucus in the Walker House Monday morning, at conclusion of which they were interviewed by a representative of The Star. Mr. Drury has just completed a tour of Peterborough and Prince Edward Counties, extending over a fortnight; Mr. Mackenzie is bound for Ottawa, to press for Government acquisition of terminal elevators at Port Arthur and Fort William, in connection with the pending grain bill; and Mr. Crerar is returning to his home in Winnipeg, after a flying visit to the capital.

Farmers Organizing.

"The farmers of Ontario are not saying much," said Mr. Drury, "because they don't realise the necessity of saying much. However, they are organizing fast, and all are for the arrangement. I have been addressing meetings in Peterborough and Prince Edward counties twice a day for the past two weeks, with average attendances of about 75 farmers of both political parties, and in all these gatherings, in which the discussion was open and general, I encountered only four men opposed to reciprocity. Even the Township of Monaghan, in which the Johnston petition was circulated, was strongly in favour of it. Indeed, some of those who had signed it told me that they had been persuaded to do so without understanding fully what it meant.

"It is not at all a party question throughout this Province, and the arrangement is endorsed by the most prominent farmers, both Liberal and Conservative. The dairymen and apple growers are not afraid of it, and in Prince Edward County, where they grow tomatoes and corn for canning, all are for it."

In Butter and Cheese.

J. R. Anderson, of Prince Edward County, Treasurer of the Eastern Dairymen's Association, and a prominent Conservative, made the statement that during the past year reciprocity would have meant to him personally an additional revenue of $800 on his thirty-five cows. He also stated that the cheesemakers of that county would have made $144,000 more during the year if reciprocity had been in force."

Mr. Mackenzie explained the desire of the Western farmers that the Government would acquire and control the Lake Superior terminal elevators, from the fact that there could not be sufficiently close Government supervision where the elevators were controlled by the transportation corporations.

Railways Will Not Suffer.

"The West is strong for reciprocity" he said. "And there is no fear out there that the export wheat will not continue to move eastward over Canadian railroads, which are in the better position to handle the trade. Most of the wheat that will go to the United States will go via Port Arthur and Fort William to Chicago, Cleveland, Buffalo, and the eastern States, because the American millers want hard wheat to mix with their soft. And with free trade, they will get this supply from Western Canada, at an increased price to the Western Canadian farmer. The Canadian railways will not suffer, either.

"Objections have been heard from the Winnipeg millers and Board of Trade, who are largely the same people, and certainly do not represent a very large number. The same man seconded the resolutions passed by these two bodies."

The C. M. A. and the Preference.

"A lot of the farmers in the West would just like to know how far the loyalty of the Canadian manufacturers, that is so apparent at present would stand the test, if any considerable extension of the British preference were likely," said Mr. Crerar.

"And that same extension is a move for which the farmers of Ontario as well as the West are fondly looking," supplemented Mr. Drury. "And first, last, and always, the farmers of the entire Dominion want reciprocity."

VIEWS FAVOURING RECIPROCITY IN NATURAL FARM PRODUCTS

Ontario farmers, irrespective of politics, are solid for reciprocity, and are not in the least afraid of the annexation bogey."—E. C. Drury, secretary of the National Council of Agriculture.

"The farmers think that reciprocity is an accomplished fact, and practically none are in the least opposed to it. They realize, too, that free trade in cattle will give a great impetus to stock raising in the West, and will encourage diversified farming."—R. Mackenzie, secretary of the Manitoba Grain-Growers' Association and executive member of the National Council of Agriculture.

"The West is solidly in favour of reciprocity, and an extension of the British preference. The increased development that will result from the arrangement, will give an immense stimulus to the development of trade, and will mean in a few years a doubling of the consumption in the West of manufactured articles, in which the Canadian manufacturers are bound to share."—T. A. Crerar, president of the Grain-Growers' Association Grain Company, of Winnipeg.

LOCAL BOARD OF TRADE DISCUSSES RECIPROCITY

Only Thirteen Members of the Board Were Present—Messrs. T. F. Matthews, D. W. Dumble and Dr. Morrison Were the Chief Speakers—Resolution That the People Should Get a Chance to Vote on the Question

At a meeting of the Board of Trade last night in the Council Chamber, the question of reciprocity was discussed by a number of speakers, and eventually on a vote of 8 to 4, a resolution was passed, expressing the opinion of the Board that the Canadian Government should get the views of the people of Canada upon the subject before passing the proposed treaty. There were only thirteen members of the Board present, but the audience included some forty or fifty non-members. The chief speakers against the treaty were Messrs. T. F. Matthews and Dr. M. A. Morrison and for the pact, Mr. D. W. Dumble.

Industrial Commissioner Duggan was appointed Secretary pro tem, on account of the absence, through illness of Secretary T. Q. Quartermaine.

A communication asking that legislation be sought to prohibit the sale of badly decomposed and tainted eggs unfit for food, received the endorsation of the Board, and Mr. Dumble moved, seconded by Mr. Morris, that this Board petition the Government to enact legislation on this question, and that a copy of this resolution be sent to the honourable Minister of Agriculture for his active sympathy along these lines.—Carried.

The discussion on Reciprocity was then commenced.

Mr. T. F. Matthews was called upon to open the discussion. He stated that he was not anxious to do so on account of the fact that the business he was connected with was so vitally involved in the matter that he would prefer to have some one else begin the discussion. Outside of his own business he felt that the subject of reciprocity was one of the most important things that had come before the attention of the people. It seemed strange to him that two men should be sent to Washington not only to negotiate with the United States but with power to sign an agreement that had either to be carried out or rejected holus bolus. There was something wrong with a mode of government that permitted such a thing. Messrs. Patterson and Fielding he believed had endeavoured to do what they thought best for Canada, and were honest in their opinion that they had done so, but he thought they had gone down ill prepared and not enough study had been given to the matter. There would not be so much objection to the treaty if the Government were appealing to the people, which he thought they should do.

Mr. D. W. Dumble remarked that he had come to the meeting to learn why the action of two experienced, honest and capable men like Messrs. Fielding and Patterson should be found fault with. He remembered when reciprocity was in force between Canada and the United States. It was a time of prosperity, and when the treaty was abrogated it was followed by a period of depression. Lord Elgin had entered into the agreement at that time to make the Canadians content and to stop any thoughts of annexation. From the time of its abrogation until the present day every government had sought to have the treaty renewed but the people of the United States had turned a deaf ear. He did not know what had come over the country when they call men traitors who were trying to accomplish what both political parties have tried to accomplish since the abrogation of reciprocity. Speaking of Mr. Matthews' complaint, Mr. Dumble said that Mr. Matthews' firm shipped their goods to England; the American packers did the same. He could not see now reciprocity was going to hurt the Canadian packers when they had the same market as their American competitors. As for the annexation talk, Mr. Dumble said that it was as so much dust in the air. If there were any honest arguments to be raised against the treaty there would not be these silly issues coming up. Canada had not drifted away from England or from the flag when reciprocity was in force and neither party in attempting to secure such an agreement was selling their flag or their country. The speaker pointed out the effect the agreement would have upon the farmers of Canada, giving them a better market, a quick intelligent market close at hand and would thus benefit all classes of the community.

Mr. Matthews expressed his coincidence with Mr. Dumble in regard to loyalty. He agreed with Mr. Fielding that the man who boasted of his loyalty was very much like the woman who boasted of her virtue. Speaking of his own firm and the effect the treaty would have upon it, Mr. Matthews stated that the great market for his concern to-day was in Canada.

Whereas ten years ago seventy per cent. of their trade was abroad, at the present time there was only about fifteen per cent.

Mr. Matthews explained the effect the proposed treaty would have on his business. The present hog market in Canada was at the various packing centres, and in competing among themselves the Canadian packers paid a higher average price than the Americans. Under the treaty the markets would be at Buffalo and Detroit. There might be times in which the Canadian packers could pay a higher price than at these points, but they could not get below the prices at Buffalo and Detroit and pay a lower price. There was a difference of 40 or 50c higher in the prices at Buffalo than at Chicago, and on the other hand the cost of manufacture at Chicago was much less and the competition with the American firms would put the Canadian packers out of business, as far as the Western market was concerned. By the agreement, too, the United States would import food products without duty from Canada, and from no place else, while on the other hand, Canada would be thrown open as a market in these products to the British colonies, and to the other countries with which Canada had an agreement under the Friendly Nations' Act. The speaker remarked that last year 180,000 pounds of New Zealand butter had been imported into British Columbia. Under the new treaty millions of pounds would be brought in. The conditions now were widely different from the time when reciprocity was in force before. At that time there were no railways connecting east and west, between which sections the trade was now enormous.

Mr. Dumble remarked that the whole question resolved itself into the fact that the nearer the purchaser was to the producer the better it was for the producer.

In answer to a question from Mr.

400 FISHERMEN LOSE THEIR LIVES

Ice on Which They Were Living Broke Away and Drifted Out to Sea and No Assistance Could Reach Them.

A HORRIBLE DISASTER

Special to The Examiner:

ST. PETERSBURG, FEB. 28.—Official confirmation has been received here that four hundred fishermen of Finland lost their lives when the ice on which they were living pursuing their occupation, broke away and drifted out to sea. Their companions on the main land were unable to assist them.

Herb. A. Hudgins Was Complainant—Deer Hound Bit Him on the Arm He Said

TO-DAY'S CASES

Arthur Head appeared in the Police Court this morning, charged with harbouring a dog which bit Herbert H. Hudgins, of 568 Sherbrooke St., Hudgins stated that he was walking up the G. T. R. track on Bethune street, and the dog was coming down the track, and just as it came up to him it stopped, with apparently friendly intentions. He spoke to it and then it jumped up and bit him on the arm, near the shoulder. A man named Robinson was called as a witness, and stated the case pretty much the same as the plaintiff. Mr. Head stated that he never knew the dog to bite anybody before. He said that on that particular day he had shut the dog up; in fact he had kept it shut up ever since, so many dogs having been poisoned around where he lives, but it had broken out. Mr. Head also told the Court that he had sent the dog out of town, and would keep it on a farm. The canine is a thoroughbred deer hound, valued by Mr. Head at $50.00. His Worship told the defendant that if the dog ever came into town again that it would be shot on sight.

Geo. Doald, who appeared in the Police Court a week ago, on a charge of indecent exposure, was arraigned before Magistrate Dumble again this morning. He said that he came from Scotland fifteen months ago, and had lived in Peterborough during that time. He was employed in the C. G. E. works as machinist at $2.50 per day. He also stated that he had a wife and two children in Scotland. He entered a plea of guilty. Judgment was reserved until Thursday, March 2nd, in order that the men at the C. G. E. could be interviewed regarding his actions there.

ONTARIO PRODUCES HALF OF CANADA'S MILLIONS

Examiner Special.

TORONTO, FEB. 28.—The mineral production in Ontario, according to the bulletin issued this morning, by the Department of Mines, increased nineteen per cent. during 1910, and 53 per cent. during 1909 and 1910 combined. In 1908 the value of Ontario's mineral production was $25,000,000; in 1909, $32,900,000, and in 1910, 39,200,000. Calculating on the basis used by the Dominion Geological Survey, says the report, Ontario can fairly claim the production of one-half of the total mineral production of Canada last year.

AN EIGHT HOUR BILL TO BE INTRODUCED

TORONTO, FEB. 27.—An eight-hour day and a minimum wage of twenty cents an hour are the chief provisions of a bill which Adam Studholme, M.P.P., labour member, has prepared for introduction into the Legislature. In all social and economic questions Mr. Studholme takes an advanced position, and the present bill is no exception to that rule. The clause in relation to the eight-hour day is a particularly emphatic one. It would not only make an eight-hour day a legal working day, but would prohibit employers from requiring or permitting their workmen to work more than eight hours, except in case of extraordinary emergency.

The clause reads: "Eight hours a day shall constitute a legal day's work for all workmen employed within the meaning of this Act, and no workman shall be required or permitted to work more than eight hours in any one calendar day, except in cases of extraordinary emergency caused by fire, flood, or danger to life and property.

Another clause declares that a man working more than 48 hours a week shall be deemed to be working overtime and shall be paid at least one and a half times the rate per hour at which he is engaged.

20 Cents an Hour Minimum.

"Notwithstanding any agreement or understanding to the contrary, made by a workman with his employer," says another clause, "no workman shall be employed and paid at less than twenty cents per hour, irrespective of any amount earned at overtime."

No male under eighteen or female under twenty-one should, according to Mr. Studholme, be allowed to work overtime. A saving clause is placed in the bill to except agricultural labour and cases where all the persons employed are members of the employer's family. Other clauses would make the measure apply especially to any contracts made by the Government, and would void such contracts if the provisions of the Act were not carried out.

Examiner's New Serial A Fascinat g S ry

Readers of the Examiner will be glad to learn that arrangements have been made for the publishing in this paper of a splendid new serial story, another of the fascinating mystery yarns such as have been featured in the Examiner for some time past and which have met with the universal approval of the Examiner readers. The title of the new story will be announced to-morrow. It is enough to say that it is of the same high quality as the other serial hits published by the Examiner, and will be commenced in a few days. Watch the Examiner for further announcements.

TO FORM NEW GOVERNMENT

Special to The Examiner:

PARIS, FEB. 28. — Monsieur Antonie Monis, formerly vice-president of the Senate, has been asked by President Failleries to form a new government. Monis is a dark horse. He is moderate anti-clerical.

EARL PERCY IS SOME WALKER

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, FEB. 28.—Suffering severely from cold and hunger, Earl Percy, the eldest son of the Duke of Northumberland, one of the ushers at the recent Decies-Gould wedding at New York, arrived here last night, having walked from Montreal on foot for a wager. At some points on the road he was turned out as a hobo.

ENJOYABLE EVENING

One of the most enjoyable affairs of the season was given last evening at St. Alphonsus' Lyceum by the Oshohuhu Club, to their friends. This "At Home" brought to a fitting close a series of very enjoyable "bridge" evenings that the members have been having since early in the fall. Great praise is due the committee, especially Mr. Fred McGrath, chairman and Mr Jas. J. Doris, secretary for the excellent manner in which the affair was conducted.

The first part of the evening was spent in progressive euchre, the winners of the prizes being Mr. T. Carson and Miss K. McNichol. After refreshments were served the Grand orchestra provided excellent music for dancing, which was indulged in till the wee small hours.

The patronesses were Mesdames F. P. McNulty, F. A. Shannon, W. Merrill, J. Sullivan and B. Morrow.

LENTEN SERVICES AT ST. PETER'S

To-morrow, March 1st, is a significant one for several reasons, among them being the fact that it is Ash Wednesday and marks the first day of Lent. Special mass will be held in St. Peter's Cathedral from 7 to 8 a.m.

In the evening special devotional exercises will be conducted.

Every Wednesday and Friday during Lent, special services of instruction will be conducted.

Miss McIntosh, of Richard Hall & Son, will open up her Dress Making Department to-morrow when she will be ready to impart valuable information about the styles for Spring 1911. :: :: ::

Lecture On Newfoundland

A most interesting and instructive lecture on "Newfoundland" was given in St. John's schoolroom last night by the Rev. Chas. Carpenter to a large audience of A. Y. P. A. members and their friends. A splendid selection of limelight pictures were shown, and the lecturer proved that Newfoundland is a wealthy country, in the possession of enormous resources of timber and in its fishing and mining industries. The National Anthem, sung by those present, concluded a pleasant evenig. Mr. Fisk's splendid lantern showed the slides to great advantage, being provided with a most powerful lense.

UNSEEMLY TREATMENT

Examiner Special:

CHATHAM, ONT., FEB. 28.—As a result of a quarrel between the City and Township, as to which is responsible for the keep of Sarah McNaughton, an indigent imbecile, the woman was left on Reeve Abraham's door step last night, and was later transferred to the doorstep of Mayor Brackin, where she was found half frozen and starving. The unseemly treatment is causing a lot of comment.

HAD AN ALL NIGHT SESSION

Special to The Examiner:

WASHINGTON, FEB. 28.—After an all night session with obstructionist tactics and filibustering which may affect the passage of the Canadian reciprocity bill, the Senate adjourned for a short recess this morning. The debate was on the Lorimer case, affecting this Senator's standing. It is considered unlikely that the Senate can pass the Canadian Reciprocity this week.

No Public Executioner

Special wire to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, FEB. 28. — No appointment has been made nor has there been any applications for the position of public executioner made vacant by the death of John Radcliffe. It is expected the department will not appoint another but will leave such duties to the sheriffs or such persons as the sheriff can secure for the position.

EATEN BY WOLVES

Special Wire to the Examiner.

MOSCOW, FEB. 28.—More than a hundred people, including a bride and groom, comprising a wedding party, travelling thirty miles in sleighs, were eaten by wolves, only two of the party escaped to tell the tale.

COLD WEATHER SORES

Some people's skin is so tender that in winter they are never long free from cold sores, blisters, cracks, etc. For such Zam-Buk is really fine. Mrs. P. Drummond, of Thetford Mines, Que., writes: "For some years, as soon as cold weather has started, my little daughter's face and hands have been covered with rought watery patches, which before long turned into nasty sores. These would itch and smart terribly. They remained on her face from Fall until Spring for three successive years, and we could get nothing which did her any good until a short time ago I started using Zam-Buk. Now, after Zam-Buk treatment, the sores have entirely disappeared, leaving her skin as smooth and clear as is possible."

Zam-Buk also cures eczema, ulcers, piles, abscesses, chapped hands, cold sores, and all skin injuries and diseases. 50c box all stores.

THE BOARD OF TRADE MEETING.

The meeting held last night as a meeting of the Board of Trade was entirely futile as an expression of public opinion or an expression of the sentiments of the Board of Trade, which was represented by a dozen out of a total membership of seventy or eighty. The opposition to the reciprocity agreement was what was to be expected and the same may be said of the favourable opinion expressed. The picture of distance to Canadian industries and interests to result from the adoption of the agreement, painted by some of the speakers, no doubt expressed their real feelings in the matter. But every great fiscal change, every great new departure from policy and long prevailing systems in both Canada and the mother country, have brought forth similar prophecies of disaster. When the present Liberal tariff was adopted fourteen years ago, Sir Charles Tupper foretold that it would bring destruction to the manufacturing industries of Canada and prove a national calamity. We all know and we all feel that the exactly contrary result followed. Canada has never enjoyed so great a period of prosperity and advance as she has done under the Fielding tariff, which Sir Charles Tupper and perhaps some of the opponents of reciprocity at last night's meeting felt, no doubt honestly, would be a national catastrophe. This trade agreement may not prove to be in all respects the beneficial matter its advocates expect, and it is more than certain that it will not prove to be the national disaster its opponents predict. Its real and full effects one way or the other cannot be demonstrated except on trial, and since its interferes in no way with Canada's freedom to regulate her own tariff, the promised benefits to trade and national prosperity at least justify the giving the agreement a trial.

PICTURESQUE WOE.

(Hamilton Herald)

Among the admirable characteristics of Sir James Whitney are his downrightness, his cocksureness, his emphatic way of putting things. Nobody can ever mistake his meaning when he has said what he has to say. He detests neutral tints and delicate shadings. Plain black or white for him.

Sir James has undertaken to decry reciprocity, and he has done so with a heartiness and energy which put to shame the more timid critics who bestow a qualified blame. The blue ruin which Sir James predicts as the certain result of reciprocity is the real thing. It is blue-black ruin—total eclipse. "Our transportation facilities," Sir James cables to a London paper, "will be fatally injured. The aspirations of Canadians for imperial and national unity will be throttled forever. Our inter-provincial trade will be ruined and the progress and growth of our great cities stopped. The orange will be sucked dry and only the skin left with us."

What a picture of woe and desolation, painted with a brush dipt in the gloom of eclipse! Does it not affright? Does not one shudder at this piteous spectacle of a ruined paradise? If you don't shudder at it and refuse to get scared, you do a grave injustice to Sir James, who took all the trouble of composing his word-picture in order to accomplish that very purpose.

Meanwhile let us hope that our picturesque premier's rhetorical effort will not have the effect of discouraging English capitalists who had been preparing to invest money in this country which is so near the brink of ruin.

A SUGGESTIVE SILENCE.

(Toronto Star)

On Saturday the Conservatives of Frontenac, in convention assembled, discussed the pros and cons of reciprocity. Some favoured the agreement; others did not. The very fact that the convention declined to make any official pronouncement on the question of debate is an indication of the strongly favourable feeling with which a large number of Mr. Borden's followers in Conservative Frontenac regard tariff revision. No warmer tribute could have been paid the agreement than the official silence of an official Conservative convention in such a riding as that in question.

Nor is it the rank and file alone who look upon the new tariff schedules with friendly eyes. Such men as Mr David Rogers, the former Patron member, and a Conservative, make no secret of their attitude. He has declared himself as follows:

"Sir, it should need no argument to convince the farmers that the more competitors we have as purchasers for our produce, the less vexatious restriction there is between buyer and seller, the better it will be for all concerned. When all other arguments failed them, as a last resort, they put forward the bogey of annexation. It's too ridiculous to consider seriously. In a word, I would ask my brother farmers if prosperity (which should tend to happiness and contentment), would make us less loyal or cool our patriotic zeal for our great Dominion of which we are so justly proud.

"What have we to gain by such a move? We have a great and grand future before us, we have a better system of government, we, as farmers, have made this country what it is to-day, and borne a heavy burden of taxation in the past and set the ball rolling to the goal of prosperity. Why change now? No, never! It can't be done unless the farmers of the Dominion say so. Their patriotism is not in their breeches pocket. It would be well for Canada if some other classes of the community could say as much.'

Another Conservative ex-member approached by the Star declined to be interviewed on the question—a silence as significant as that of the convention. In fact, there is a live insurgent party in the Kingston vicinity, and the Standard, of that city, has also dropped politics in order to cheer them on. To some of the arguments of the Conservative Opposition it applies the words "bare-faced ly untrue," "misrepresentation," "degrading," "insulting." One of its latest protests is as follows:

"One of the arguments advanced against reciprocity is that it will prevent English capital from coming to Canada. This is so barefacedly untrue that we wonder any reputable speaker or newspaper would make use of it.

"British investors place their money where it will bring the most interest. They would be fools if they did otherwise. British capital is scattered all over the world wherever there is a chance to make a dollar. The United States has received ten times as much British money as has been sent to Canada. The Argentine Republic has received more British capital than Canada has. It is only within recent years that Englishmen have sent any great amount of money to this country—only, indeed, since the North-West was opened up.

"Canada is not a nation of paupers. We do not want English money unless we can give a good return in interest for it; nor are we selling our loyalty for money. The whole basis of the argument against reciprocity is that we are purchasable. Such misrepresentation of Canadian sentiment is degrading to those who use it, and insulting to those against whom it is used." This fairly represents the attitude of many Conservatives who resent being told that they carry their loyalty in their pockets.

THE RECIPROCITY DECISION ENGAGES UNIVERSAL ATTENTION

No Disturbance as Yet in Financial Circles—Special Interests Will Organize to Make Themselves Heard

(Special to The Examiner.)

MONTREAL, FEB. 27.—It seems no use trying to get away from it. Reciprocity dogs our every footstep, stares us in the face when we get up in the morning and is the last thing on our tongues or in our minds when we go to bed. In fact we are lucky if we do not dream about it. The papers are full of it, public bodies are passing resolutions about it, and our friends pester us to say what we think about it. Tiresome as the naval discussion was, many would welcome it back if it would rid us of the present talk, talk, talk.

The somewhat ironical motto: "All this too will pass away" confronts the visitor to the office of a famous police official in this city. It carries very little comfort to the criminal who stands on the brink of a long separation from society behind the grated windows of a penitentiary cell or perchance stands in the shadow of the gallows, but it spells splendid significance to the man who is compelled to listen while the politicians rage and the party press shouts one way or the other about the evils or the benefits which are sure to follow in the footsteps of the enactment now on the boards.

An Extensive Propaganda.

The big interests are well organized and can make their feelings known in very short order through the length and breadth of the land. They are all strongly against reciprocity. They have thrown the full weight of their powerful organizations into the battle against the international agreement. Money is no object and there is very little doubt that a lavish fund is at the disposal of those who are making the welkin ring. The vast majority of the people have no organization and are very little heard from.

No Signs of Disturbance.

If the industries of the country are ever in danger the stock market has a method all its own of which way the wind blows. The prices of the leading securities listed on the stock exchanges are not slow to discount unfavourable conditions and long before they materialize and long before the general public realizes what is goin gto happen a decline in values sets in. In justice to the reciprocity agreement it must be stated that the stock marke has as yet shown no signs of disturbance. On the other hand it has not even interrupted the bull movement which has been in progress for months.

Canadian Pacific, which was one of the great corporations which was going to be chewed up at both ends, and its business knocked endways, has unkindly kept on ipcreasing in value. This the government press is not slow to point out. As for the Annexation talk everyone knows what a stew the country was thrown into by Mr. Champ. Clark's hot talk at Washington. And even yet there are many who believe we can reciprocate and till be loyal to the Empire.

The East and West.

For one reason or another people in the east have an idea that the west is, as a whole, very much in favour of reciprocity, and it was with a feeling of pride and no little astonishment that manufacturers and others read the sentiments expressed by Pat Burns, the Calgary cattle king, on the subject. Mr. Burns, as is well known is probably the biggest man in many ways the west has produced. He is the owner of thousands of heads of cattle, of large packing plants at Calgary and Vancouver, and is an extensive trader in sheep, swine, poultry, butter, eggs and kindred products. He has been called the Armour of Canada, and in Western Canada at least, where he operates something like seventy-six distributing houses and the tail stores he deserves the name. Mr. Burns says reciprocity is "not dangerous" to his business, but he goes further and says that, no matter what its effects, he would be in favour of a pact which would benefit the whole country and not of one which might bring a few temporary dollars to a certain class. Mr. Burns spoke like a patriot and he has many a follower in the west and should.

Britain and Reciprocity.

The fear has been expressed in many well informed quarters that, if this reciprocity agreement goes through Canada will be cut off like an erring son from England's bounty. English money has been coming into the country for investment in handfuls lately, much to the advantage of the Dominion. Should the agreement pass England will draw her purse strings. Mr. C. H. Cahan, K. C., President of Corporation Agencies Limited, has been in England for the past two weeks or more on a financial mission for his company, and his return has been awaited with interest by the banking community here. Mr. Cahan says there is a great deal of talk in London that if reciprocity goes through it will be far more difficult for Canadian Government and municipalities and other undertakings to procure financial assistance in England, but that his owncelings are that so long as Canada maintains its present prosperous condition it will not be difficult to find in England purchasers for good Canadian securities, although it may be necessary, for some time to come, to pay higher prices of interest for our borrowed money. While in London Mr. Cahan arranged for the opening of an office for Corporation Agencies in that city, and made some valuable connections for that corporation there, so that it will now be in a far better position to assist in the reorganization of the finances of good Canadian undertakings, and also to facilitate the investment of English money in Canada.

In the Industrial World.

The outlook in the industrial world in and about Montreal is particularly promising, and as spring approaches signs of activity are apparent on every hand. New manufacturies are springing into life, and the older established ones, while having been busy all winter, are more than ever busy now that the days are growing longer and the sun stronger. At this time of the year it is customary for superintendents and general managers of plants to make exhaustive reports to their boards of directors concerning the general state of the business and the outlook for the summer. These as a rule are considered confidential, but some of them are given to the public, although they are usually couched in such technical language that it is hard for the layman to fully comprehend them. As an exception to this your correspondent happened on a report made by Mr. Edward Slade, Managing Director of the Black Lake Consolidated Asbestos Company, a large concern in the Eastern townships in which many Canadians are interested. He ends with the significant words: "I can safely state that the property is now in a position to earn all its fixed charges, and a substantial surplus. The mines are capable of turning out over 1,000 tons of rock a day and are proving a God-send to those in want of labour in the district. As soon as the weather conditions permit, Mr. Slade says there will be great activity in this industry.

"FLETCHERISM"

The habit of chewing one's food until it becomes almost liquified and swallowed involuntarily, and eating certain foods at certain times of the day is called "Fletcherism" after a man named Fletcher who advocates this method as a remedy for indigestion and stomach troubles. While one may get from this system the maximum amount of food, it is a question as to what extent this principle of living can be applied to the human race as a whole. It is an old and true saying, "What is one man's meat is another man's poison."

There is one thing sure, however, much less distress and much more assimilation of the body-building elements contained in every day food would be experienced by people with poor or impaired digestion if they would only believe what we tell them about Vinol.

There is no mystery about it, or misrepresentation. Vinol simply contains the necessary elements needed to reestablish a normal condition of the digestive system. There is no need of going into the scientific reasons why — it simply does it, that is all.

Thousands of genuine testimonials from reliable people prove this claim and to further support the fact and prove our faith in what we say, we unhesitatingly declare that any one who will buy a bottle of Vinol for stomach disorder and malassimilation will have their money returned without question if they are not satisfied that it has done them good.—McDermid and Jury, corner George and Charlotte streets; also Payne's drug store, corner George and Simcoe Sts.

Must Be Qualified

Examiner Special.

OTTAWA, FEB. 28.—Militia orders to-day announce that in future no recruits in the active militia will be permitted to use range ammunition until qualified in musketry by the sub-target gun.

Getting Away From Land.

The question has been asked, Is it possible to sail 1,000 miles from land? This can be done at several points. By leaving San Francisco and sailing northwestward into the north Pacific a spot is reached where there is no land, not even an islet, for 1,000 miles in any direction. So, too, sailing from the southern point of Kamchatka southeastward ships reach a point equally distant from land of any kind, the nearest to the north being the Aleutian islands and to the south the outlying members of the Sandwich group. In the southern Indian ocean it is possible to sail 1,000 miles out from the southern points of Australia and New Zealand and still be as far from any other land, and the same may be done in a westerly direction from Cape Horn. Indeed, from this point a much longer distance might be reached, for the southern Pacific between the Horn and New Zealand covers a space of 80 degrees of longitude and 40 of latitude of absolutely unbroken sea, making its central point over 1,200 miles from anywhere.

How Every Man Should Vote.

"Anybody who doesn't vote my way is a darned fool!" exclaimed a little man on an outbound trolley car.

"What's that?" asked a big man, turning around in his seat and looking back.

"Anybody who doesn't vote my way is a darned fool!" repeated the little man.

"Did I understand you aright?" asked the big man, rising from his seat and coming back to the rear of the car where the little man was seated.

The little man looked the big man over, but he was game and said once more, "Anybody who doesn't vote my way is a darned fool!"

"Hold on a minute said the big man, who seemed on the point of starting something. "First tell me which way you are going to vote."

A foxy gleam shot into the eyes of the little man, and he piped as dauntlessly as ever, "I'm going to vote any way I darned please!"—Birmingham Age-Herald.

ELLIOT'S

MARKET REPORTS.

Liverpool and Chicago Wheat Futures Close Higher—Live Stock—Latest Quotations.

LIVERPOOL, Feb. 27.—The market was steady at opening, with prices unchanged to ½d lower. The weakness in America was offset by a large decrease in local stocks here and smaller Russian shipments than expected. Following the opening, the market showed a hardening tendency, with some covering of shorts and lighter offerings. The strength in Buenos Ayres at the close on Saturday and less pressure to sell Argentine steamers, with a better general demand for cargoes, and firmer Australian offers, caused the advance.

CHICAGO, Feb. 27.—Part of the responsibility for an advance in wheat yesterday was blamed on the calendar. The rise followed covering by short sellers, who believe that March is an unfavorable month for them. Quite a rush of buying occurred, and the close was 1½c to 1¾c higher than forty-eight hours before. Corn finished ¼c to ⅝c down; oats off ⅛c to ⅜c to ¼c, and provisions varying from 5c to 7½c decrease to 2½c decline.

Montreal Dairy Produce.

MONTREAL, Feb. 27.—Eggs easy. Butter strong and ½c per lb. higher, under a good demand and the rapid decrease in stocks on spot.

Eggs—Selected, 26c to 27c; fresh, 23c; No. 1 stock, 21c; No. 2, 18c.

Cheese—Westerns, 11¾c to 12c; easterns, 11½c to 11¾c.

Butter—Choicest, 29½c to 29½c; seconds, 28½c to 29½c.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Union Stock Yards.

TORONTO, Feb. 27.—Receipts of live stock at the Union Yards were 99 carloads, consisting of 1923 cattle, 349 hogs, 396 sheep and lambs, 25 calves and 55 horses.

Expartars.

Exporters were off in price from last Monday, on an average 25c per cwt., and in some instances 35c.

Butchers.

Prime picked lots sold at $5.90 to $6.10; but only six heifers, 1300 lbs. each, the best on the market, brought the latter price. Loads of good, $5.60 to $5.75, and one load, $5.87½; medium cattle, $5.40 to $5.45; common, $4.90 to $5.10; cows, $4.50 to $5.25; canners, $3.50 to $4; butcher bulls, $4.50 to $5.

Milkers.

There were few milkers and springers offered, and prices were unchanged at $40 to $70 each.

Veal Calves.

A limited number of veal calves sold at $8 to $8.50 per cwt.

Sheep and Lambs.

The lamb trade was easier. Sheep, ewes, sold at $4.25 to $4.75; rams, $3.50 to $4; lambs, $6 to $6.40.

Hogs.

Selects, fed and watered, $7.65; and $7.40 to drovers for hogs, f.o.b. cars at country points.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Feb 27.—At the Montreal Stock Yards west end market the receipts of live stock for the week ending Feb. 25 were 2000 cattle, 1000 sheep and lambs, 1000 hogs and 400 calves. The supply on the market amounted to 925 cattle, 125 sheep and lambs, 1200 hogs and 125 calves.

There was no important change in the condition of the market for cattle, prices being unchanged from a week ago. The attendance of buyers was fairly large, including some from Quebec; and, as they were all in want of some beef, the demand was good, and supplies of all grades were ample to fill requirements; consequently a fairly active trade was done.

Choice steers sold at 6¼c; good at 6¼c to 6¾c; fairly good at 5¾c to 6c; fair at 5½c to 5¾c, and the lower grades at 4½c to 5c per pound. A few extra choice cows brought as high as 5c, and from that down to 3½c was paid for the commoner ones. Sales of extra choice bulls were made at 5¼c to 5c, and the lower grades at from 4c to 5¼c per pound.

The tone of the market for hogs was steady, and prices showed no change, as compared with those paid last Wednesday. The demand from washers was good, and supplies were ample, sales of selected lots being made at $7.50 to $7.65 per 100 lbs., weighed off cars.

Owing to the continued small receipts of sheep and lambs, a stronger feeling has developed in the market, and prices have advanced. The demand is fairly good, and sales of sheep were made at 4½c to 5c, and lambs at 6½c to 6¾c per pound. The demand for calves was good, of which the offerings were small, and prices ruled high at from $4 to $15 each, as to size and quality.

East Buffalo Cattle Market.

EAST BUFFALO, Feb. 27.—Cattle—Receipts, 2000; market slow, lower. prime steers, $6.35 to $6.50; butcher grades, $5.75 to $6.10; cows, $4 to $5.25.

Calves—Receipts, 1000; market active, 25c lower; cull to choice, $5.75 to $10.75.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts, 15,000; market active; lambs 10c higher; sheep firm; choice lambs, $6.35 to $6.50; cull to fair, $4 to $6; yearlings, $5 to $5.60; sheep, $2.75 to $4.50.

Hogs—Receipts, 17,000; light demand; lower; yorkers, $7.20 to $7.25; stags, $5 to $5.50; pigs, $7.20; mixed, $7.10 to $7.25; heavy, $7 to $7.10; roughs, $5 to $5.25.

New York Live Stock.

NEW YORK, Feb. 27.—Beeves—Receipts, 2300; steers slow, steady; bulls and cows steady to 10c lower. steers, $5.70 to $8.60; bulls, $4 to $4.65; cows, $2.50 to $4.60.

Calves—Receipts, 1750, veals steady to 25c lower; veals, $7 to $10.25; culls, $5 to $6.50.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts, 14,600; sheep steady; lambs steady to firm; sheep $3.50 to $4.50; culls, $3; lambs, $5.50 to $6.60; yearlings, $5 to $5.75.

Hogs—Receipts, 10,800; market lower, at $7.35 to $7.45; pigs, $7.50 to $7.60.

Chicago Live Stock.

CHICAGO, Feb. 27.—Hogs—Receipts, 35,000; market dull; mixed and butchers, $7.10 to $7.35, good, heavy, $6.70 to $7.10, rough, heavy, $6.70 to $6.85; light, $6.90 to $7.30; pigs, $7.20 to $7.50.

Cattle—Receipts, 20,000; market steady; beeves, $5.20 to $8.30; cows and heifers, $2.65 to $5.80; stockers and feeders, $4.25 to $5.65; Texans, $4.25 to $5.70; calves, $7.50 to $9.50.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts, 21,000; market slow; native, $4 to $5.75; western, $5.10 to $5.60; lambs, $5 to $6.70; western, $5 to $6.15.

British Cattle Markets.

LIVERPOOL, Feb. 27.—John Rogers & Co., Liverpool, cable to-day that there was a fair demand in the Birkenhead market, and cattle were readily sold at Saturday's quotations, which were: For States steers, 12½c to 13c, and Canadians, 12½c to 12¾c per pound.

A Good Showing.

Eighty-seven per cent. of the farms of Canada earn the land.

The New North.

In her book, "The New North," Miss Agnes Deans Cameron has much to say about the Eskimo with whom she came in contact on her trip through the Far North of Canada. Above all, her book is full of the Hudson Bay Co. and its records. The paternal interest which this company takes in its employes is only equaled by the care with which the accounts are scrutinized. Here is one of the stories she tells:

"The big books of the company a year or two ago in unmistakable round-hand declared that one Running Rabbit, lawful widow of Blueskin, was entitled to draw from the officer's clear-skin bacon and a modicum of flour. But one quarterly pay sheet, returned to Winnipeg from Fort Churchill, showed that Running Rabbit, in addition to her food allowance, had been handed out forty cents' worth of cotton. Stern inquiry, backed by red tape and the company's seal as big as a saucer, was sent to the Churchill factor. Why had the allowance of Mrs. Blueskin (late Running Rabbit) been exceeded? By "return mail" nine months later the factor reported:

The widow's gone,
Her tent's forsaken;
No more she comes
For flour and bacon.

N.B.—The cotton was used for her shroud.

A Question of Time.

While a Toronto man and an Anglican minister of a Western Ontario city were on a train together a few days ago the talk turned to timepieces, and the minister told this one:

"When I was a student at Trinity College I had a clock that would go only when turned on its face on a hot stove. However, so far as knowing the time was concerned, I got along very well. The only trouble was that whenever I wanted to make a cup of tea I had to stop the clock."

THE MODERN HEAD DRESS

Causes Baldness—We Cannot Change the Head Dress, But We Can Prevent Baldness

Up to the time we began to civilize him a bald headed Indian was a thing unknown. Wearing nothing on his head except the covering furnished by nature, and being a stranger to the use of a hair brush, especially the public one, the scalp and hair had plenty of ventilation, much sunlight and, hence, a condition favourable to a luxuriant growth of hair existed at all times.

It was the adoption of air and light excluding head gears and artificial head decorations generally, together with the occasional use of a community hair brush, which gave the dandruff germ its opportunity. Since this parasite has multiplied to an alarming degree until now there is hardly a person who is not troubled more or less with dandruff and falling hair.

Many, to be sure, have passed the worrying stage. Having become chronically bald they realize that nothing is capable of producing natural hair for them. Let these be a warning to all who are experiencing the significant annoyance of dandruff and falling hair.

Dandruff, which is due to a germ, and falling hair can both be overcome by the regular use of Newbro's Herpicide.

This wonderful scalp remedy kills the vicious germ which causes dandruff, cleanses the scalp and stops the hair from coming out. The destruction of the germ permits the hair to grow naturally and luxuriantly as nature intends.

Herpicide makes the hair bright, snappy, light and fluffy.

One dollar size bottles guaranteed.

For sale at all drug stores.

Send 10c in stamps or silver for sample and booklet to The Herpicide Co., Dept. R., Detroit, Mich.

Wasted on Him.

"Occasionally," remarked the visiting Londoner, "I see in some American paper a supposititious colloquy referring to an aeroplane line to Mars. Do you know, that strikes me as being exceedingly funny. Evidently the writer is ignorant of the fact that our atmosphere does not extend upward more than fifty or a hundred miles and becomes more and more tenuous as it nears the limit. He does not seem to know that the air is absolutely necessary in flying an aeroplane. It is highly probable that no aviator ever will ascend to a higher elevation than ten or fifteen miles even if he can endure the excessive cold he will encounter at that altitude. The idea of sailing an aeroplane through the impenetrable ether is ineffably absurd." —Chicago Tribune.

Help the Children.

"There is nothing in all the world so important as children, nothing so interesting. If you ever wish to go in for some philanthropy, if you ever wish to be of any real use in the world do something for children. If you ever yearn to be truly wise, study children. We can dress the sore, bandage the wounded, imprison the criminal, heal the sick and bury the dead, but there is always a chance that we can save a child. If the great army of philanthropists ever exterminate sin and pestilence, ever work out our race's salvation, it will be because a little child has led them."—David Starr Jordan.

Strange Storehouses.

In the old birds' nests that are placed near the ground in shrubs and small trees close to hazelnut bushes and bittersweet vines one will often find a handful of hazelnuts or bittersweet berries. They were put there by the white footed mice and the meadow mice, which visit these storehouses regularly. Very often a white footed mouse will cover a bird's nest with fine dried grass and inner bark and make a nest for itself.—New York Tribune.

A Fish That Gives Paint.

The well known brown pigment called sepia is obtained from a ten armed octopus found principally in the Mediterranean and more especially at the head of the Adriatic sea, where it is caught by the natives for food.

The sepia is contained in a bag and is really the black fluid of which we have all read as being discharged by the creature to cover its escape. Some naturalists say that the fluid is brownish, which becomes more credible when we know that this is the source of sepia. The pigment is really a powder which dissolves in water. Its strength may be estimated by the fact that it will color 1,000 times its own bulk. When the octopus has been killed the sack or bag is removed and dried to prevent putrefaction. The sepia is treated with ammonia or caustic soda, washed and dried. It is one of the most durable of paints, except when fully exposed to the fierce rays of the sun, and an even surface can be obtained with it more easily than with most paints. Sepia has been obtained from a fossil cuttlefish thousands of years old and found to be quite good for paint.

The Change From Black to Red.

"See that little woman who just went out?" remarked a Fourth avenue milliner to a customer. "Noticed that red hat, did you? Well, as a milliner and a person whose business it is to study the different characteristics of women I have watched her for two years. It has been a kind of study of the evolutions of a widow.'

"Two years ago she came to me, recently bereaved, and had me make her a hat of deepest black. She was broken hearted and declared she would never again take an interest in the pretty things that women like to wear. A year ago she came again.

"'Don't you think I might have the least bit of white in my new hat?' she asked.

"'Yes,' I said; 'I think you might.' And the hat was made. Three months later she came for another hat, and she stood for a little touch of lavender. Next she had a big white plume, and last week I made her that red hat. It just shows what time will do in lifting up a heart bowed down."—Louisville Times.

The Releaser.

If he hadn't been a dreadful bore and the hour wasn't so late it is quite possible the lovely girl would have refrained from the exercise of a strategic scheme, says the Cleveland Plain Dealer.

"Hark!" she whispered as he paused in the midst of a long winded description of his camping outfit.

"What is it?" he whispered in return.

She smiled reassuringly.

"It's only papa. He must be oiling the releaser."

"And what is the releaser?"

"It's one of papa's ingenious schemes. Every night, at exactly 11 o'clock, he pulls up a brass chain that releases our brindle bull pup from the annex adjoining the kitchen; that's all."

And she laughed merrily. The caller glanced at the clock on the mantel. It indicated 10:57.

"I find I must go," he said in a slightly hurried manner. "And good night."

IT IS NOT IN THE BLOOD!

Medicine Taken Internally Cannot Cure Eczema. It is Caused by Germs

Eczema cannot be overcome by ordinary treatment and the old-fashioned way of dosing the system with drugs. Eczema is caused by a parasitic germ that bores into the skin. It is generally a contagious disease. Until the parasite is completely destroyed and removed, eczema cannot be cured. Fully one-third of skin diseases are in the form of eczema.

We so thoroughly believe that Rexall Eczema Ointment will overcome eczema and allied skin ailments, that we unhesitatingly promise to promptly return the money paid us for it should it in any way be unsatisfactory to the user. Because of its remarkable cleansing, antiseptic, germicidal, soothing and healing influence, Rexall Eczema Ointment has a very pronounced value in the treatment of skin diseases, especially where the form of ailment is of the chronic, aggravating sort. We highly recommend it for the dry scaly form or the weeping type, where there is a constant flow of ill-smelling excretion.

Rexall Eczema Ointment is very prompt in relieving pimples, blotches, skin eruptions, ringworm, acne, net, the rash, tetter, hives, ulcers, insect bites, and for healing sores and wounds. It is a pleasant smelling, grayish-white ointment and is very cleanly for use. Two sizes, 50c. and $1.00. Sold only at our store,—The Rexall Store, McDermid and Jury, druggists.

Some Far New Yearts.

The other day four hundred Celestials loosened their pigtails on the steamship Titan, bound from Victoria to the Flowery Kingdom, where their New Year celebrations are in order soon. That does not comprise the whole number of yellow men who are not going to wash for a few weeks. Another big batch are booked for the celebrations. How many of these who are off to the festival have checks for $500 tucked in their sandals to help brothers across the Pacific get on board for a first year in the new world, and worry the young Hon. Gentleman in the Laurier Cabinet with another kink in the Oriental noddle?

GREAT TRIALS ON THE TRANSCONTINENTAL

Alphonse Jonelle Tells Tale Filled With Human Interest

Hardships attending work brought on Kidney Disease which threatened his life.—Dodd's Kidney Pills cured him.

Chicoutimi Ville, Chicoutimi Co., Que., Feb. 27.—(Special.)—The trials of those men who push the great rail roads through the obstacles Nature thrusts in their way have been proclaimed in many a page of fiction. But no story ever told is of more absorbing interest or teaches a greater moral than the actual experiences of Alphonse Jonelle, foreman on the Transcontinental, and well known here.

"I contracted Kidney Disease working on the Transcontinental, where I was a foreman," Mr. Jonelle states. "My skin had a harsh, dry feeling and it itched and burned at night. I was always tired. Then came the pangs of rheumatism, and I finally got so bad I could not attend to my work. For five years I suffered, and in the end Bright's Disease developed.

"Then I began to use Dodd's Kidney Pills. Six boxes cured me completely. Dodd's Kidney Pills also cured my wife, who was suffering from Kidney Disease."

From all parts of Canada, and every day, reports come of Kidney Disease cured by Dodd's Kidney Pills. There is never a case reported where Dodd's Kidney Pills have failed. They never fail.

Crossed by the Corpse.

Most of Walthamstow is too modern to have much mystery about it, but the Walthamstow strip" of Leyton preserves the memory of a curious old rule. Barely a hundred yards broad this strip of land, belonging to Walthamstow parish, ran right across Leyton from the lea to Snaresbrook, parallel with the southern border of Walthamstow. How came Leyton to be crossed by this alien strip? Leyton, it was said, had once refused to bury a body found in the lea; Walthamstow came forward to do it. And in such cases it was the rule that the volunteering parish might take from the other as much land right through to the other side as the men who carried the corpse could cover walking in line hand in hand arms extended. The inconvenient result worried both parishes until the growth of population made new parishes necessary.—London Chronicle.

Theory and Practice.

"Dingiebat has original ideas about family government. He says every home should be a little republic, where universal toleration prevails and every one has a voice in the government."

"Yes; his family is managed on that plan. But he and Mrs. Dingiebat have the same old wrangle every day as to who shall be president."

The Foolish Man.

LOCAL BOARD OF TRADE DISCUSSES RECIPROCITY

Kerr. Mr. Matthews said that the English market had been reduced, as far as Canadian packers were concerned, by the limitation of Canadian hogs.

Dr. W. A. Morrison remarked that he had come to learn why there was this reciprocity talk at all. In the election of 1891 the question was prominent and was overwhelmingly defeated. When Sir Wilfrid Laurier carried the country in 1896 the issue was not reciprocity, which had never been before the people since 1891. The speaker referred to the situation in the United States, stating that the people had turned from their old love and had elected a majority of Democrats in the House of Representatives. The Democrats were pledged to the lowering of the tariff and it seemed to the speaker that if the Canadians had "sat tight" the Democrats would have reduced the tariff themselves without Canada giving any privileges. He did not believe that Mr. Fielding and Mr. Paterson realized the extent of the treaty when they had entered into it. The best market for the farmer was the home market and the thoughts of Canadians should be turned towrads building up the towns and cities. The country was prosperous, increasing in population and wealth, and he could not see why under such conditions the Government should throw the country into chaos. The Canadian Government was foolish to take a leap in the dark, he thought. The speaker quoted figures to show that the Canadian people consumed 98 per cent. of what they consumed. The treaty was going to ruin the small fruit growers, as the American fruit growers could grow as good fruit and get it on the market earlier The United States wanted Canada's lambs, hogs, wheat and lumber, and the Canadian farmer would have to depend upon a fluctuating market, instead of a steady one, as at present. He complained that the individuality of the best Canadian wheat would be destroyed by the fact that the American millers would import it and mix it with the inferior American wheat.

Speaking of the effect of the treaty, as regards manufacturers, Dr. Morrison said that it would injure two big industries, at least, in Peterborough—the pork packing establishment and the Quaker Oats Company, both of which paid out large sums of money, and any injury to which would reflect upon the artisans.

In conclusion, Dr. Morrison expressed his opinion that the Government should go slowly in the matter and should get a mandate from the people.

Mr. Dumble ridiculed the idea that the treaty was a step in the dark, and that the Canadian people did not know how to take care of themselves. They had shown themselves capable in the fisheries negotiations and at the Hague. He did not think that the treaty would hurt the fruit growers. British Columbia was able to look after itself and the Ontario peaches and other fruit would find a late and profitable market in the United States. Mr. Dumble pointed out that when reciprocity was in force before Canadian farmers had grown millions of bushels of barley to ship across the border, at good prices. When the treaty was abrogated and a duty of thirty cents placed on barley the farmers had stopped growing this grain.

Mr. John Riddell said that he had been a farmer nearly all his life and thought he knew somethnig about it. He felt that the treaty would be a good thing for the farmers of Canada The best thing for Canada was a home market, and the next best thing was a market as close to home as possible, where the prices were good. This, he felt, would be the case under the new agreement with the United States, as it would give the farmer better prices. He gave figures to show that bigger proces were paid for dairy products in New York and Boston than in Canada.

Mr. W. C. Austin reminded the meeting that when reciprocity had been introduced, before it had been done by Lord Elgin, to prevent any desire for annexation on the part of the people of Canada. There was absolutely no annexation sentiment in Canada. He believed the treaty would mean a big thing for Canada. He was interested in North West lands and felt that the passing of the treaty would increase the value of real estate in the West. It would mean that Canada would have two markets, instead of one.

Mr. Alf. Johnston quoted from a Chicago paper the question "Is it no better to have a cash register on the boundary instead of a barrier ?" and the reply, "It depends upon who is running the cash register". He thought that the country which had brought up the question would likely be the one to run the cash register. At this point Dr. Morrison introduced the following resolution:

"That in view of the great change in the fiscal system of this country that would be brought about by putting into force the reciprocity pact between Canada and the United States, be it resolved that this Board of Trade memorialize the Government not to put the measure into effect until the people have had an opportunity of expressing their views on it at the polls. And that a copy of this resolution be forwarded to the Government at Ottawa and to Peterborough's representative in the House of Commons."

The resolution was seconded, first by Mr. R. J. Todd, who spoke against reciprocity, but it was discovered that he was not a member of the Board of Trade. Eventually the motion was seconded by Mr. T. F. Matthews.

There was a discussion as to whether a vote should be taken on it by members of the Board of Trade, or by the whole meeting ,and it was decided to have the members vote upon it, with the result that the resolution was carried by a vote of 8 to 4.

Mr. Matthews moved, seconded by Mr. A. B. Carruthers, that the meeting resolve itself into a public meeting and have another vote taken but Mr. F. D. Kerr objected, on the ground that it was not fair to have it send abroad that a public meeting held in Peterborough had decided for or against reciprocity, when there were only a few present, called together for a Board of Trade meeting. Mr. Dumble concurred in this opinion.

Mr. Matthews said that the meeting had been called as a public one and that the public had been invited to be present. However, the non-members of the Board began to withdraw and the meeting adjourned.

OBITUARY

MRS. ISABELLA ALEXANDER.

One of the oldest and most highly esteemed and respected residents of Peterborough passed away last night at the advanced age of ninety-five years, in the person of Mrs. Isabella Alexander, relict of the late Pennington Alexander. The deceased was born in Scotland in 1816 and came to Canada in 1834, having been a resident of Peterborough ever since. She was one of the first members of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church, and afterwards became identified with St. Paul's church. In latter years she was a member of Knox Church, whose services she attended regularly and faithfully. Her Christian character and many estimable qualities won her the esteem and liking of everyone, and her death will be regretted by her host of friends and acquaintances. She is survived by two sons, John of Lethbridge, and Pennington, of Peterborough, and five daughters, Mrs. J. Young of Bridgenorth, Mrs. Argue of Yarm, Ont., Mrs. W. Evans, of 304 Boswell avenue, city; Mrs. Winch of Laredo, Texas, and Mrs. J. Hopkins of North Monaghan.

The funeral will take place at 2 o'clock on Wednesday afternoon from the residence of her daughter, Mrs. Evans, Boswell avenue, to Little Lake cemetery. Rev. H. J. Keith will officiate.

GEORGE TROTTER.

One of the oldest and most widely known residents of South Monaghan has passed away, in the person of Mr. George Trotter. The deceased passed away Monday morning, Feb. 27th, about 10 o'clock, at the home of his son at Bailieboro. Mr. Trotter spent his earlier years in the village of Fraserville, in fact he lived there until a couple of years ago, when his wife died and he went to live with his son, Mr. George Trotter, Jr. The deceased was eighty years of age, and was well known in this city. He is one of the old pioneers of Fraserville. He was highly respected and the news of his death will be regretted by a large circle of friends. He leaves to mourn his loss, two sons and one daughter. The sons are Messrs. James and George, who are at present residing at Bailieboro. The daughter is Mrs. Richard Moncrief of Fraserville.

The funeral will be held on Wednesday, March 1st at 2 p.m. from the residence of his son, at Bailieboro to the Fraserville cemetery.

MANY POLICE COURT SENTENCES

Have done much to make "30-days" familiar, but the term really owes its notoriety, and certainly its popularity, to the Moon College, 282-286 Yonge street, Toronto. Their bona-fide offer of Return Fare Paid and absolutely free tuition, if unable to verify every claim and qualify A1. first-class, strictly high-grade stenographers within 30 days, by their wonderful 30-day Syl-la-bic Method, has indeed made the term "30 days" famous.

Reading—Miss Cottingham.
Mr. Srigley acted as critic.

SERVICE OF SONG

A service of song, entitled "Singing Jim", was given in the Salvation Army Temple last evening by the members of the Songster Brigade. The reading of the service was conducted by Mr. Johns, who rendered it with a master hand. Every word was so expressed that every one was sorry when it came to a close. The singing of the Songsters was also rendered in beautiful style, which gave credit to those who took part. Mr. Moynes, the Songster Leader, must be congratulated on having under his charge so capable a band of singers, and they are a credit to him. Quite a good congregation assembled. Mr Johns, at the close, gave a recitation entitled "Shot While on Patrol."

A vote of thanks was given to the reader and also the Singing Brigade, which brought a most enjoyable evening to a close, with a request that the service be given at a future date.

CANON DAVIDSON TO TAKE PART IN MISSION

Rev. Canon Davidson left this afternoon for Toronto, to take part in the general Parochial Missions, which are being held in some 35 churches in that city. The missionaries are drawn from England, United States and different parts of Canada, and include many distinguished men. Rev. Canon Davidson was invited to take duty at St. Cyprian's church on Bathurst street, north of Bloor, where there is a large and enthusiastic congregation chiefly of mechanics, the Rector being Rev. C. A. Seager. The Mission will last for two weeks, during which time there will be Mission service every evening, as well as afternoon meetings.

Rev. Canon Davidson also had the following letter sent to the members of the St. Cyprian congregation:

To All Members of St. Cyprian's Congregation, Toronto—

Fellow churchmen—It is my privilege and responsibility to conduct in St. Cyprian's a Parochial Mission in connection with the Toronto General Mission, from March 1st to 12th.

From the peculiar circumstances of my call, I cannot but be convinced that I am Divinely sent to do God's gracious work in your midst. With confidence, then, I propose to do my part, and ask you to begin now to do yours.

Thus offering our united efforts to God, His blessing will certainly descend to the quickening of our spiritual lives and to our refreshing and up-building.

As to some of the means: Pray with compelling earnestness and constancy both individually and together. Look forward and upward, and expect great things without asking just how this will come to pass. Put away absolutely all thoughts of criticism and prejudice, and that stiffness which too often marks members of the church. I hold myself free to adopt unusual means for the accomplishment of this unusual work, and I depend upon you to carry into prompt action all directions and suggestions.

Do not, however, expect excitement, or even spiritual entertainment, though the great business before us is bound to be interesting.

I ask everyone who can do so to attend the perparatory meetings, which are now being held each Sunday after the Evening Services. These are most important as helping people to get into the spirit of the Mission.

In the atmosphere of prevailing prayer, and with the spiritual forces to be exerted, great things are bound to come to pass, and your own life may be changed for ever as "Jesus of Nazareth passes by."

The Mission is a definitely personal thing, and I want you to give me the opportunity of coming into individual contact with you, for which purpose I shall be, between services, in the Vestry or at the Rectory. I cannot come to you, and so the only way is for you to come to me, in the interests of our common work.

Looking fordward to our partnership in all this,

Faithfully yours,
JOHN CHEYNE DAVIDSON.

Donations To Chimes Fund

Golden Link Rebekah Lodge, No. 81, unanimously voted $5.00 to the Chimes Fund at last meeting. The other lodges report progress in the same direction, and nearly all fraternal societies, of Peterborough, will be represented in the fund. A list of contributing societies will be published in a short time. An additional subscription has been received from Mrs. C. A. Gossage, of Gravenhurst. St. John's church Sunday school took a special collection and much enthusiastic interest was manifested. The collection amounted to $11.00. The total receipts to date for the Chimes amounts to $5,600.00.

WATCHED FOR 25 YEARS

Mr. D. M. Waters, the popular druggist, Belleville, Ont., sold his first box of Dr. Chase's Kidney and Liver Pills a quarter of a century ago and since then has noted many remarkable cures, as this medicine grew in popularity. The latest cure coming to his attention is that of Mrs. Mark Ottrey, Bay Side, Ont., who was cured of wrinkles disappear, and the glow of health returns to the cheeks.

Miss Gardiner, of Richard Hall & Son, has returned from New York with all the latest ideas for the making of the New Spring Garments.

A Working Man's Opinion Of The Reciprocity Pact

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—The manufacturer and the farmer have got busy considering whether this reciprocity bill will be beneficial or detrimental to their interests. The exhibition of selfishness displayed has brought me to the conclusion that patriotism, amongst a number of our merchants and manufacturers is at a very low ebb, indeed. Let us workingmen be not carried away in this matter by partyism and the glaring headlines of party press, who are adopting the tactics of yellow journalism. Mr. Fielding made the remark in the House last week that this bill is for the benefit of the masses and not the classes.

What do the workingmen, who constitute the masses, require? Let us look into this matter and try and find out what this bill is going to do in order to promote our requirements.

In the first place, will this bill reduce the cost of living? Will it be a benefit for us to get peaches, berries and other fruit at one-half what we have to pay at present? Such will be the case; if not, why the "holler" from the fruit growers association. It might be asked how about apples. How many ordinary workingmen can afford to buy apples under the present conditions and that is only one line of fruit that we would be called on to pay more for.

Last week eggs were retailed in New York at 20c. per dozen and it is expected that they will sell at 12 1-2 cents before Easter, while we are paying from 30 to 35 cents a dozen. The fact that some Liberals who have been able to make themselves independently rich out of a burdensome tax upon the consumer object is a strong argument in favour of this bill.

What the Manufacturers' Association required was an abundant supply of labour and the government gave it to them. What we require is an abundant supply and cheaper food. When they (the manufacturers) used the revenue of our country to procure what they required, what did our protests amount to? Why will some of them make such a howl and bolt from the party because the cost of living is going to be reduced for the benefit of the labouring classes.

I have given you a few reasons why this bill looks good to me. I do not look at this as a political question. It may or may not be hard for the member of this constituency to decide between his own interest, that of the country, and theinterest of those who elected him. I know not. My interests and the interests of the masses are the best interests of the country.

Yours truly,
WORKINGMAN.

An Address On "Saturn"

The public is again reminded of address to be given to-night at the meeting of the Peterborough centre of the Royal Astronomical Society, upon the subject of Saturn, the to rearrange stock and re-mark goods.

Everything will be ticketed with the Sale price marked in plain figures.

The death of Mr. H. LeBrun, senior member of the firm of H. LeBrun & Co., has made it necessary in order to settle the estate, that the entire stock of high-grade clothing and furnishings be converted into what cash it will bring at once, so that a settlement can be made between Mr. LeBrun's heirs and Mr. Joseph Picard (junior member of the firm.)

The store will be closed for three days, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, March 1st, 2nd and 3rd, to rearrange stock for satisfactory handling of the crowds and to re-mark goods. The doors will be thrown open at 9 a. m. Saturday, March 4th, on the greatest sale ever known in this part of the country. There will be plenty of competent salespeople to wait upon the crowds. Everything will be displayed and marked in plain figures so that you can inspect goods and prices at your leisure.

Costs and real values have not been considered in marking prices for this sale. Goods must be sold—and sold in the quickest possible time—let them bring what they will. The entire stock must be sold in Ten Days. Quick action is what we want so we offer the public the lowest prices ever known on high-class goods such as this store sells.

In order to give people living at a distance an equal chance, the sale will not open until 9 a. m. Railroad fare paid to purchasers of $25.00 or over, who come within 25 miles. Nothing like it ever happened before. It's the great money saving opportunity of the times. Shrewd people will be on hand at the opening hour. No goods sold to dealers before Monday, March 6

IN THE WORLD OF SPORT

REVIEW-EXAMINER GAME AT THE RINK TO-NIGHT

The tit-bit of the hockey season, the classiest exhibition of this or any other year, will take place at Brock street rink at 8 o'clock to-night when the famous and blood-thirsty annual game of hockey between the Review and Examiner sevens will be perpetrated. The announcement may come with surprising suddenness to the dear public, but the fact is that both teams have been secretly training for the game for months and will go out to-night in the pink of condition. The last time the two teams met the Review suffered a crushing and humiliating defeat and the Examiner seven believes that history will repeat itself to-night. A number of faces new to the hockey firmament will be introduced and some startling revelations in inside hockey will be pulled off. It will not be decided until the two teams meet at the ring-side (beg pardon the rink side), whether the game will be under Greco-Roman or catch-ascatch-can rules probably a melange of both. The public is cordially invited to attend the obsequies of the Review team. There will be no admission charge. Everybody is welcome. People with a mania for throwing lemons or decayed fruit will alone be excepted. The teams will be as follows:

Review		Examiner
	Goal
Strathcona Wilson		Rink Rat Craig
	Point
Tecumseh Dobbin		Spike Anglesey
	Cover-Point
Lofty Jack Thompson
		Linotype Johnson
	Rover
Dr. North Pole Cook
		Young's Point Heard
	Centre
Walt Mason Curtis
		East City Swanston
	Left Wing
Speed Boy Little		Gee Whittaker
	Right Wing
Lake Shore		Some Speed Reynolds

Don't miss the press hockey match to-night at 8 o'clock. Mr. Sam Little, the Review funny man, will give an exhibition of fancy skating and barrel jumping. Mr. Little will appear in green tights 15 minutes before the game.

Peterborough Ladies Won Game In Lakefield

The Peterborough Ladies' Hockey team journeyed to Lakefield last night and played an interesting game with the Ladies' team of that village. The Peterborough ladies had little difficulty in proving their superiority at the great winter game, and won a decisive victory by 6 goals to 1, leading at half-time by 2 to 0. Two 'bus loads went out from Peterborough and the visitors were most hospitably entertained by the Lakefield ladies. In the first half Miss Marjorie Mann scored twice for Peterborough, while Lakefield were blanked. In the second half Miss Brown scored first, followed by two counters by Miss O. Cavanagh. Miss Simpson, at this stage succeeded in scoring Lakefield's only goal. Miss Rita Cavanagh scored again for Peterborough before time was called. Miss Brown played a splendid game for Peterborough, and Miss Graham was a star goal minder. Miss Simpson was Lakefield's best player. Mr. Harry Simpson of Lakefield, was a very satisfactory referee. The teams were:

Three Teams Are Tied In The Bank League

Yesterday afternoon's game in the Bank League, instead of settling the championship, left three teams tied for the title, and two more games will be necessary to decide the issue. A win for the Ottawa-Dominion team would have meant their championship, but the Bank of Montreal outfit spilled the beans by beating the combination 3 goals to 2, and, as a result, the Dominion-Ottawa, Royal-Commerce and Montreal teams are tied for the championship. The games will be played this week. Montreal won the bye and go into the finals on Saturday against the winner of the Royal, Commerce-Ottawa, Dominion game on Thursday. Yesterday's game was a hard-fought exhibition, with honours even, and the odd goal might as easily have gone to the losers as to the winners on the play. It was 2-2 at half-time. Fred Kelly refereed. The teams were as follows:

Montreal—Goal, Sawers, point, Radcliffe; cover, Perks; forwards, Elliott, Fitzgerald, Wilson.

Dominion-Ottawa—Goal, Sheffield; point, Ross; cover, Quinlan; forwards Thompson, Corkery and Cook.

CURLING

Five rinks of the local curlers left for Toronto this morning to engage in a friendly match with the Victoria Club. They are billed to play this afternoon and evening. The skips for the local rinks are as follows: Messrs. Neil, Matthews, Giroux, Foote, McIlroy.

The local Bonspiel commences on Wednesday, March 1.

ZEKE BARNES.

Old Zeke Barnes to the city rode
On that thar nag o' his,
An' by his cunnin' look you knowed
That he wus out for biz.
'Twus swoppin' day upon the squar',
An' many plugs wus gethered thar.

He praised the fine p'ints o' the nag
An' her long pedergree.
He traced her breed with words o' brag
To sires that used to be.
Sez he, "Yes, she's a mare o' blood,
As fine as on four huffs has stood!"

Abe Scott winked in his wicked way,
His grin you should ha' seen.
He viewed the old flea bitten gray,
Ewe necked an' long an' lean.
"But ain't it best to have," sez he,
"More hoss an' less o' pedergree?"

L'ENVOY.

Indeed! An' when some folks I see—

I think what's best for them to do
Is jest to be some punkins too.

Transparent Bodies.

Perfectly transparent bodies are only visible by virtue of nonuniform illumination, and in uniform illumination they become absolutely invisible.

Blindfeld.

Nine persons out of ten would probably give the derivation of blind as coming directly from blind and fold from the practice of folding a cloth round the eyes, as in the game of blind man's buff. The word has, however, nothing to do with fold, but means felled or struck blind and might be written blindfelled.

Old Time Cowboys.

In the Revolutionary war the "cowboys" were a set of Tories in Westchester county, N. Y., popularly so called, because of the brutal roughness with which they treated their Whig or rebel neighbors.

Origin of Leap Year.

Leap year originated with the astronomers of Julius Caesar, 46 B. C. They fixed the solar year at 365 days 6 hours, comprising, as they thought, the period from one vernal equinox to another. The six hours were set aside and at the end of four years, forming a day, the fourth year was made to consist of 366 days. The day thus added was placed a day before the 24th of February, the day with us being Feb. 29.

Only one existing reptile can sustain itself in the air. This is the flying dragon of the East Indies. It has no real wings, but can glide from tree to tree like a flying squirrel.

Macbeth.

Macbeth's action as outlined by Shakespeare was in the main true to the facts. After murdering his kinsman, Duncan I., in 1040 he succeeded in holding his usurped throne for seventeen years. In 1057 he was killed at Lumphanum, and Malcolm III., son of Duncan, ascended the throne that had been wrested from his father.

The American Method

Of Courting And Its Advantages Over The European Method

By JAMES D. BRODIE

Copyright, 1911, by American Press Association.

Count Villiers was a man of the world—not a young man, frequenting clubs, theaters and other such places for getting away with the time pleasantly, but an elderly person who was thinking about the disposition of his children to their greatest advantage. One morning the count called his daughter Louise into his study and was standing with parted coattails before a fireplace when she entered.

"You will be eighteen next week, I believe, Louise?" he said, prefixing the remark with an ahem, indicating that he was simply preparing the way for an important announcement.

"Yes, papa."

"You are aware that our estates, being small in proportion to the antiquity of the family title and there being four girls to be provided for, one must look out for matrimonial advantages. Now, I have recently met an American in whom I became interested. He is younger than I, but you know I have a penchant for young men. I was telling him the other day about our family when he interrupted me by saying:

"'Why will you not give me one of your daughters for a wife, count?'

"These Americans are very blunt, you know, so I did not take offense at his crude way of making his application. Besides, he had never seen you or your sisters. So I merely smiled and went on with what I was saying. But he stopped me to repeat his request. Then I took the matter up seriously and asked him some questions about his income.

"'Oh, we Americans don't marry that way,' he replied.' 'We marry for love. But that doesn't mean that we wait to be struck with it as by lightning. If we wish to marry we look about us for what we're after. If a girl accepts she takes the man for better or for worse.'

"I replied that I had but one daughter of a marriageable age and I would be happy to introduce him to her. He will call this afternoon."

"Yes, papa," was the laconic response, though it was all that was expected from a French girl to whom a matrimonial plan had been announced, and she demurely walked out of the room.

The same afternoon a card was carried in by a butler on which was engraved the name of George Caruthers, Colorado Springs, U. S. A. The countess welcomed the caller and after a few minutes Mlle. Louise entered. The position of a young lady of the French aristocracy looked over by a commoner from the wild and woolly west for a matrimonial purpose is not conducive to a show off of any of her points except her beauty—that is, if she has any. Mr. Caruthers talked with the countess and cast an occasional glance at Louise. Every glance made her feel more uncomfortable, and when the suitor rose to go it was plain that the visit had been a failure.

"BRAT THIS EUROPEAN METHOD OF COURTING."

A few days later the count announced to his daughter that he had other plans for her than a marriage with the American, which the girl well knew meant that Mr. Caruthers had declined her for a wife.

Some months later the American minister gave a ball, to which Mr. Caruthers, Count and Countess Villiers and their oldest daughter—the only one yet introduced into society—were invited. Mr. Caruthers was standing with his arms clasped behind him looking at the passing throng when he felt a rap on his knuckles. Turning, he saw Louise Villiers, who had tapped him with her fan, looking up at him with a very pleasant smile.

"Good evening, monsieur," she said. "You look bored. Doubtless you are wishing yourself back in your own country."

What a change from the Mlle. Villiers who had sat up stiffly for half an hour without speaking a word! Caruthers should have known that there was a vast difference between a girl trotted out to be shown like a broncho for sale and the same person free from such embarrassment. But he did not consider the cause, nor did it occur to him that he had declined to accept this same girl for a wife. The only obvious thing about it all was that during his call she was uninteresting, while now she was very charming.

Had he known the sex better he would have taken warning at that seductive smile, those bright eyes turned up at him so enchantingly. But one thought possessed him, that he had made a mistake, a very natural one under the circumstances, and that perhaps, after all, he would change his mind and make a second application.

A few days later Louise was again called into her father's study.

"Louise," he said, "I have a note from Mr. Caruthers in which he makes a formal application for your hand. He protests against what he calls our effete customs in such matters, but, since he must defer to them, tells me that he has made a fortune in mines in his country and will be able to give you every luxury."

"Yes, papa."

"I have told him that his offer is favorably considered, but that, notwithstanding our marriages in France are arranged differently from those in America, I must leave the matter in your hands. He is to consider himself permitted to woo and win you."

"Yes, papa."

"That's all. You may go."

Perhaps the father of this young lady was not sufficiently prone to consider that about her age girls are liable to change from docility under parental authority to an assertion of independence. Louise knew that this talk about leaving her to accept or decline the suitor as she liked was absurd. And the count knew it too. When she left him he felt assured that she would accept Mr. Caruthers, and he dismissed the matter from his mind as an accomplished fact.

Since the suitor found himself obliged to adopt the European matrimonial method he concluded to do it all that way. He drove up to the chateau one afternoon and, going in, called for Mlle. Villiers. She came downstairs to meet him in appearance at least a very different person from the girl who had been looked over by him on their first meeting. She was graciousness itself. There was nothing of embarrassment. Caruthers did not waste much time in coming to the object of his visit. The words of his proposal were formal; but, notwithstanding he was a blunderer, he was a true man and a modest one. His heart was in what he said with a frankness truly American.

The girl waited until he had finished, then said:

"The honor you have done me, M Caruthers, is gratifying in the extreme, but I must beg leave to decline it."

Caruthers, who had supposed the count's assurance that his offer was considered favorably as tantamount to an acceptance, was startled. He was not only startled, but disappointed—indeed, he was very much disappointed. Then it occurred to him that while there are different matrimonial customs in different countries the human heart is the same everywhere. This young girl who had been brought up to consider herself bound to go where she was given had declared her independence. And, while before he was not quite sure he wanted her, he was now quite sure that he wanted her very much.

The next morning Caruthers called on the count and requested him to forego any attempt to interfere with his daughter's decision. The count looked very grave, listened with respectful attention and bowed his visitor out with great ceremony. Then he called Louise into his study and gave her a lecture on the sin of young ladies throwing over advantageous offers provided for them by their fathers. When the harangue was finished Louise arose and walked out of the room, her only reply being:

"Yes, papa."

When Mr. Caruthers returned to his room, he sat himself down in an easy chair and, snappishly biting off the end of a cigar, remarked to himself:

"Drat this European way of courting! I've made an ass of myself for not doing the job in accordance with American methods. What I've done must be undone, and when it's undone I must begin all over again. Now one of three things are to be considered. Either she wants me or doesn't want me or doesn't know whether she wants me or not. The natural supposition is that she doesn't want me, and doesn't want me bad. Otherwise she would not have rebelled against her father's orders. But by the American method the first thing for a fellow to find out is whether he has any chance or not."

Taking a seat before a writing desk, he wrote a note to the young lady who had rejected him, asking her if he might consider himself a friend. He received a reply that he might. So he called, acting during the call as if he considered the matrimonial part of the matter ended. During several months of visiting and being with the young lady at various gay world happenings he became more and more inattentive to her and at last took up with one of his own countrywomen.

This was too much for the girl who had rejected him. A slight knitting of the brows, a decided coolness when he offered her some attention, showed him that she was piqued, and after that he had fairly plain sailing.

"Girls are like fish," he said to himself. "Some may be caught trolling with a spoon, some only in deep water and some in shallow lagoons. Some will bite at a bit of salt pork, but the most skittish can only be caught with a fly and must be played a long while before landed."

Caruthers finally landed Louise on what he was pleased to call the American method. He says that the European style may do for Europeans, but for Americans it's like everything else in Europe, old fashioned. He boasts that his wife was naturally American in her proclivities or he and she would never have made a match.

The Close of Hostilities

War Went Out With a Double Love Affair

By EVELYN PARKHURST

Copyright, 1911, by American Press Association.

Jack Merryweather and Tom Erskine, midshipmen chums, serving on the United States gunboat Monongahela, watching Charleston harbor for blockade runners during the civil war, were two of the most pronounced scapegraces America has ever produced.

Well, the Confederacy collapsed, the war ended, and the Monongahela steamed up past Forts Sumter and Moultrie, where the fight had opened four years before, to the city of Charleston. On different days different lots of officers went ashore, and when their turn came Merryweather and Erskine applied for shore leave together.

"I wish you two young gentlemen to understand," said the captain, "that these southerners, having been obliged to give up all they have been fighting for, are not expected to be very pleasantly disposed. You are to be careful not to do anything to irritate them, but more especially not to get yourselves into trouble. Do you understand?"

"ALL RIGHT," SAID THE SENTRY.

"Yes, sir."

They understood, but what was the use of their understanding when they were going ashore for the very purpose of disobeying the admonition. The first thing they did was to borrow saddle horses from some army officers. The reason they wished to ride was that, being sailors, a horse was the article about which they had the least knowledge. Both landed in the dirt, so they returned their horses and hired a "rig." Being used to a tiller, they were able to guide the animal past obstacles appearing in their way. They drove out on one of the roads in the environs of Charleston.

Beside the road, on foot, from the opposite direction, came a couple of girls. Neither was over sixteen, and one of them, though well grown, was still younger. Seeing the Yankee boy officers in the wagon, the girls in order to show their contempt put their parasols before their faces.

"Jiminy!" cried Jack. "How homely those girls must be!"

He had spoken to be heard, and his speech elicited a reply. One of them turned, lowered her parasol and made "a face" at him.

"Who'd have thought it! Pretty as a peach!" was Jack's retort.

"I don't believe the other one would show up like that," said Tom.

Whereupon "the other one" made the same maneuver as her companion.

"By Jove!" cried Tom enthusiastically. "Isn't she a beauty?"

Then from behind the parasols came a giggle.

The horse had been pulled down to a stop, and the girls were walking very slowly in the opposite direction.

"The war's over," said Jack to Tom, but very loud.

This elicited no response, and the girls passed out of hearing.

"Turn him around," said Tom to Jack, who held the reins.

Now, when two pretty girls, fifteen and sixteen, come upon two fine looking young fellows, eighteen and nineteen years old, especially when the latter wear a becoming uniform, even at the termination of a bloody war in which they have been sympathizers if not actors on opposite sides, nature is bound to contrive a way to break down any barriers that may loom up between them. The girls were daughters of planters whose plantations adjoined. The oldest, Florence St. Clair, was a brunette with what Jack called a hawser of black hair hanging down her back. The younger, Jeannette Dickinson, was a blond—unusual in the south—with light fluffy tresses gathered at the back of the neck and ending in a single curl resting lovingly on her shoulders. Driving along beside the girls, the boys skirmished with them, paying them compliments, which the girls returned with such terms as vandals, robbers, cutthroats, pirates.

However, the compliments prevailed over the epithets, and since the girls were going some distance they were at last induced to accept of a back seat in the wagon that they might be transported to their destination.

It would seem that such a flourish of antagonism consequent upon being on different sides of the great struggle would have endured sufficiently to prevent these young things from taking part in the farrago of attempts for a future meeting. And it is strange that this was the only evidence of foresight among them. The girls especially should have been sent to the nursery, where they would be out of mischief. However, they were in no actual danger unless it might be of an innocent love affair with a Yankee officer, for there were not two more honorable boys in the world than Jack Merryweather and Tom Erskine. They were simply thoughtless. Within half an hour after the party had met a trysting place for the future had been designated and the negro mammy of Miss St. Claire had been designated as a medium of communication. The boys promised to meet their new friends on their next liberty day and would send word through the negress.

They were nearing the girls' destination when a couple of horsemen in the uniform of Confederate officers were seen coming toward them.

"My goodness gracious!" exclaimed Jeannette Dickinson. "If that isn't father coming!"

"Port your helm, Jack!" cried Tom.

As soon as it could be done the horse was turned, the whip applied, and they were galloping in the opposite direction. "I didn't dream father would be home so soon," said Jeannette, from whose cheeks the blood had departed.

The Confederates had come near enough to distinguish the color of the uniform the middies were and to see that it was not gray. Moreover, the sudden turn excited their suspicions. They gave chase.

Up to this point there had been nothing to place the party in a false position, but in this flight there was a great deal to serve that purpose. The fugitives were handicapped by a single horse dragging a wagon and four people, while their pursuers each had an animal to carry him.

"Jack," said Tom, "if we're caught the consequences to these girls will be awful."

"There's a camp ahead," replied Jack. "If we can reach it we may get the guard to hold our pursuers."

Just before they reached the camp the road turned and gave them a chance for a bit of conversation with the sentry on post without being seen by the Confederates.

"Hold those two officers coming," said Tom hurriedly. "We don't wish them to catch us with these girls."

"All right," said the sentry, a boy no older than themselves, with a sympathetic grin on his face.

The slowing up brought the pursuers so near that the girls' parasols that had been brought into requisition to screen them from their "enemies" were now unfurled to the rear to screen them from their friends. As they dashed away they heard a "Halt!" from the middle of the road in their rear, and the sound of horses' hoofs ceased. Nor did they hear them again. What the sentinel did to delay the officers they did not know. He probably demanded their passes and spent an inordinately long time reading them. At any rate, the boys had ample time to put the girls down, to get to their homes as best they could, while the middies drove back to town by a circuitous route.

"By Jove," exclaimed Jack, drawing a long breath after they had left their friends, "that's the closest call I ever had! We'll drop this business right here."

"We will that," replied Tom. "What sort of position would it be for two officers of the United States navy to be caught mixed up with a couple of little girls in short dresses?"

"That would be nothing to putting the girls in an equivocal position."

This was very fine talk, and the boys might have possibly, considering that their honor was at stake, adhered to their resolution had not a joint letter addressed to "Captain John Merryweather" come for them from the girls stating that they would be walking on the road where the meeting had occurred at a certain hour on a certain day.

"It's a wonder they didn't address you as admiral," said Tom.

"Or at least commodore," was the reply.

Luckily or unluckily as the affair was destined to eventuate, the middies received shore leave on the day appointed for their meeting.

"We won't take any kind of a craft," said Jack. "We've had enough of being aboard the same rig together. Better be where we can all swim in opposite directions."

The meeting took place as arranged. Jack paired off with Florence St. Clair and Tom with Jeannette Dickinson. Trust young people for innocent behavior. At that age—the mating age—there is the most purity. There were several of these meetings while the Monongahela remained at Charleston. The pitcher that goes often to the well is at last broken. One of the meetings was finally reported, and the girls were remanded to close confinement, but there was a zest about the affair that endured and several years later bore fruit.

There are two retired naval officers living in Washington, the one an admiral and the other a captain, who meet often at the Army and Navy club. Again and again they go over the escapade in Charleston harbor that gained them their wives, and them the admiral will say:

"What ninnies we were, Tom!"

"Ninnies! We should have been taken back on board the ship and flogged within an inch of our lives."

"But, after all, wasn't it delightful to be fools? I'd like to be a fool again."

"Nothing like it. What grog do you take this evening, admiral?"

Hard Hit.

Lord Fitzfoodle, casting himself on his knees before Araminta, gave utterance to the following: "Oh, that I could snatch a pine from some primeval forest! I would sharpen the end with my penknife, dip it in the molten crater of Vesuvius and write upon the azure wall of heaven in letters of living fire, 'Araminta, I love thee!'"

Examiner's Want Ads. Get Results

There is no doubt of the fact that Examiner want ads. are the surest and quickest means of bringing together missing articles and their owners. Yesterday a lady who had lost a locket wisely called upon the advertising columns of the Examiner to recover it for her and her faith was justified almost immediately as the locket came back to the Examiner to-day. One small want ad. did the trick. See the point?

WERE ENTERTAINED

The members of All Saints' Senior Girls' Guild had an enjoyable sleigh drive last night to the home of Mrs. Arnott, North Monaghan, where they were most hospitably entertained. The evening was very pleasantly spent in games and music and refreshments were served, the result being a programme that was enjoyed by every one.

SIFTON ON THE PACT

Chairman of Conservation and Hon. Mr. Fisher Debate the Question of Reciprocity in House

MR. FISHER'S REPLY

Ottawa, March 1.—With Minister pitted against ex-Minister, the Commons yesterday heard the soundest argument and the best expert opinion yet advanced for and against the reciprocity agreement, in the light of its actual economic effect upon the Canadian people. The day's debate, replete with interest throughout, opened with the somewhat sensational declaration by Hon. Clifford Sifton, who, for twenty-three years has represented Brandon in the Liberal interests, and who for nine years was Minister of the Interior, that he could not follow his friends of the Government in this new and radical change of fiscal policy. In a compact and closely-reasoned speech of two hours' duration the ex-Minister gave the reasons for his course and furnished practically the only logical criticism that has yet been offered to the agreement. In comparison the arguments advanced from the other side of the House by Messrs. Borden and Foster were admittedly weak and ineffective. Mr. Sifton was the first critic to deal with the details of the agreement in their economic upset.

Almost in his first sentence did the ex-Minister make plain his attitude. He regretted that on a subject so important he could not follow the lead of the party with which he had been identified all his life.

In the Liberal reciprocity campaign of twenty years ago he had, he said, participated, but almost before the campaign was over he had come to believe that the party was wrong. Since then he had steadily set himself against reciprocity.

Mr. Sifton declared that he had made no mystery about his opinion, although he had not tried to force it upon his political friends.

"We don't leave our party for a small reason," said Mr. Sifton, "but we adhere to a party because, in general, it adheres to principles in which we believe."

But when there is a basic difference, Mr. Sifton thought it time that political allegiance be dissolved.

"That is the position in which I find myself to-day. I take the only course possible for me, however painful it may be."

Mr. Sifton went on to criticise the conduct of the Government in this deal. In a matter of this importance the fullest enquiry is usually made—for instance, at the time of the German question 30,000 enquiries were made.

"In this case I believe we should have consulted the most-favored nations," he said. But in this case Mr. Sifton showed how niggardly the Government had been furnishing information. Members had had to dig their statistics out of various blue books as best they could.

Mr. Fielding, too, had failed to argue the merits of the question, he thought.

"I dissent altogether with the proposition that Canadians have been in favor of reciprocity for the past forty years," declared Mr. Sifton.

There had, however, he explained, been several attempts at an approachment. But when it came to the election of 1908, neither party made the least mention of reciprocity.

"I agree that the Government has had no mandate to make these proposals," went on the ex-Minister.

"The Government, it was true, was not elected to pass upon specific measures. They have to exercise a discretion within the constitution, but they abused it in turning away from a policy that had three times been discussed, debated and approved.

"Nothing has given Canada such a shock as that four or five gentlemen, of their own will can commit this country to so radical a change. I do not think that there can be a more dangerous condition," was Mr. Sifton's assertion.

This Government had three planks in its platform—British preference, reduced duties on some articles used by farmers, and a reduction on raw material used by manufacturers. But the underlying principle was still protection. In 1900 the people endorsed the tariff of 1897.

"I am firmly convinced that the system was the best for Canada, and one which it will be unsafe radically to change," went on Mr. Sifton, who proceeded to deal with the Reciprocity reference.

He believed there was some idea of increasing it, but he would not support any substantial increase at the expense of the Canadian manufacturer.

As a result, in the last fifteen years, the Dominion has prospered more than any country on earth. Man for man, Canadians were better off than any equal population. The farmers were prosperous.

A few "hear-hears" emanated from the silence in which the Government watched the bolt of the man from Brandon.

A blue book by the Minister of Labor furnished Mr. Sifton valuable statistics of the movement of prices from 1890 to 1899. Grain had risen 49 per cent., dairy produce 33 per cents., cattle 48 per cent., and, what the farmer buys, woollen goods up 43 per cent., boots 25 per cent., etc. The farmer therefore, was getting more than his share of the general prosperity.

"Now, the proposition is made that we revolutionize this policy which has worked so auspiciously. What will be the result? Individuals will suffer greatly. As to the general prosperity, the development of our resources is so vast that, no mistake could prevent Canada making enormous advance," argued the speaker.

Mr. Sifton could not see why certain innocent industries should be sacrificed. He firmly believed that the beef packing industry would be destroyed.

"The Canadian packer could no more stand up against the beef trust than I could against this building if it fell on me," he put it.

As to Mr. Burrell's presentation of the disaster to the fruit and vegetable growers in the west, no answer had been attempted by the Government.

Then such industries as the Quaker Oats factory at Peterboro would be curtailed 60 to 70 per cent. They have been manufacturing mainly for export, and formed a most advantageous industry for this country.

"These industries were formed because it was thought the fiscal policy of Canada was settled. (Conservative applause).

"Now, is it reasonable that people will invest their money in building factories in this country unless they receive a definite assurance that what is happening now will not happen again? And I do not see how they can receive such assurance," was the next onslaught.

"One short year ago the United States was brandishing a club over our head. Now they say they are friendly. How long will they remain so? At any time, a thousand things may cause friction serious enough to make it easy for an American political party to court popularity by moving against Canada. Certainly, we are putting our head in a noose," said Mr. Sifton, amid cheers.

Mr. Sifton went into figures. Hogs had prevailed at higher prices in the Canadian market than in the States. Lambs had brought less at Chicago. Only for the higher grade of butter was the American price more than the Canadian.

Mr. Sifton could see no gain for the farmer even if present market conditions were not demoralized. This agreement meant practically free trade in agricultural products. The market would be absolutely dominated by the United States and the most favored nations.

Mr. Fisher's reply to Mr. Sifton was courteous. He congratulated his colleague on the manner in which he presented his convictions to the House. He valued party really as much as Mr. Sifton, but thought that the country came before the party, and it was a man's duty to declare his position when he differed on a vital question for his party. In bringing down the reciprocity agreement Mr. Fisher thought the Government was continuing its wise and farseeing administration of the affairs of the country.

"But if I did believe with the member for Brandon," said Mr. Fisher, "I, too, would resign my seat on and oppose this resolution."

Mr. Fisher challenged the statement made by Mr. Sifton that the Government had not fully informed itself on the question, and had not provided the country with full information. It was all very well to consult one industry, and base an argument on the conditions affecting that industry. An industry regarded a tariff from the point of view of profit, whereas the Government had to regard a schedule as it affected the industry concerned, and every other industry in the country.

Mr. Fisher answered the charge of the member for Brandon that the Government had revived reciprocity, by pointing out that when the present Government assumed office, the Prime Minister sent a joint high commission, which went to Washington to negotiate a trade treaty. It failed in this, and the announcement was made that any future proposals would have to come from the United States.

The Minister of Agriculture criticised Mr. Sifton's statement that he would have been justified in standing pat when President Taft was about to enforce the provisoon for the imposition of the maximum clause in the Payne-Aldrich tariff, when a few immaterial concessions prevented a state of non-intercourse in commerce existing between the two countries.

In conclusion Mr. Fisher argued that it was an insult to the Canadian people to suppose that they would be influenced by trading with the United States when the motherland had a trade largely in excess of that of Canada.

W. M. German (Welland) moved the adjournment, and the debate will be resumed on Thursday. The House does not sit on Ash Wednesday.

No Interment of Bait Law.

St. John's, Nfld., March 1.—The action of the Government in subsidizing cold storage plans for fish to be conducted at St. John's and at several other places in the colony by an American firm has brought protests from the followers of the former Premier, Sir Robert Bond, in the Colonial Assembly, who argue that the granting of the subsidy to Americans is the first step toward an abandonment of the colony's treaty rights, and has nullified the Newfoundland bait law.

In answer to a memorial from the St. John's Board of Trade the Premier, Sir Edward Morris, declared that the Government has in no wise impaired the effectiveness of the bait law. To confirm his contentions, he suggested the matter be placed before a committee of lawyers without partisan interest, and the lawyers in their decision confirmed the Premier's view.

Buy Painting For Nation.

London, March 1.—The announcement that the Marquis of Lansdowne's famous Rembrandt "The Mill" is going to America has been followed with the suggestion that the picture be acquired for the national gallery by public subscription.

Sir Charles Holroyd, director of the national gallery, who has been recalled from Vienna to conduct such a campaign, said yesterday that the marquis had offered the nation the refusal of the work, and promised $25,000 towards its purchase. Sir Charles, however, despaired of raising the amount necessary, unless some millionaire was prepared to give the bulk of the sum, as in the recent case of Holbein's "Duchess of Milan," when $225,000 was given by an anonymous contributor.

It is stated that an American collector has offered $500,000 for "The Mill."

Government Telegraph Line.

Battleford, Sask., March 1.—Following representations made by the Board of Trade, Inspector McDonald has completed an investigation, covering the proposed construction of a Government telegraph line between Battleford and Lake Lacronne, 250 miles north.

The proposed line will serve an immense area which is being rapidly settled up, owing to a large block of homestead land having recently been thrown open. Inspector McDonald recommends the construction of a part of this line this year.

IS THE VOTE COMING?

United States Senate May Ballot on the Reciprocity Bill—Situation is Very Strained in Capital

SOME DEVELOPMENTS

Washington, March 1.—Late last night it was reported in Washington political circles that the extraordinary developments of the day in arranging for clearing off the balance of the sessional program in the Senate was being supplemented by a "gentleman's agreement" that a vote on reciprocity should be taken on Saturday morning, just before Congress expires. The details of this are still to be arranged, but such an event is the logical outcome of the present situation.

Wearied by an all-night filibuster and a long day, during which some progress was made, the Senators broke the deadlock late yesterday afternoon and assured the completion of the session's business with the possible exception of the reciprocity bill. When the terms of agreement developed at the six o'clock adjournment no mention was made of reciprocity, and presumably it is left to take its chance after to-day.

The President has declared that in view of the promised support of a majority he would not accept a manipulated defeat of the bill at this session, such as was sought to be arranged on Monday, as a reason for obviating an extra session. If the bill is trimmed down to reciprocity and magazine postage for the last two days of the session, the former might yet be adopted in view of the large sentiment apparently existing for it and the certainty of an extra session if it goes over. This could be facilitated by placating the insurgents through the holding over of the proposal to increase magazine postage.

Poisons Mother, Nephew and Self.

Philadelphia, March 1.—Miss Jeannette Lewis, aged 27 years, yesterday poisoned her mother, Mrs. Sarah Lewis, aged 57, and her nephew, Ed. B. Midlen, jr., aged nine years, by administering cyanide of potassium, and afterward committed suicide with the deadly drug.

The tragedy occurred at the home of Edward B. Midlen, at Pelham, a suburb, and it is believed that the young woman was crazed by grief over the death on Sunday night of a married sister.

Another Break In Toronto.

Toronto, March 1.—There is another break in the intake pipe, and it is about 150 feet further from the shore than the former break. Some tremendous force, thought to be storm-driven ice, had pulled one end of a section entirely clear of the rest and placed it about 15 feet away. It has cut the bolts holding the sections together as though severed by a sharp chisel, but so far as could be ascertained, had caused no damage to the flanges or the pipe.

New Lighthouse Steamer.

Kingston, March 1.—The Kingston Shipbuilding Co. has been awarded the contract of building the steamer Bellechasse, the second lighthouse steamer which the Government has ordered from the company. It will be a twin screw survey inspection vessel for the St. Lawrence ship channel service below Quebec. 130 feet long, 27 feet beam, and 13.6 moulded depth.

West Wants Laborers.

Winnipeg, March 1.—Estimates prepared here from information furnished by railway and immigration officials indicate that at least 35,000 laborers will be required in the west this year. Each of three big railway companies will be looking for about 5,000 men, and more than 20,000 experienced and inexperienced will be needed on farms.

Better Farming Special.

Tilbury, March 1.—The first day's operation of the better farming special, which stopped at Essex, Comber, Leamington and Fletcher, was an unqualified success. Over one thousand people, nearly all farmers, took advantage of the lectures on seed improvement, drainage, dairying, fruit, bacteriology, etc.

Three Years In the Pen.

Montreal, March 1.—Charles Childern, who was found guilty of stabbing Thomas Shea in a fight on Chatham street on Feb. 4, was yesterday sentenced by Judge Choquette to three years in the penitentiary. Childern has already been in prison fifteen times for various offences in the past five years.

Reorganizing the Fish Trust.

Chicago, March 1.—Reorganization plans of the Booth Fish Co., known as the "fish trust," before its failure two years ago, include the sale of $5,000,000 six per cent. first mortgage bonds. The Northern Fisheries Co., a salmon-handling concern, will be purchased.

Immigrant With Amati Violin.

Montreal, March 1.—Excitement was caused at the Windsor Station yesterday by finding what is believed to be a genuine "Amati" violin. It was brought over from Italy by some immigrant. It bears inside the label "Nicolaus Amatus Fecit Cremona, 1636."

Local dealers estimate the value of the way from $100 to $3,000.

Lieut.-Col. McArthur Dead.

Montreal, March 1.—Lieut.-Col. McArthur died at his late residence, 67 St. Matthew street, yesterday, at the age of 74 years.

Lieut.-Col. McArthur was a well-known military man and a strong Conservative. He succeeded his father as president of the firm of Alex McArthur & Co., of paper and roofing material. He was one of the oldest members of the old Ali-Montreal Cavalry, and later on commanded the Duke of Connaught's Royal Canadian Hussars. He leaves two sisters.

Appreciation

1910 was a banner year with us, but 1911 carries even greater promise, because we have thousands of patients in this city and vicinity who are wearing glasses prescribed by us, many of whom could not be fitted elsewhere, and we know that they will not lose an opportunity of speaking a good word for us.

We take this occasion to acknowledge our indebtedness to our friends and patrons, our appreciation of their good will and faith in us, which have helped to make our success so great. We need not disguise the fact that we believe that we have deserved well of you. That if you have had confidence in us and have bestowed upon us your patronage it is because we have done something to warrant it. We have done "the best we could" and we purpose to keep right on doing so.

We are deeply grateful to our friends and customers for their loyalty. We ask for and hope to merit a continuance of the same.

"Fruit-a-tives" Completely Cured The Eczema

GRANDE LIGNE, QUE., Jan. 2nd, 1910

"My wife was troubled for three years with Eczema on the hands which made her hands almost useless. The doctor gave her several ointments to use, none of which had any effect. He also advised her to wear rubber gloves (she wore out three pairs).

I persuaded her, as a last resort, to try "Fruit-a-tives". The effect was marvellous. Her hands are now cured.

We both attribute our present health to "Fruit-a-tives."

THE SHIPPING INDUSTRY

The Colonies England's Best Customer in 1910

Forty-five warships and vessels of the mercantile marine numbering 500 were launched from the shipyards of the United Kingdom in 1910. Only twenty-seven were "wind-jammers," or sailing ships, and their tonnage, as shown in Lloyd's annual report, was 1,137,738.

Of merchantile ships there is an increase of 152,108 tons on the previous year, although, apart from 1908 and 1909, it is the lowest total for thirteen years. War vessels, built at Government and private yards, are 5,415 tons more than in 1909.

Vessels lost and broken up during the year totalled 361,000 tons, and the sales to foreign and Colonial owners reached the record total of 513,618 tons.

As in 1909 the Colonies—with thirty-nine vessels—have been the best outside customers. Great Britain supplied the following tonnage during the year: Colonies, 43,807; Norway, 34,038; Germany, 26,567; Sweden, 20,247; Austria-Hungary, 18,447; France, 15,077.

A notable point is the number of large steamers turned out. There was the Olympic, at Belfast (45,000 tons), which is now approaching completion at Harland and Wolff's; and there were seven other steamers of over 10,000 tons.

The Glasgow district occupies the first place among the shipbuilding centres of the country, showing an output of 211,076 tons. Then follow Newcastle (203,381 tons), Sunderland (179,436 tons), Belfast (163,336 tons), Greenock (122,722 tons), and Middlesbrough (108,754 tons).

In warship tonnage Newcastle leads with 28,515 tons, followed by Devonport with 26,350 tons, Portsmouth 23,500 tons, Glasgow 22,370 tons, and Greenock, 20,000 tons.

The total output of the world during 1901 (exclusive of warships) was 1,957,853 tons (1,857,641 steam, 100,212 sail), an increase of about 356,000 tons on the figures for 1909. If only sea-going merchant steamers of 3,000 tons gross and upwards be taken into account, out of the total of 331 such steamers, of 1,209,138 tons, launched in the world, over 73½ per cent. of the tonnage was launched in the United Kingdom.

Among foreign countries, the leading places are held by the United States (331,318 tons), Germany (159,303 tons), France (80,751 tons), and Holland (70,945 tons), Norway (36,931 tons), and Japan (30,215 tons).

You Can Cure Chest Colds

And Bronchitis by Using Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine If You Get the Genuine

Ere more mention of pneumonia and consumption causes a person to shudder, but a cold is such a common thing that it is too often left alone until these other ailments develop from it.

You can readily cure throat and chest colds, croup and bronchitis by using Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine. This medicine is both thorough and far-reaching in its influence on the system. For this reason its merits are well-known and universal commend.

But there are at least four imitations of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine. And imitations are always a little cheaper than the genuine could they sell. They are never sold on their own merit, but on the merit of the article they imitate.

Their likeness is in name only, and when you are in need of medicine you don't want to depend on a name or imitation. Every bottle of the genuine bears the portrait and signature of A. W. Chase, M.D., the famous Receipt Book author. 25 cents a bottle, family size 60 cents, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

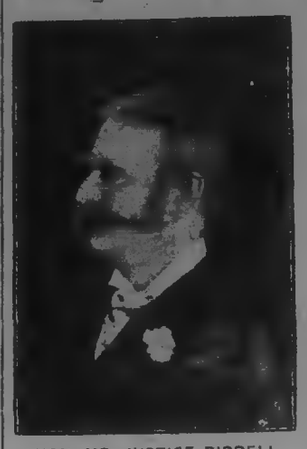
NO DISTURBANCE FOR LONG TIME

Canada and the United States Have Been at Peace for a Hundred Years

A century of peace between Canada and the United States is the theme of interviews obtained from several Canadians.

Hon. Mr. Justice Riddell

"All parties fully recognise that political union between the United States and Canada is wholly out of the question. As well ask Michigan to leave the United States and unite her destinies with those of the Dominion as ask Canada to unite hers with those of the United States," said Mr.



HON. MR. JUSTICE RIDDELL

Justice Riddell, of Toronto. "And yet we should not forget that we are in great measure of kindred origin, of the same tongue, of kindred institutions and kindred aspirations. We are, however, on both sides of the line, too prone to dwell on something which is not our true glory. We should all think and say less of warlike prowess exhibited in the past, and think and say more of peace and the many treaties whereby peace was preserved. There are many histories of the War of 1812 but none of the arbitration treaties since 1793; and yet these should be considered the real glory of the past. I know of no more useful project than the publication and circulation among our people of the story of these treaties, the proceedings under them and the splendid result. The mind of our people should be filled with the grandeur of peace, not with the horrors of war. 'Peace on earth.'"

Archibald McGoun, K.C.

"One of the messages to humanity of the Prince of Peace was 'Think not that I am come to send peace on earth; I came not to send peace but a sword,'" said Archibald McGoun, K.C., Montreal. "And yet it is only Christianity that can bring peace to nations. The citizens must force their governments to respect the rights of other nations, especially the weak. Foreign policy should be magnanimous, but if magnanimity is met with a hostile return, a great Power must fall back on its inherent force to maintain the just rights of its people. Under Canning, Aberdeen and Gladstone, honest efforts were made in this direction, but the most striking example was the policy of James VI., the great Peacemaker, who was in advance of his time in insisting that even Spaniards were entitled to the observance of international good faith. Lord Mansfield extended the same rule to Pagan nations. The doctrine of Anglo-Saxon supremacy is utterly pernicious. It is an insult not only to other nations, but even to members of other races in the British and American nations. Hut traud and corruption, equally with war and violence, are subversive of national peace, and where these are used sentiments are kept alive which will justify resort to war if the injured nation thinks it can be successfully undertaken. Canada must assume no subordinate role. She must have all the attributes of national greatness in her dealings with all other countries, and this is quite attainable as a full partner in the control of the British Empire. Towards the United States we must show, not subservience, but friendliness and a spirit of justice and fair play."

A MILE PER DAY

Building Programme of the Canadian Northern Railway

One mile of new railway for every day of the year for the past twelve years is the construction record of the Canadian Northern Railway in Canada. In 1911, in Alberta alone, the Canadian Northern will endeavor to build one mile a day for every working day of the year. In other words they will come pretty close to constructing 300 miles of railway within the province if they carry out their programme for the coming year.

VARICOSE VEINS CURED

NO NAMES USED WITHOUT WRITTEN CONSENT.

Confined to His Home for Weeks.

"Heavy work, severe straining and evil habits in youth brought on Varicose Veins. When I worked hard the aching would become severe and I was often laid up for a week at a time. My family physician told me an operation was my only hope—but I dreaded it. I tried several specialists, but soon found out all they wanted was my money. I commenced to look upon all doctors as little better than rogues. One day my boss asked me why I was off work so much and I told him my condition. He advised me to consult Drs. Kennedy & Kennedy, as he had taken treatment from them himself and knew they were square and skilful. I wrote them and got THE NEW METHOD TREATMENT. My progress was somewhat slow and during the first month's treatment I was somewhat discouraged. However, I continued treatment for three months longer and was rewarded with a complete cure. I could only earn $18 a week in a machine shop before treatment, now I am earning $31 and never loose a day. I wish all sufferers knew of your valuable treatment."

A GHOST STORY

The Gong Continued to Ring After the Patient Had Died

One day in a hospital in a Colonial city, a new patient was carefully placed in her bed.

"We can't save her," said the doctor who received and examined her, "so let her have anything she wants in reason, nurse."

The nurse murmured her assent, and the doctor went on his rounds.

Presently the patient was seized with terrible pain, and delirium was setting in. On the table at her bedside stood a small gong, which served instead of a bell when the patient wanted the nurse, and towards this the woman's hand unconsciously strayed.

Suddenly her strength seemed to return to her, and, beating loudly on the gong, she cried, in tones of passionate pleading:

"My husband! Fetch my husband!"

Later, when she was calmer, she told the nurse that her husband had deserted her, and now that she knew her death was near, she had but one desire—to see him before she died. At last the gong had to be removed from her reach, as she was wearing herself out and disturbing all the other patients with her frenzied beatings upon it.

She begged so piteously, however, that she might have it back—that the kindly physician, to soothe her last moments, put her in a private room, with the gong at her bedside.

Before the hospital authorities could find a clue to his whereabouts, the poor woman had gone.

Later, when another patient was occupying the same bed, the gong still rang, although the doctor and nurses could find no reason for it. The doctor, with all his scientific knowledge, could give no explanation. But the fact remains, the gong still rang as when the hand of the deserted wife beat upon it in her last moments.

HARD TO BEAT IT

Two Travellers Compared Notes and Dig Up Some Stories

The smoking-room of a big West-end hotel was full, and, taking advantage of such a large audience, two travellers were relating to each other, in tones audible all over the room, some of their experiences. After both had confessed to having been nearly grilled to a cinder in the neighborhood of the Equator, they proceeded to compare experiences in the matter of cold.

Said the first traveller, "When I was in Hudson Bay I struck a certain district where the ground was frozen so hard that whenever a human being died, being unable to bury him in the orthodox way, it was customary to merely sharpen his feet and drive him in with a tent hammer."

The second traveller yawned, and replied in an off-hand sort of way, "Oh, yes; of course, I know that place well, every inch of it. It doesn't strike me as being anything out of the ordinary. Stopped there a week or two, and then got bored. The air was too relaxing, so I toddled up country a bit, and put up at a small town a few thousand miles farther north. Was most unlucky during my visit there. The hotel caught fire. My room was on the top floor, immediately facing the biggest iceberg in the neighborhood. For a moment I was quite in a fix—no fire-escapes or anything of that sort in such an out-of-the-way place. The staircases were soon burnt to powder. But, happily I didn't lose my presence of mind. I merely emptied my bath out of the window and slid down the icicle."

FIVE GENERATIONS

A Great-Great-Grandmother, Yet Not Three Score Years of Age

A remarkable Jewish family, consisting of five generations—great-great-grandmother, great-grandmother, grandmother, mother, and daughter—lives in Copenhagen. This has been produced by a series of early marriages, the eldest child of which has been a daughter in each case. The eldest link in the chain, Mrs. Levyson, is only in her eighty-first year. She has five children, among them Mrs. Salomonsen, married to a well-known broker. She may claim to be Europe's youngest great-grandmother, as she is still a long way off the three-score mark. Her eldest daughter, Mrs. Albert Meyer, the wife of a large paper merchant, is a young and charming grandmother. Her eldest daughter, Mrs. Hugo Trier, also a merchant's wife, and the mother of the fifth generation, is barely eighteen.

FOR A SEED FARM

The 960-acre large Bow Park Farm, near Brantford, has been sold to the Dominion Canners' Hamilton, which includes about 50 canning factories and controls a large proportion of the canned goods in Canada. The property is to be converted into a seed farm to grow and improve vegetable seeds which have so far been mostly imported from other countries.

Keep Baby's Skin Clear

Torturing, disfiguring humors follow and threaten to become permanent. Not only is Cuticura Soap the purest and sweetest for baby's bath but, assisted by Cuticura Ointment, it affords the speediest and most economical method of clearing baby's skin and scalp of eczemas, rashes, itchings and irritations, and of establishing a permanent condition of skin and hair health.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold by druggists everywhere. Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Sole Props., Boston, Mass. Send for free Cuticura Book on the care of skin and scalp.

BEARS IN THE NORTH

Surveyors Who Arrived at Nome Were Frequently Visited by Master Bruin

Some extraordinary stories of experiences on the Alaska Boundary Survey are told by Mr. H. S. Mussell, of Ottawa, who recently arrived at Nome after long and arduous labors in survey work, says Rod and Gun. The surveyors found more bears there than they did on the Stikine River and soon realized that these animals were disposed to be friendly. Apparently their food supplies were abundant, and the bears, though paying frequent visits, never attempted to molest the men. The smell of frying bacon proved irresistible, and the bears came close enough for titbits to be thrown to them. Finally they took to visiting the camps and foraging for themselves at night, but the men resented this, although the bears never disturbed their privacy. The region is extremely rough, being a vast series of high peaks covered with eternal snow. It was impossible to place boundary pillars there, and the triangulation work and photographs will form the record. In all about four hundred square miles of the territory was covered. This involved the climbing of high peaks, some of them having an elevation of over eight thousand feet. The Muddy River, a tributary of the Taku, rises at the foot of a glacier which is believed to be the largest glacier in the world. The glacier, not counting its arms and the snows in the vicinity is easily twenty miles long. The surveyors scaled and crossed it at different points. Depressions, owing to thaw, existed, and sweeping through the icy banks were swept down the mountain side with the speed of an avalanche. In eight hours the river rose twenty-two feet, and the camp and supplies had to be hastily removed. The boundary line zig-zags a good deal.

AN AGED JURY

There was tried at Denver recently a murder case in which the defendant was aged seventy-seven—the oldest man, it is said, ever prosecuted for murder in Colorado. An attempt seems to have been made to give the accused, in an exceptional degree, a jury of his peers, for the youngest man summoned as a juror was sixty-six, the oldest eighty-two, and the average seventy-two years and ten months. It is reported that, for the age of this jury, Colorado has beaten the record.

The two tragedies of life are not getting what you want and getting it.

Patriotism

The stomach is a larger factor in "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness" than most people are aware. Patriotism can withstand hunger but not dyspepsia. The confirmed dyspeptic "is fit for treason, stratagems and spoils." The man who goes to the front for his country with a weak stomach will be a weak soldier and a fault finder.

A sound stomach makes for good citizenship as well as for health and happiness.

Diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition are promptly and permanently cured by the use of

Dr. PIERCE'S GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY. It builds up the body with sound flesh and solid muscle.

DUMB ANIMALS

Some Queer Habits of Cats, Mice, Flies, Snakes, Goldfish and Sheep

A fly on a window pane will crawl to the top, fly back to the bottom and crawl up again. This order is seldom reversed. Why, no one knows. It is on record that a fly crawled up a window pane thirty-two times, returning each time a-wing.

Hens scratch for food with the sun behind them, the reason being that the rays reflect on the minute particles. A blind hen will pick grain and not miss a kernel.

Cats seldom lie with their feet to the fire. Usually they lie on their left side. Dogs lie with their forepaws to the fire.

A mouse will ignore a food supply sufficient for a meal and run great risks to nibble at a wholesale supply. It will hide at the source of food supply and not depart therefrom until actually disturbed. It is not true that a mouse runs to its hole at the first alarm.

Find a harmless little snake the length of a lead pencil and provide a box for it in the house, visit it daily, and at the end of three months it will crawl to you for food.

Goldfish usually swim around a globe to the right. They can be taught to take a fly out of the hand in six weeks' time. The presence of other fish in the globe is generally ignored by goldfish. Drop a piece of chip on the surface of the water and it will frighten a fish.

Sheep spend more time grazing than do cattle and horses. Sheep will eat for twelve hours out of the twenty-four.

DRY PICKED POULTRY

A Series of Recent Experiments in Cold Storage

Canadian exporters of poultry should be interested in a recent series of experiments in connection with the cold storage of poultry, which have shown that the method of scalding chickens by plunging them in water just below boiling point to facilitate the removal of the feathers affects the keeping quality of the prepared birds. This method in the past has been very commonly practised by exporters of poultry in the United States and other countries. The experiments under review revealed the fact that deterioration is greater in the case of scalded fowls than in those that were dry-picked, and the bacteriological examination proved that the number of bacteria was increased when the birds were drawn before being placed in cold store. Dry-picked birds in good condition, promptly stored and kept for three and six months, are stated to have been hardly distinguishable from freshly killed fowls.

NOT AN IDLE DUKE

Norfolk Has Charge of the Coronation Preparations

One duke at any rate cannot be accused of leading an idle life. This is the Duke of Norfolk, who, as Earl Marshal of England, has practically the whole of the arrrangements for the Coronation in his hands. He has opened special offices to deal with the many matters of detail with which he is confronted, and is at work there early and late. The Duke is a particularly fast worker, and has the routine of his department at his fingers' ends, while his memory is little short of marvellous, and he can recall without much effort what was done at the last Coronation.

THE MISCHIEVOUS MATCH

One of the Chief Causes of the Daily Fire Loss

The common match is a Canadian mischief maker. It was one of the chief causes of an average daily fire loss last year of $64,639, or $3.14 per capita. It helped to swell the list of deaths by fire, numbering 256.

OLD ENGLISH GENTLEMAN

Sir Oswald Mosley is a Type of Old Times

A living copy of the familiar figure created by artists to represent John Bull is Sir Oswald Mosley, who is endeavoring to popularise wholemeal bread. And not only has Sir Oswald earned for himself the title of John Bull by reason of his appearance, but also on account of his characteristics. He is a country gentleman of the old school, a keen agriculturist, a great breeder of short-horns, an extensive gardener, and possesses a fine museum of British birds. But he takes to modern pleasures gaily, judging by the fact that he is as keen a motorist as he is a lover of horseflesh. He owns a number of cars and is a prominent member of the Automobile Club. It is because he considers that present-day indigestion and decay of teeth is due to fancy white bread that Sir Oswald is encouraging the villagers of Rolleston, Staffs, of which place he is squire, to use wholemeal bread.

BEAVER IN THE WEST

A strange animal has been attracting the wonder of residents along the banks of the Assiniboine river in the vicinity of Armstrong's Point. The district is thickly wooded, and some mystery surrounded the movements of the visitor. A young man decided to do his part in unraveling its peculiar features, and procured a gun, went out late one afternoon recently, and on sighting the animal burrowing in the snow, shot it in the head. On investigation he was surprised to find that he had killed a beaver.

FOXES FOR PROFIT

The Skin of the Silver Fox is Steadily Rising in Value in this Country

A good deal has been written of late years as to the possibilities of raising foxes for profit, says Rod and Gun. Mr. T. L. Borrowman, of Wyoming, Ontario, is believed to be the pioneer in the field of fox raising in confinement in Ontario and he has met with a good deal of success. In the course of a recent interview he said: "The breeding of the silver fox is comparatively new, and is so full of little points and conditions that are required to make a success of it at the start, that few, unless they have acquired some knowledge beforehand, are successful at first. The silver fox is our most valuable fur-bearing animal. His skin is steadily advancing in price, and within the last five years has advanced over three hundred per cent. At the Lampson January fur sales in London, England, 1910, there were skins sold that brought as high as $3,000, so it is easily seen now how profitable a business it is. It was at one time thought that the silver fox would not breed in captivity, but they are now raised quite successfully in wire pens. They breed once a year, in March, their young numbering from three to nine, according to the age of the mother. The puppies attain their full growth by fall, and the stock is generally disposed of by then. I sell almost all my surplus stock alive, as there are a great number of people eager to start into breeding them. I have been in the business for the past sixteen years, but owing to not knowing how to handle them, was unsuccessful for a number of years, but now I have the best of success with them. I think I have one of the most profitable businesses in Lambton or any other country."

SURROUNDED BY WOLVES

Blind River Man Killed Two, the Rest Being Driven Off

A story of an attack by wolves upon a hunter named Thomas Koswack is told by a local paper at Blind River. Koswack was hunting in the neighborhood of one of the Hope Lumber Company's camps when in the dark of the evening he was surrounded by the wolves. He shot and killed two, but still the fierce animals pressed upon him. Fortunately, however, the noise of the wolves and the shooting attracted the attention of those at the camp, and reinforcements arrived in time to drive off the wolves. The hunter believed his life to be in danger and thinks he was saved only by the arrival of assistance. Bounty was claimed upon the two animals killed.

TOBACCO CONCEALED IN SKIRTS

Three women who were stopped by Customs officials at Coudekerque, near Calais, in a train which had come across the Belgian frontier, were found to have a quantity of contraband tobacco concealed in their skirts.

Burdock Blood Bitters
CURES ALL
Skin Diseases.

All diseases of the skin are, more or less, directly occasioned by a bad state of the blood, and it is absolutely impossible to eradicate them from the system unless you put your blood into good shape.

The following skin diseases are curable by Burdock Blood Bitters through its wonderful cleansing, purifying powers on the blood, and its renovating action on the system, viz., Salt Rheum, Tetter, Shingles, Scurf, Erysipelas, Itching and Burning Rashes, Ulcers, Sores, etc.

Miss Stella Eichel, Maitland Forks, N.S., writes: "I have been bothered with salt rheum, on my hands, for three years, and it itched so I did not know what to do. I tried everything (but nothing seemed to be any good. I heard of Burdock Blood Bitters and bought two bottles of it, and now I am perfectly cured and have no salt rheum on my hands any more.

"I cannot speak too highly of Burdock Blood Bitters."

VERNON PARK IN LOTS

BLOCK A. TO H. INCLUSIVE, SOLD

Claresholm, Subdivision of Section 26, Twp. 12, Range 27, West of 4th M.

Examine closely this map, note that Railway "MAIN" street intersects Vernon Park. The property values on this street range in price from $75 to $250 per frontage foot. The property along Ninth Avenue, North, adjoining the school, is marketable from $150 to $300 per lot.

Claresholm's water supply is of the best and the system was installed at a cost of $75,000 in 1909, bringing the water into town six miles from the west.

The Electric Lighting Plant, "municipal" was also constructed in 1909 at a cost of $30,000.

An extension of $20,000 was added to the Public School in 1909. The original school was built in 1907, but owing to the rapid growth in population, this addition was demanded, making the total cost $45,000, the best in Southern Alberta.

These large expenditures go to show the confidence the citizens of this prosperous town have for the future, and have laid the foundation for what will shortly be termed the CITY OF CLARESHOLM.

The price at which these lots will be sold, will be announced in Friday's "Examiner." The sale of lots will start Saturday, March 4th, when any may be purchased of our salesmen or at our office.

Be prepared Saturday to "Get While the Getting is Good."

A Queer Ornament.

Some years ago we found in a secret drawer of a pearl embroidered work box three locks of hair fastened to small enamel heart shaped mounts with silver eyelets. Two were inscribed "R. C. obt. 16th April, 1664." "R. C. 1664." The third had no inscription at all. In this box I now keep an engraving of a portrait of Elizabeth, queen of Bohemia, which plainly shows the curl of hair in her left ear, attached to a pearl earring. The painting, by Gerard Honthorst, was engraved by G. Vertue.

When I showed these hair earrings to a gentleman of some considerable learning he informed me that an uncle of Anne, wife of King James I., was afflicted by a malady, still prevalent in Poland and some parts of Russia, which consists of a growth of hair and flesh pendent from the ear, on which it is dangerous to operate owing to the profuse hemorrhage which ensues. He added that in consequence of this royal infirmity a fashion arose in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries of wearing locks of hair pendent from the left ears. I believe there is a portrait of a Stuart lady still at Ham House so adorned.—London Notes and Queries.

The Pilot Fish.

A little fish about which many interesting fancies cluster is the pilot fish. Aelian tells us that pilot fishes were supposed to be kindly disposed toward sailors and therefore liked to approach ships, which they continued with and guided until they reached land. They were deemed sacred to Neptune, the god of the ocean, who protected them from designed injury; consequently a man who had ventured to eat one soon afterward lost his son by drowning. Apollo was said to have changed a fisherman named Pompilus, who had crossed him in his loves, into a pilot fish and condemned him for all eternity to the task of gratuitous pilotage. He is also said to be a pilot of sharks and is said to warn the latter away from baited hooks and other dangers and lead them to food. There really does exist a strange bond of friendship between the huge shark and this little member of the mackerel family, which are often to be seen traveling together, although the pilot fish's supposed care to warn its companion of impending danger and to provide food for it is a fallacy pure and simple.

An English Election Trick.

Corruption at elections in England took many curious forms in olden days, but there have been few more ingenious plans for securing the election of the desired candidate than that practiced at Seaford in 1790. It was doubtful which way the polling would go unless a receiving officer could be found willing to pass some twenty-six persons who still wanted seventeen days to complete the six months' residence required by law. Accordingly it was arranged that the candidate should insist on all the six oaths demanded by statute being administered to each voter individually, and this, together with the time spent in dealing with every frivolous objection raised by counsel, made it impossible to poll more than four votes a day, so that the twenty-six where duly qualified by the time their turn came to vote.

The Place.

Wanting a copy of "Tales From Shakespeare," by Charles and Mary Lamb, and being in a great hurry, he cut the title down and asked the clerk at the book counter of one of our large department shops whether she had "Lambs' Tales." He said he should never forget the faraway look she gave him as she remarked in a most superior tone:

"Lambs' tails? Fur department—third floor."—Tit-Bits.

II.—Pure Water In the Home

By EUGENE L. FISK, M. D.

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

In a certain ponderous volume about the size of Webster's Unabridged appear the names and descriptions of the drugs used in medical practice. This book is called the United States Pharmacopoeia. A movement is now under way among progressive medical men and pharmacists to reduce the size of the volume by discarding all but the most potent and useful drugs in each class of remedies.

It is safe to say that if fresh air and pure water could be secured in

THE OLD OAKEN BUCKET.

[This familiar scene on the farm is poetic, but germs are no respecters of poetry or persons.]

every home—in other words, if Dame Nature's pharmacopoeia were thoroughly utilized throughout the land—the present formidable United States Pharmacopoeia and the equally cumbersome British Pharmacopoeia would find a place on the top shelf and be succeeded by small, modest volumes that one could carry in the vest pocket.

Value of Drugs.

This is not to say that drugs are useless. No one who has practiced medicine and seen the "grim reaper" foiled and driven off by the skillful use of potent drugs can truthfully deny their enormous value to humanity when wisely employed. But the keynote of modern medicine is "prevention rather than cure."

It is a splendid thing to drag a man back from the jaws of death by relaxing the strained arteries with nitroglycerin or steadying the weakened and failing heart with strophanthus or digitalis, but it is a far bigger and better thing so to advise and guide your patient in his daily life that he shall retain a sound heart and elastic arteries until a ripe old age and never need your "heroic remedies."

Conceding that water is one of the great necessities of life and a powerful agent for good or ill, a few moments' attention to its constitution and qualities are worth while.

Water is a compound of two atoms of hydrogen with one atom of oxygen, indicated by the formula H_2O. This is not a mere mixture of gases, as in the case of air, but a definite chemical compound.

Distilled water is, of course, chemically pure, but it is rather flat and unpalatable. It has been claimed that distilled water is not a healthy beverage owing to its great solvent properties, but its use among large bodies of men in the navy without ill effect would indicate that this belief is groundless. Possibly the drinking of very large quantities of distilled water might impoverish the system, but as between distilled water and impure water contaminated by disease germs there should be no hesitancy in choosing the former.

The principal diseases that are transmitted by water are typhoid fever, cholera, diarrhea and dysentery. All these diseases are absolutely unnecessary and preventable. If a fraction of the time, money and thought that is expended in windy politics and so called statesmanship were exerted in behalf of pure air and pure water, many of our social and political evils would disappear simultaneously with the stamping out of preventable diseases.

How to Get Pure Water.

One golden maxim we can always keep in mind for our protection against water borne disease: "When in doubt, boil."

Boiled water is flat and unpalatable, but it is better than a sparkling germ laden conveyer of disease. But an effort should always be made to secure a source of pure water supply and keep it pure.

The appearance of typhoid fever should call for rigid investigation.

It is not enough for water to be pure at its source; a rigid police system should be maintained to prevent contamination from sewage within a wide range of territory adjacent to reservoir, river or lake from which the water is obtained. A proper filtration plant is also advisable, and here expert advice and engineering skill will prove cheap in the long run.

On farms and places disconnected from a general water supply the matter is under the immediate control of the householder.

If one cannot afford an artesian well, at least a deep well should be sunk and rigid precaution taken against contamination from household sewage. The most horrible and uncivilized condition that can possibly exist is a shallow surface well or spring adjacent to a shallow surface sewage vault.

No community should permit such a combination to exist, and the individual who exposes his family to such risks assumes a terrible responsibility.

The distance which a sewage vault may be located from a well without risk is theoretically sixty feet. As a matter of fact, the combination is always dangerous, no matter what the distance maintained, as the surface water may carry the bacteria of disease to a considerable distance. The best plan is to have a deep well thoroughly protected within a radius of several feet by a cement platform, so that surface water from the dooryard cannot pollute it. The earth closet should be used instead of the pestiferous sewage vault, or if the latter evil is permitted it should be as distant from the well as possible on a lower level and drain away from it. The liberal use of dry earth and chloride of lime may prevent sickness and suffering, not to speak of heavy financial loss.

The Ideal System.

A far better plan is to install a "surface irrigation" system. These systems devised by the late Colonel Waring of New York provide for a disposal of the house waste and sewage through a house drain to a tank or reservoir, which automatically empties its accumulated contents by siphonage into a series of pipes, which distribute the material directly on the surface of the soil in some field sloping away from the house. An area of one-tenth of an acre will receive and care for the waste of a household of twelve persons. This waste when delivered to the field is an inoffensive milky mixture, which the bacterial and chemical agencies in the surface soil soon dispose of if a proper interval is allowed.

The cesspool, like all devices that accumulate sewage and allow it to decompose, may be a focus of disease distribution. It is far inferior to the above described system.

All wells should be screened, preventing contamination by flies, mosquitoes, etc.

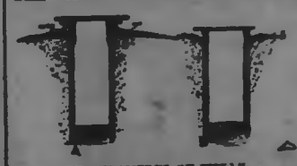
If good well water cannot be obtained the rainwater may be filtered and collected in a cistern. Cistern water is not very palatable, but it can be kept pure and tends to purify itself on standing.

Rainwater is soft and, like all soft waters, readily dissolves lead. It should not be stored in metal receptacles, therefore, or run through leaden pipes.

What to Do With Pure Water.

Pure water having been obtained, the question arises, How shall we use it? Inasmuch as about 70 per cent of the body weight is made up of water, no argument is necessary to show that a certain daily supply is necessary if the body weight is to be maintained. About one-half of the solid food we eat is composed of water, but it is estimated that, in addition, the average man requires about two and one-half pints, or three tumblerfuls, daily.

A great deal of nonsense is written regarding the amount of water that should be taken daily, the amount suggested running up into the gallons. No doubt some people do not drink enough water, especially between meals, but the taking of vast quantities of water may work serious injury by overtaxing the heart and circulation and causing an overaction of the kidneys. Dilation of the stomach may also result from overdistention with fluid. It is believed that some of the evils of beer drinking are due to the excessive amount of fluid imbibed as well as to the alcohol.



TWO EXAMPLES OF WELLS.

[A shows a well arranged so that surface water and germs are kept out by the cement extension outside the walls; B shows a well unprotected, allowing surface water to run in and carry germs from the soil.]

There is no question, however, that water is a good eliminant and that taken between meals in moderate quantities it tends to purify the system. A very active elimination can be maintained by drinking frequently small quantities of water and thus avoiding the dangers of flooding the system. This is especially important in cases of kidney trouble and heart trouble, accompanied by dropsy, as it is advisable to keep up the action of the kidneys and also carry off waste products from the bowels without overtaxing the heart.

Water at Meals.

Ice water at meals is injurious, as it tends to check the digestive function; also the ice is liable to be contaminated and infect pure drinking water. A certain amount of water at meals is desirable, but it should be cool and not ice cold. Hot water has many advocates, but it must be used with caution. It is of most service where there is a gouty tendency. A glassful taken in the morning and before retiring is sufficient.

Trapping Baboons.

Hagenbeck in his book says that baboons are caught in traps made much like the huts of savages. Food is put into the huts, and once the baboons go inside a trapdoor closes behind them. Outside baboons make a great to do and urge the prisoners to escape. When the trappers come the captured baboons are terror stricken and try to force their heads through the walls of the huts. One baboon was caught three times in the same trap, and several when turned loose got back into the same trap a second time. When the baboons are carried away all their comrades thereabout climb into trees and scream out to the prisoners, who answer in sad, mournful voices. On one occasion some big Arabian baboons were trapped, when 2,000 or 3,000 baboons hurled themselves upon the trappers, who had hard work to save themselves with firearms and clubs. As the trappers were forced back the victorious baboons tore up the trap and turned loose the captured baboons.

Ink at $100 a Pound.

"The best India ink—it should really be called China ink—never leaves China," said a missionary. "It costs $100 a pound, and the scribes use it in writing the correspondence of the royal family and the mandarins. India ink is made of the oil of poisonous seeds of the sesamum or colsa tree. Varnish and pork fat are added to the oil, and then, by means of combustion, all is changed to lampblack. The lampblack paste mixed with glue is beaten for days on an anvil, and musk is gradually mixed in to give perfume and the purest gold leaf to give a rich luster. Finally the ink is dried in molds for about a month. What makes the best India ink so costly is its purity and, above all, the long time given to its combustion and subsequent beating. If you saw its beauty you wouldn't think it dear at $100 a pound."—Philadelphia Bulletin.

If!

Three scientific men from an eastern college visited a certain Montana mine. On the ascent, by means of the usual bucket, one professor thought he perceived signs of weakness in the rope by which the bucket was suspended. "How often," he inquired of the attendant, "do you change these ropes?"

"Every three months," carelessly replied the other. Then he added thoughtfully, "This must have been forgotten. We must change it today if we get up."—Christian Register.

$500,000 BOY THIEF IS CAUGHT IN RIO

BOSTON, FEB. 28.—Deputy Superintendent of Police William B. Watts received a cablegram to-day from the United States Consulate at Rio Janeiro announcing the arrest of Robert E. Davie, the missing Boston broker who is charged with the embezzlement fo upward of $500,000 in money and securities from a large number of persons.

The sudden disappearance several months ago of "the boy banker," as Davie was known in financial circles, was mourned by many men prominent on State Street ad in the banking district. Although only twenty-three, Davie had a spectacular career in the brokerage business.

He began work as a clerk in a real estate office in Hyde Park, a suburban town, and when only eighteen was a high-salaried employee of a well known firm of Boston brokers. Later he branched out for himself, and as a broker built up an extensive business with a wide clientele.

Davie was of an radent religious temperament. His chief friends were clergymen and evangelists, and from this class of people many of his alleged victims were chosen. In fact, the principal complainant against him is Mrs. Hannah L. Greenwood, of Somerville, the wife of a well known evangelist, who has attained considerable prominence in his factory revival meetings. Mrs. Greenwood's charge, which is the formal complaint against the "boy broker," is that he stole $10,000 which she intrusted to him for investment.

The Rev. Dr. J. Wilbur Chapman, the evangelist, was a friend of Davie, and when the evangelist was married at Providence last year Davie was best man. Harry Lauder, the Scotch comedian, was a friend of the broker. Davie entertained Lauder at two elaborate banquets at the "boy banker's" palatial home in Brookline. A number of prominent persons attended these dinners.

Davie was married about two years ago to Anna, the daughter of James E. Cotter, of Hyde Park, a prominent lawyer. The couple lived together for about six months only, when the bride suddenly packed up her personal belongings and returned to her father's home in Hyde Park.

A short time beforehis disappearance Davie is said to have borrowed a blooded horse from a former attorney-general of Massachusetts. The young broker took the animal to New York, exhibited it in several horse shows, winning several prizes, and then sold the horse for a good price.

The arrest of Davie was accomplished through a general distribution of circulars containing a likeness and description of the missing broker, which was mailed by Deputy Watts to all the consular agencies and heads of police in all parts of South and Central America.

Deputy Watts and Inspector Pelton intend to go to Rio Janeiro to bing back Davie, if the State Department at Washington is able to accomplish his extradition.

Crew Of Burned Ship Cast Away On A Barren Island

Examiner Special:

ALBANY, WEST AUSTRALIA, FEB. 28.—Somewhere in the South Pacific lies the charred wreck of the British freight steamer Parisiana, which sailed from New York on October 29, 1910, with 8,000 tons of bicycles, books, toys, varnishes and oils. The thirty-two survivors of the officers and crew of the burned vessel reached here recently on the British transport which picked them up on the famous St. Paul Island, to which they had escaped in their boats.

The island is famous because it is the scout of the wonderful events which fifty years ago Jules Verne described under the alluring title of "The Mysterious Island."

The survivors of the Parisiana had no mysterious adventures to relate, but they told a very thrilling story of fighting fire at sea, of the days in open boats, and of twenty-three days on a barren island.

The Parisiana was bound for Melbourne and fire broke out in the hold on December 13. For four days the crew fought the flames, but the job was too much for them, and on December 17, when the vessel approached St. Paul Island, the men took to their smallboats.

Captain Gordon and his thirty-four men got away from the burning vessel safely, but in such haste when they found that the only alternative was certain death that the chronometers only of the ship's equipment were saved. The captain was unable to secure his papers.

The deserted ship was forty miles from the nearest land. St. Paul Island, which is in latitude 38 degrees 4 2minutes 45 seconds south, longitude 77 degrees 34 minutes and 45 seconds east.

The sea was running high and the air was bitterly cold when the little boats set out. The men, protected only by the clothes which they wore when they went over the side of the hours the sailor, battled desperately, then one of their number toppled over dead from the cold. For a time the body was retained in the boat, but later, when there was no immediate prospect of reaching land, it was dropped overboard.

A few hours later a second member fo the crew succumbed, and a short time before the volcano that rises 800 feet on St. Paul Island was sighted a third sailor gave up the fight. These two bodies were brought ashore.

A safe landing was made, and soon afterward the men discovered the house on the north side of the crater which was built in 1893 and filled with provisions by the crew of the French vessel of war Eure. There they found, in cans and iron-hooped barrels, preserved meat, biscuits, woollen underwear, blankets, and matches.

Upon these supplies they subsisted and kept themselves fairly warm for three weeks. Day and night a watch aws kpt for a passing vessel, and on January 11 the British transport came into view. The men attracted the attention of the lookout on the ransport, and the steamer hove to, and, sending out a smallboat, took off the shipwrecked ones.

GOOD-BYE TO BEAUTY

It is good bye to beauty when kidney derangements set in. The skin becomes hard and dry and the form wastes away and becomes emaciated. One cannot be too watchful and the safest way is to keep the kidneys as well as the liver and bowels healthy and active by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney and Liver Pills. This ensures pure blood and a healthy digestive system.

30 DAYS FOR POCKET FLASK

FAIRVIEW, OKLA., FEB. 28.—W. E. Stevens, of Kansas City, Mo., while passing through Oklahoma recently to visit his aged mother and his daughter in Blaine County, carried a pint bottle of whisky in his hip pocket. When he got off the train at Watonga he was arrested on a charge of transporting liquor in a Prohibition State. He pleaded, but declared the whisky was for medical purposes only.

He was sentenced to thirty days in jail and fined $50 and $28.55 costs.

BARS MUST GIVE UP

Ontario Government Will Collect Five Per Cent. From Those Taking in $40 a Day—Other Changes

TAX ON STOCK DEALS

Toronto, March 1.—Hon. W. J. Hanna transformed the scene in the Ontario Legislature yesterday afternoon when he announced, speaking very slowly, that he moved, seconded by Hon. Dr. Pyne, the first reading of a bill "to amend the liquor license act."

The words acted like magic on the Assembly.

Hon. Mr. Hanna said the bill did not propose to change the conditions with regard to bars with respect to the hotels doing a small bar-room trade, but to increase the revenue from license holders where the day's business exceeded $40 a day by taxing the amount in excess of that sum 5 per cent.

The Provincial Secretary said: "In making this provision we have departed somewhat from the present principles applied to the imposing of licenses. The licenses are as they stand at present, however, and the sections of the act relating to licenses we leave unaltered and unpunched. Our thought has been in imposing these conditions to reach the licensees who can afford to pay, without doing an injustice to those who are not in this fortunate position."

"The reduction of the number of licenses going on throughout the province," said Hon. Mr. Hanna, "is giving the increased value to those licenses that remain, and there is no reason in the world why the province should not get a share of this unearned increment of the effort to protect the people of the province."

Hon. W. J. Hanna also introduced a bill to discipline chemists who sell alcoholic liquor for beverage purposes. It provides that where a chemist has been twice convicted he shall be reported to the Ontario College of Pharmacy, and empowers the college to cancel the pharmacy certificate one to three years.

Heavier taxes in railway and express companies, new taxes on horse-race meetings and stock transfers were the features of a supplementary revenue bill introduced in the Ontario Legislature yesterday afternoon by Hon. Col. Matheson, Provincial Treasurer.

The increased taxes on railways will amount to about $22,000, while the tax on express companies will be also largely increased.

The new tax upon the clubs of the Canadian Racing Association and the Metropolitan Racing Association for their annual race meetings will be $1,400 for each meeting, that is $200 a day, to be paid in advance.

For trotting and pacing race meetings the license fee will be $10 for a one-day meet; $40 for a meeting lasting two days, and $60 for one of three days' duration.

The clause to tax all stock transfers will be two cents for every $100 or fraction thereof of the par value upon every change of ownership, consequent upon the sale, transfer, or assignments of shares, bonds, debentures. The tax will not apply to the original issue of security by any joint stock company. It also will not apply to the transfer or assignment of securities, security for loans, or transfer owing to death. A penalty will be imposed on any company entering a transfer of such securities upon which the tax has not been paid.

Sir James Whitney gave consent to a bill from an Opposition member, Mr. Pzouddoot going to committee. It was to empower municipalities to purchase and operate large spraying machines for the destruction of pests on fruit trees.

The Premier said he could see no objection to it.

Death of J. C. Ford.

Oakville, March 1.—Oakville lost one of her public-spirited citizens in the death Monday afternoon of Mr. James C. Ford. An attack of the prevalent grip gave no cause for alarm until a few days age, when complications arose which defied medical aid.

The late Mr. Ford was a native of Halton County, having been born 45 years ago in Trafalgar Township. About twenty years ago he came to Oakville and became chief partner and manager in the Oakville Basket Co. He was for years of member of the Town Council, and for the last seven years had been a member of the County Council, his name being prominently identified with the good roads movement in this county and the establishment of a House of Refuge. The Town Council met in regular session Monday night, but adjourned immediately after passing a resolution expressive of their sense of the loss sustained in the death of their colleague. Mr. Ford is survived by a wife and daughter.

Diphtheria Infection Spreads.

Baltimore, March 1.—The Church Home and Infirmary, an Episcopalian institution, near the John Hopkins Hospital, was yesterday closed to patients and visitors, following the discovery that three of the nurses had diphtheria.

New Site For Militia Camp.

London, March 1.—The City Council has an option on the McArthur farm for a new site for militia camp grounds. London must have all branches of the service train here, and there is not enough room at Carling Heights.

Customs Increases.

Ottawa, March 1.—An increase of $10,816,464.31 is shown in the customs collections of the Dominion for the seven months of the fiscal year ending yesterday, the total being $64,896,391 55. Collections for February total $5,990,693 64, an increase of $815,259.34.

MARKET REPORTS.

Liverpool Wheat Futures Close Higher, Chicago Exchange Closed—Live Stock—Latest Quotations.

LIVERPOOL, Feb. 28.—The market opened quiet, unchanged, to ½d higher, being influenced by the steadier American cables yesterday. Following the opening, realizing developed, and prices declined with offerings larger. Selling was stimulated by the continued favorable European crop advices, fears of larger tenders on March contract than were expected, and a poor demand for both cargoes and parcels and the easiness of spot. Crop advices from India were favorable, and Plata offers are freer at a decline, with very bearish advices from Australia.

The Chicago Board of Trade did not hold its usual session to-day, this being the date of the primary elections.

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, Feb. 28.—There was a decided improvement in the foreign demand for Manitoba spring wheat, there being bids in the market for 500,000 bushels; but, as they were not all in line with values here, only sales of 125,000 bushels were made for March, May and June shipment. A weak feeling developed in the market for oats, in sympathy with the break in Winnipeg, and prices declined ½c to 1½c per bushel. Corn also declined 1c per bushel. The inquiry from European sources for spring wheat flour was fair, but little business was done.

T.A.A.C. TEAM OF TORONTO TO PLAY TO-MORROW NIGHT

The fans will be glad to learn that the management of the Peterborough Hockey Club has made arrangements with the senior T.A.A.C. team of Toronto for a game here to-morrow night with the Peterborough intermediates. All season the fans have been expressing a desire to see the Petes in action against some of the senior O.H.A. teams and they will now have their wish gratified by the appearance here of the Athleic Club seven who chased Eatons to a 6 to 5 game for the championship of their group. The T.A.A.C. includes such well known hockey stars as MacLaren, the well known ex-Stratford goalkeeper, J. B. McArthur, and Irving Ardagh, crack defence players, Bert McGreath and the two Buckharts. Peterborough will have the strongest forward line of the season out, with Park at centre, Ray at rover and Kelly and Sorel on the wings. The team has been practising faithfully since they were put out of the running and have developed a much faster and more accurate combination and better scoring ability than they have hitherto shown in their game this season. Heffernan will play cover for the Petes. The players are all in good shape and delighted with a chance to show what they can do against a senior seven. The game will start at 8.30 o'clock and there will undoubtedly be a big crowd present as the fans have been clamouring for a game. The T. A. A. C. will have their full senior line-up in action and the local team say they that they will need them all too. The Peterborough team will line up as follows:

Goal—Derocher.
Point—Bond.
Cover—Heffernan.
Rover—Ray.
Centre—Park.

All these players are asked to be out to practise to-night at 7 o'clock.

The admission to all parts of the rink except the balcony, will be twenty-five cents. The charge for the balcony will be 35 cents for adults and 25c. for ladies. The Peterborough team will practise to-night at 7 o'clock and there will be a meeting of the executive at the Examiner office at 8.30.

THE SIGN AT BROCK STREET RINK MUST BE ALTERED

The Legal Committee met last night and transacted considerable business. There were present Mayor Morrow, Ald. Graham, Ald. Edgar, Ald. Anderson, City Solicitor E. H. D. Hall. Ald. Graham was in the chair.

Ald. Graham complained that Brock Street Rink had not moved the sign in closer to the building, as requested. He said that the way the sign is now, it does not conform to the by-law. Mayor Morrow moved that the matter be left in the hands of the City Solicitor to compel the rink owner to make the change. The move was duly seconded and carried.

The old claim from R. N. Scott, regarding the breaking of his traction engine through a culvert in East City, came up again. Mr. Hall did not think that Mr. Scott was entitled to any damages. He said that the city is not supposed to build bridges strong enough to carry a traction engine. He also intimated that it was his opinion that Mr. Scott was afraid that the City Council would come on him for damages, since they were not required to build bridges strong enough to carry the engine. Mr. Hall advised that no action be taken and his recommendation was acted upon.

A bill was received from Dr. Scott for $12.00. It was for medical attendance on Mrs. C. Warner, Smith street. She fell and was injured on the sidewalk, and asked the city to pay the Doctor's bill; also keep her in provisions and fuel until she recovered. It was agreed that the bill would be paid.

A communication was received from Messrs. Bennet and Goodwill, representing the Dickson Co., to the effect that by the closing of Quaker street, the Company's land was decreased in value by $1,500.00. Mr. Hall thought that the Company was open to a compromise. Mayor Morrow stated that they had advertised for several weeks before they closed the street and there was no objection offered; he thought no action should be taken. The Dickson Co. went over the land at the time, with the Council, and withdrew their objection, saying that they were satisfied.

Ald. Edgar moved, seconded by Ald. Anderson, that no action be taken.—Carried.

THE GREATEST SALE EVER HELD IN PETERBOROUGH

The greatest sale in the history of Peterborough will be opened in the store of H. LeBrun and Company on Saturday next when the entire $48,000 stock of high-class clothing and furnishings will be thrown on the market and sold for whatever they will bring. The sale is made imperative by the necessity of arranging a settlement between Mr. LeBrun's heirs and the junior member of the firm. Mr. Jos. Picard. It will be unique in the respect that there will be no reserve; absolutely nothing will be kept back and everything in the store will go at sacrifice prices. The original cost of the articles has not been taken into consideration at all; they must be sold and sold quickly and therefore all through the store the prices have been cut and slashed down to a level never reached before in the city. The reputation of the firm gained in thirty-eight years of business life in Peterborough is sufficient guarantee of the fact of the genuine nature of the sale. The entire stock must be disposed of in ten days, which means that the prices must be cut to pieces to ensure quick action. Everything in the line of boys' and men's clothing and furnishings is included in the slaughter of values. On Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of this week the store is closed for the purpose of re-arranging the stock and re-marking the goods. Every article in the store will be ticketed with the sale price marked in plain figures, so that customers can inspect the stock and prices at their own convenience. An augmented force of salespeople will be on hand to look after the wants of the patrons and every preparation is being made for what will undoubtedly be the most gigantic clothing sale ever held in this city. Never before has such a large and complete stock of reliable goods been offered to the public at anything like the sensational prices that will prevail during the settlement sale. There is bound to be an unprecedented rush on Saturday morning and the management has had the foresight not to open the sale until 9 a.m. in order to give people living at a distance a chance to be on hand for the opening. The sale affords the public a chance to secure the highest class goods at abnormally low figures and the bargains will be eagerly snapped up. It would be advisable to get in early.

THE NEW ISOLATION HOSPITAL OPEN FRIDAY AND SATURDAY

Ald. Duncan, chairman of the City Property Committee, advises this journal that the new Isolation Hospital will be thrown open to the public for inspection on Friday and Saturday of this week from 2 to 5 each day. It is to be hoped that the public will take this opportunity of going through this new institution before any patients are admitted. As after the building is opened for service it will be practically closed to visitors for obvious reasons.

The Hospital is admirably equipped in every way, and reflects considerable credit upon the Council and its Property Committee, who undertook by vote of the people, to provide a permanent building in which to isolate and properly care for contagious cases.

NORTH MONAGHAN FARMER IS A FIRM BELIEVER IN THE RECIPROCITY TREATY

In an Interesting Interview With the Examiner He Gives His Opinion of the Pact Which Will be He Says Most Beneficial to the Farmers.

HIS REASONS GIVEN

In an interview with a prominent North Monaghan farmer an Examiner representative was enabled yesterday to ascertain just what the general feeling was in regard to the reciprocity measure throughout the Township of Monaghan.

The farmer, a man of wide experience and known as "progressive," and, necessarily, successful, expressed himself as delighted with the trade agreement, and in making this statement he considered that it voiced the sentiments of the majority of the people with whom he had conversed on the subject.

He said that he had met a few farmers who were opposed to the treaty, and in nine cases out of ten the farmers in question had failed to read up the subject and study out the benefits which were to be derived from it, or, on the other hand, they were guided by partyism.

"In what particular way will the new reciprocity pact benefit the farmer?" queried the reporter.

"It will prove beneficial in a hundred different ways," replied the farmer, "for instance about a year ago we were selling potatoes at about 20 cents per bag and could hardly get rid of them at that; there was no market for them here—the market was glutted. Down in New York, a place which can be reached in side of twenty-four hours, potatoes were worth about one dollar per bag, but the mere fact that there was a 37½ per cent. duty on each bag crossing the line, prevented any possibility of utilizing the large and profitable market practically at our own doorway.

"I remember the time when peas were worth $2.15 to $2.30 per bushel at Port Hope, and points along the front, but that was previous of the passing of the McKinley bill, which imposed a duty of 40c per bushel on peas. Since that you do well to get $1.00 a bushel for them. Previous to the inauguration of the McKinley bill there was a duty of 10c. per bushel on barley, after that it rose to 30c. per bushel, and has remained at that ever since. It is admitted that the best barley grown in British North America is produced in Ontario, consequently United States buyers are willing to pay 25c to 40c more for Canadian barley, but the exorbitant duty renders the marketing of barley in the United States unprofitable. The year the McKinley bill went into force there were 11 million bushels of barley shipped across the borders, the second year there were 3 millions, and the third year the amount shipped had dwindled to an insignificant figure. He also referred to the anti-reciprocity petition which was circulated among the farmers of Monaghan last summer. He said that a large number of farmers had signed the petition in order to get rid of the party who presented it, as they (the farmers) were too busy harvesting their crops to be bothered discussing reciprocity, and with a reminiscent smile he recalled the evening that the man in question had called upon him, and endeavoured to persuade him to sign the petition. It was nearly midnight before he finally succeeded in convincing the

FLAGS FLYING TO-DAY IN HONOUR OF SAINT DAVID

Many people have asked the question why the flags were flying from the public buildings of the city to-day. The fact is to-day is St. David's Day, and according to the action of the Government a few days ago the flags on the public buildings throughout Canada must be flown. In the House Mr. Pugsley gave the list of days on which the flags must be displayed on public buildings, namely:

March 1—David's Day.
March 17—St. Patrick's Day.
April 23—St. George's Day.
May 24—Victoria Day.
May 26—Queen's birthday.
June 3—King's birthday.
June 28—Prince of Wales' birthday.
June 24—St. Jean Baptiste Day.
July 1—Dominion Day.
Nov. 30—St. Andrew's Day.

In addition, he added that instructions had recently been given for the display of the flag daily on all public buildings at border towns and sea ports.

HOTELMEN VERY MUCH DISSATISFIED

Do Not Like the New Proposition of Ontario Government to Collect Part of Their Bar Earnings

PREMIUM ON DISHONESTY

Examiner Special.

TORONTO, MARCH 1.—There is a wail from hotel keepers all over the province this morning as a result of the Government's new law, taxing all receipts over forty dollars a day, in addition to the regular license. The hotel keepers in the cities and large towns especially feel they have a grievance. One man said this morning the law would put a premium on dishonesty, as the temptation to cheat the Government would be too strong to resist. The leaders of the liquor organization talk of storming the Legislature in a body to prevent its possible passing of the new law, but there is little hope of side-tracking it.

The Receipts Are Bigger

The customs receipts for February of the present year at the local Customs House show a gratifying increase over the account collected in the corresponding month last year. The figures are an indication of the increase in trade in Peterborough and are significant on that account. The receipts for February 1911 were $32,-864.97 and for the same month in 1910 $20 154.63, an increase of $3,-210.34.

COMMITTEE DECIDES TO RAISE THE SALARIES IN THE FIRE DEPARTMENT

Matter Was Under Discussion at Last Night's Meeting of the Fire, Water and Light Committee—Firemen Did Not Get the Full Rise Asked For—Other Business Taken Up.

The following were present at the meeting of the Fire, Water and Light Committee last night: Ald. Morgan, Chairman; Ald. Graham, Ald. Metheral, Ald. Edgar and Mayor Morrow.

Two representatives from the Brinton Carpet Works were present, and asked the Committee to put a fire alarm box in the factory. They stated that the nearest box, was at the street, and that in case of fire, it would take three or four minutes to get to the box, and pointed out the saving of time, if they had one at the works. They stated that with the present system of alarm, that as soon as a box was pulled, the horses were already to go, and that if it was sent in by 'phone, it would take much longer. They stated that they were making improvements in their fire protection also.

Chief Howard was present, and at this stage drew the Committee's attention to a new invention, a factory alarm box. He stated that it would cost about $125, being $25 more than the ordinary box. He explained that there was one main box, with numerous little boxes all through the building, all connecting with the main box, these little boxes costing about $3.00 each. The factory representative offered to supply the little boxes if the city would purchase and install the large one. There are no boxes of this kind in this city, but Chief Howard stated that he knew of other places where they were installed and were giving satisfaction.

Ald. Morgan suggested that the present box, No. 12, be moved over to the building. This did not appear to meet with favour. The Brinton representatives argued that it was as much in the interests of the Council to put in a box as it was to them. It was suggested that the city would pay the cost of installing and wiring, if the Company would instal it. "How would you feel like paying on a proposition of that kind?" asked the Mayor.

"We will instal it, if the Council will pay for it," was the answer.

Ald. Metheral moved that the matter be left with Ald. Morgan, Chairman, for the present, and that he ascertain the cost of procuring a factory alarm box to replace box No. 12. So it was decided that no action would be taken until Ald. Morgan received the necessary information.

There had been an understanding between the Bell Telephone Company and the Council, that the latter should pay for Chief Howard's telephone at his residence, and since the private line was installed, the Company sent a formal contract to the Council to be signed, the contract simply stating that they agreed to pay for the telephone. It was decided to sign it. Chief Howard asked that repairs be made to the floor at the Fire Station, also a door put in the attic. Moved by Mayor Morrow, seconded by Ald. Metheral, that it be left in the hands of Ald. Morgan and Ald. Graham.—Carried.

The Chief spoke of getting new fire extinguishers and new rubber boots for the men. But, as they were not needed at present, it was decided to leave that until some future date. Five alarm boxes are also needed, also some Carboy of Sulphurs., and some straw. It was decided to leave all these in the hands of Ald. Morgan. The Chief asked for a barrel of soft soap. Ald. Graham suggested that the firemen could make it out of the ashes.

The matter of raising the wages came up. The Chief wanted a little increase at the present for the men. Ald. Graham thought that it would be better to wait for a while and then give them a substantial increase say $500.00, $575.00, and $660.00. The Chief stated that at the present wages he could not keep men. He said that he had some men especially adapted to the work and who got along well, and they would not stay because the pay was too low. Ald. Metheral said that the appropriation for the Fire Station last year was $12,800. He said that it had been said that the men could get more money working on the street, and yet he had known men to leave the street and go as City Firemen. He said that they were getting as much as the average labouring man, when the labouring man's lost time was considered.

Mayor Morrow said that he liked to see men get all they were worth, and that he would like to see the labouring man get a good wage. He suggested that the men's salaries be increased to $525.00, $575.00 and $660.

Ald. Graham moved, seconded by Ald. Edgar, that the men's salaries be increased as follows: First year men, $525.00; second year men, $575, third year men $660. This was carried. The increase will go into effect on April 1st.

COMMENCEMENT EXERCISES OF THE COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE

The annual commencement exercises in connection with the Collegiate Institute will be held in the Assembly Hall of the Collegiate on Friday night of this week and a most interesting programme has been arranged for the occasion. The presentation of the Nicholls' Scholarships, the athletic prizes and the Canadian Club history contest prizes will be presented, the latter by Dr. Cameron the president of the Club. Mr. John Crane, chairman of the Board of Education, will be chairman. A musical and literary programme will be provided and the public is cordially invited to attend. There will be no admission charge.

SPLENDID ATTRACTIONS

A number of splendid attractions are coming to the Grand in the near future. Some of the greatest plays of the season will be at the Grand during March. Among the more prominent are the Vesta Victoria and the Clifton Crawford plays. Vesta Victoria and her company of International Stars will be at the Grand on March 10th. Clifton Crawford and the Three Twins, now playing at the Princess Theatre Toronto will be here on March 13th. These will probably be the best plays of the season, and are looked forward to with great anticipation, by the Opera goers.

THE GROUND FLOOR.

Once upon a time, as the story goes, a fox and a groundhog went out for a walk, and their talk ultimately drifting on to the subject of the various schemes which even in that day were being presented to a credulous public by which they might get-rich-quick, the fox, recognizing the increasing interest of the groundhog in the subject, remarked: "Would you like, my boy, to get in on the ground floor of an absolutely sure thing?" and the groundhog's readiness to embrace such an exceptional opportunity being immediately communicated, the fox said: "All right then, you have only to open your mouth and the plum will fall into it—there you are"; and suiting the action of the word, he pointed to a juicy piece of meat which was hanging from a bush near by. As the groundhog reached for it, the care fully concealed trap, to which the fox had all along been leading him, was sprung, and the fox walked off with the meat. The foxes which are on your track to-day are more numerous than ever, and the number of get-rich-quick schemes with which you are beset is also increasing. The ground-floor-plan is worked over-time and the "fox" in ninety-nine times out of one hundred, walks off with the "plum." If, however, the mass of the people of Canada are seriously looking for a "sure thing," in which to invest their savings, that sure thing is available to them in the Canadian Government Annuities proposal, by which, for the payment of a small sum each month they can provide an income to begin at any age after the age of 55, ample for all needful requirements, and which no process of law can deprive them of. You should be interested in the subject, and information will be supplied you either by your Postmaster, or by the Superintnedent of Annuities, Ottawa, to whom letters go free of postage.

PARLIAMENT IS RESPONSIBLE.

The resolution adopted by the fragmentary meeting of the Board of Trade on Monday did not go the length of embodying the opposing arguments upon which it was founded, but contented itself with demanding that the reciprocity agreement be not put into force "until the people have expressed themselves thereon at the polls".

Are the members of the Board of Trade aware that this is a British country, and that the principles of British constitutional government, as applied to the management of our affairs, are in force in Canada—that we are not living under the direct plebiscite or referendum principle? The people govern through the representatives they elect, and the responsibility rests upon their representatives. The proper body to deal with the reciprocity agreement is the Parliament of Canada, and it has full warrant from the people to do so. At every general election since Confederation the principle of reciprocity has been a plank in the platform of both parties appealing to the people, and it has never been pronounced against by the people. As to the principle the people have been consulted. The details are to be decided by the responsible ministers of the Crown, subject to the approval of Parliament.

That is what is being done, what will be done—the only way it can be done in a country existing under constitutional government as evolved by British practice and precedant.

The reciprocity agreement will, in due course, be subjected to popular approval in the orthodox way. There will be a general election within a year or two, and then the people will be in a position to pronounce an intelligent and unbiassed opinion on the subject. The agreement will have had a year or so of test, or trial, and its influence upon our trade and prosperity will be more or less manifested.

At the present time the people, if it were good form, according to British practice, to consult them, are not in a proper position to be consulted. They are subjected to all kinds of prejudicing influences. Extremists and blatant partizans are complicating the issue with cries of "annexation," "absorption," "separation," "disloyalty," etc. Special interests are distorting the incidence and effects of the agreement. The great mass of the people have not read the agreement, and, influenced by partizan feelings, are an easy prey to the insidious solicitation of partizan schemers, who are taking "votes" that have no intelligent significance.

The government and parliament of Canada have the responsibility of dealing with the trade agreement. It is to be assumed that they will do what they consider best in the interests of the country. We have elected them for that purpose. They are responsible to the people and if they fail in their duty the people have the remedy in their own hands. The Government which the people placed in power and keeps in power, is dealing with the trade agreement now pending. All the tariffs of Canada have been made by governments without consulting the people. The people, at general elections, declared for the principle and left the responsibility for the details with the governments and parliaments. That has always been done and there is no reason now why any departure should be made from the practice of the past.

Remember, you can obtain Rexall Remedies in Peterborough only at our store.—The Rexall Store, McDermid and Jury, corner George and Charlotte streets.

The Tramp's Reason.

The late Joseph Dorsey of San Jose, the famous detective whose best feat was the capture of Canon Bernard after a chase from Alaska to Cape Horn, used to impute his success to his knowledge of men.

"A detective," he would say, "should know the habits of every class. Then no disguise can deceive him. All men, even the most unmethodical, have their habits. Even the tramp has his.

"'You great big lazy loafer,' I said to a tramp one December day, 'you ought to be in jail!'

"'Yes, Aigie,' the tramp replied as he pretended to fix a monocle in his eye. 'Yes, I know it's the correct thing for our set at this season, Aigie; but, dence take it, it's such a mild winter, don't you know.'"—Kansas City Star.

An Indirect Hit.

A patient who was suffering from a scalp wound was recently admitted to a hospital. "How did this happen?" asked the resident surgeon.

Further Evidence Of Farmers In Favour Of Reciprocity Agreement

Special Interests Oppose Farmers Getting Greater Profits—An Implement Maker Endorses Agreement—Says It Reduces Freight Rates.

(Toronto Star.)

ST. MARY'S, ONT., FEB. 28.—An ex-professor of Toronto University in the role of a house painter was what The Star man discovered when he called at Prof. Dale's new home in the Stone Town. Mr. Dale has moved to St. Mary's to reside, but continues to farm his acres—950, count them, 950—in Blanchard Township. That, if all reports be true, is the biggest farm in Perth County, and the owner runs it on scientific principles. He put down his paint brush to tell what he thinks about reciprocity, and the things that he said left no doubt as to his convictions.

Perth's largest farm owner does not propose to be guided by the advice which comes from certain quarters of the City of Toronto. "I know what is the matter with Messrs. B. E. Walker and J. W. Flavelle," he said. "Those men have been draining the country for years, and now they are afraid some one else will get the profits."

A General Advantage.

Prof. Dale first dealt with the reciprocity agreement on general grounds. "The opening of a wider market must be an advantage to the country as a whole," he declared. "I cannot see the sense of sending agents to open up other markets at a great distance, when we are given fair terms upon which to enter the greatest market in the world right at our own doors. It is a market which will become increasingly valuable. At present they just raise enough to supply their own wants—the balance is about even—and from this onward they must be supplied from elsewhere; from Canada, if we are alive to the opportunity. That, on general grounds, is why I see in the reciprocity agreement an arrangement whereby the whole agricultural industry of the country will be stimulated.

"Then to take a concrete case in illustration of the value of the American as a purchaser of our products. Last year, for the first time in the history of the cattle industry, we had United States cattle buyers seriously competing with Canadians in the Toronto market. The result was that we made a greater profit on cattle than had been the case for twenty years. I should say that the presence of American buyers added $10 per head to the value of every bullock in the Province.

The Basis of Success.

"Ithink," he continued, "that freer trade lies at the very basis of financial success and prosperity. In the past fifteen years we have been unusually famed in the matter of good crops, but I do not believe that the Canadian farmer is relatively much better off than he used to be. It is time that the farmer should be given an offset to the tariff assistance which has been extended to the manufacturer, and the latter should not object, especially as the tariff changes do not affect manufacturers to any extent.

"I notice," said Prof. Dale, "that the president of the Associated Boards of Trade said that 80 per cent. of the farm products were produced for the home market, and hinted that the manufacturers created this 'home market,' as he calls it. But he forgets that fifty per cent. of that home market is afforded by the farmer himself. That is, the average farmer consumes about half of what he produces. A man on an ordinary fifty acre farm does little more than keep his family alive and clothed."

Prof. Dale has 150 head of cattle on his big farm, and he does not hesitate to say that they will be made more valuable by the reciprocity agreement. He does not agree with Mr. Nelson Monteith, the Conservative ex-Minister of Agriculture, who has been predicting ruin for the horse trade. "I do not believe the United States is over-stocked with really high-class horses," he said. "Horses in Canada are now at a high price, owing to the Western demand. I believe that there is no reason to fear United States' competition. In fact, I think we will ship the best class of horses across the line, as well as west and north, and horse-breeding will be stimulated rather than otherwise."

A Manufacturer Speaks.

The Perths are such close constituencies that party lines are very closely drawn. In the St. Mary's district The Star heard of fewer departures from party ranks among either Liberals or Conservatives than in any other constituency visited. What the interviewer did find, however, was a manufacturer of agricultural implements approving of the reciprocity agreement, although it provides for a reduction in the protection on agricultural implements. Mr. James Maxwell, who thus expressed himself, is a Liberal, but not a free trader in the usual sense of the word. Nevertheless, despite his protectionist proclivities, he declares the Fielding-Taft bargain to be for the best interests of the country.

"On the whole," he told The Star, "the arrangement is calculated to work for the best interests of the whole country. I think it will be a fine thing for the farmer, and that it will not hurt some other people so much as they imagine."

"What do you say about the reduction of duty on agricultural implements?"

"I do not think it is sufficient to be unfair to Canadian manufacturers. For instance, on binders and mowing machines the duty is reduced to 15 per cent. On the steel bars and pig iron used to manufacture these, however, there is a drawback of 99 per cent. In other words, the raw material is practically free. A similar drawback should now be provided for raw material used in the manufacture of harrows and plows, as the United States makes will be admitted at 15 per cent. duty instead of 20.

"There is, of course, a sense in which reciprocity is more or less experimental, but I do not think it will have the disastrous effect upon shipping east and west that some people say. I do believe, however, that it will reduce freight rates, as there will be American competition to a greater extent than now. Wheat that goes from the Canadian West to Minneapolis to be ground for export is now subject to a 99 percent. drawback, so if already goes in practically duty free."

A Downie Farmer.

Mr. Joseph Mountain of Downie, a farmer of municipal experience, and known as a "progressive," affirmed his delight with the trade agreement, and noted that a number of conservatives in his neighbourhood also favour it. "The arrangement is quite favourable," he said; "the dairy farmers of Perth are especially delighted. It will mean a better trade in butter and cheese, and it will also mean a better trade in hogs."

Reeve W. W. Day, of East Nissouri, who happened to be in St. Mary's yesterday, declared the agreement, "on the whole, a benefit to farmers. The cheese we have been shipping to England, he explained, "is a dry, firm cheese, which requires 11 lbs. of milk per pound. The cheese demanded in New York, is softer, requiring one lb. of milk less to the pound of cheese. And the farmers across the border have been getting four cents more than in Canada."

Councillor G. B. Webster of Blanchard expressed himself as pleased with the prospects of reciprocity. "It will give us a wider market, and I believe it will benefit the country in general. I don't think we should be afraid to compete with anyone. Buying in the cheapest market and selling in the dearest is a pretty good motto. Dairying and hog raising will benefit by the change, and the high prices obtainable in the large United States cities for the very best produce will go to enrich the Canadian farmer, and through the farmer, Canada in general."

And so the testimony goes. Some of the staunch Conservatives of this close riding, through refusing to declare themselves for publication as advocates of reciprocity, take the attitude of Joseph Standeaven, who said when questioned, that he was "neither for reciprocity nor against it." When life-long Conservatives make remarks of that nature, it is a safe guess that partyism is pulling in one direction, and conviction in the other.

THE EXAMINER TEAM AS USUAL VICTORIOUS

Defeated Review Septette in Annual Press Game Last Night by 6 Goals to 3---The Result Was Never in Doubt ---Winners Showed Stanley Cup Form.

The annual Review-Examiner hockey match occupied the boards at Brock street rink last night to the supreme satisfaction of about one hundred frenzied fans. Needless to say the Examiner won, the score being six to three in favour of this great metropolitan journal, whose team beats the Review as often and as easily at the Examiner want adds bring results. The attendance would have been larger had not an unsympathetic rink management imposed a tax upon those who craved admittance and the fans regarding the result as a foregone conclusion departed in search of amusement at the moving picture shops, thereby missing one of the most thrilling, spectacular, awe-inspiring, dare-devil, death-defying games that has ever been seen within the classic precincts of Jack Thirnbeck's refrigerator. The Examiner opened the game with a burst of speed that whole 57 varieties and a few original stunts as well. Heard, the importation from Young's Point, showed so much speed and stick-handling that he may be barred from other press contests. He got four of the Examiner goals. Manager Swanston ran the team perfectly, giving the signals intelligently and buzzing around like a bee. Whittaker, the other Brooklynite, shot up and down the wing like a shunting engine.

The Review team died game and showed a lot of class in holding the Examiner down as well as they did. Walt Mason Curtis was the pick of the losers, showing speed enough to land him a berth on the Examiner line-up. Only for his efforts the Hunter street rag would never have had a look in. Sammy Little proved a defence player of class combining a Harvey Pulford method of defence with a Fred Taylor capability for rushing. Strathcona Wilson, who alternated between goal and right wing, distinguished himself in both positions. Benny Taylor, a renegade form the Examiner camp was on the line-up of the Review and was no worse than the rest of the bunch. The rest of the team worked hard.

COLD MOLASSES ANGELSY,

electrified the crowd and threatened to run up a score that would have gone down on the minute books as the biggest ever compiled. They landed four in a row so fast that the goal umpire hadn't time to get his arm down between the counters. At this stage some of the backers of the champions whispered that all chance of getting a bet on the game was being queered by this phenomenal scoring and the word was passed around among the Speed Boys to let up which they did, with the result that the Review aggregation succeeded in scoring three. The Examiner then cut loose again and slammed two more where they would do the most good and that ended the counting. There was no half time in the game, Referee Sorel evidently believing that if he let the Review team leave the ice they would never come back again, so the contest went right ahead until the hour was up.

Considering the remarkable pace set the game was comparatively free from roughness. There was not a fatal accident and only a few minor surgical operations were required, while the ambulances and physicians waited in vain for subjects. No one even broke a leg or an arm and all things considered the game was disappointingly tame in this respect. However, there was enough excitement in other ways to compensate for this failure and it was pronounced by the sharps and experts among the attendance as the classiest exhibition since Hickory Jim was a two year old. It is safe to say that there were stunts pulled off that would have made the Ottawas gape with amazement, the Examiner in particular showing distinction in their methods. The hard ice seemed to suit them thoroughly, in fact some of them liked it so well that they did not seem able to keep off it and there was no need of sweeping up after the fracas was stopped. It was a game worthy of the best traditions of the great press game, and although the svelte, fairy-like form of Jas. Drury Clarke, the great generalship and all round good playing of Melville Jenkins Hutchinson and the boring in qualities and finished marksmanship of Pink Tea Huston were missing from the Examiner line-up and the wonderful stick-handling and speed of Dub MacRea, the gigantic bulk of Tiny Yokome and the classy rushes of Samuel Sampson Moore were shy from the Review cast, the new stars introduced to an appreciative audience last night showed themselves deserving of the mantle of their great predecessors.

There never was any doubt of the result of the affray, the only weak spot in the Examiner line-up being the goal minder. Craig proved an expert in dodging shots and had a perfect average. The Review shot straight on him twice and he missed both, with the result that his admirers in the gallery lowered a chair down to him on a wire as a sign that he should go way back and sit down. Outside of that the team showed themselves of big league calibre. Reynolds carved a name for himself by his slashing methods and Spike Anglesey rushed with the speed of a barrel of molasses. Linotype Johnson was there with the

JOHNSON SAYS THAT REAL FIGHTERS ARE BORN

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., FEB. 28.—There is no telling, of course, what a year or even a few months may bring forth, but for the present the pugilistic situation, so far as it affects the heavyweights, has been completely flattened out by one Jack Johnson.

On the part of the public there is neither interest nor speculation in hot doings of the big fellows. The notion has crystallised apparently that Johnson is unbeatable, and until something crops up to create doubt on this point the question of the world' schampionship may be regarded as something that has been laid away in lavender.

For proof of this, hark back to the way Johnson's coming to San Francisco was handled by the San Francisco papers. There were comparatively meagre reports of the champion's arrival the morning after. Since then there has been no mention of him, unless maybe a brief reference to an arrest for speeding. John himself seems quite content to have it that way. Fighting is the thing furthest from his mind, and, strange though it may seem, he is not courting publicity.

ONLY CARES FOR MOTORING

He has a bungalow out by the sea waves, but it is merely a starting point for automobile trips. It is very seldom that he is to be found there. For Jack Johnson now, the world is one big boulevard, and he has discarded his boxing gloves for goggles. He is arrested so frequently that some one has advised him to inquire into the feasibility of securing a season ticket or a book of fine coupons. It has been pointed out to him that he could hand a coupon to each park policeman who stops him for fast driving, and thus do away with the necessity of getting up early in the morning to attend court.

Johnson is the dullest subject an interviewer ever tackled; that is if the interviewer is after "fight talk." In order to get the big colored man to discuss with briskness and intelligence any question relating to pugilism one has to lay a foundation for such discussion by posting him as to what is in progress. Without such stimulus his mind is a blank, or, at any rate, his lackadaisical manner would lead you to such a conclusion.

The writer contrived to get Johnson to discuss the outlook a day or two ago by quizzing him about the large number of practically untried heavyweights that were being so extensively advertised. Johnson had not spoken a dozen words before it became apparent that he considers the "hope" industry a huge joke. He warmed up slightly to his subject after a while and prattled along without further questioning.

"CARL MORRIS A HUGE JOKE"

"This fellow, Carl Morris, who has been taken in hand by an Oklahoma millionaire, is the biggest joke of the lot," said Jack. "When he was first spoken of I was slightly interested and made up my mind to watch his career; but I see he is not to have any career for a while. They are going to coddle him and try and bring him along under cover. They won't allow him to meet ever a third-rate man, if my information is correct, but they're going to employ trainers and coachers and give him a private ring education. That settles Morris, in my opinion, because you can't make a fighter that way. Experience is the most valuable part of a fighter's stock in trade, and the only way you can gain experience is by giving and taking hard knocks in real fights.

"Ability, of course, is the first essential with a fighter, but all the ability in the world is useless unless you have learned by experience how to employ it. There is very little difference between pugilists and horses. I have to do with horses. You can take the classiest two-year-old that was ever bred and schooled and h ewill be beaten every time you ask him to hook up with a four-year-old. I know what I am talking about, and when I read that this fellow Carl Morris was to be kept out of the game and not allowed to gain his knowledge by taking the rough with the smooth, as the rest of us had to do, it d dinot take me long to decide that he would never be heard from as a championship factor. In addition to teaching him how to handle himself, experience breeds confidence. A man who expects to get to the top of the pugilistic ladder without experience or confidence is a fool."

FIGHTERS ARE BORN, NOT MADE

Johnson holds that the most successful fighters of modern days are born an dnot made, and feeling that way about it, he is all the more inclined to scoff at any scheme for turning out a world's champion with the aid of paid professors.

He says that in the old days when prize fighting was largely undeveloped, and when every student of boxing had to rely upon straight lefts and short crosses as a means of assault, the idea of teaching boxing was all right.

Nowadasy, in Jack's opinion, the world beaters are all fellows who possess styles of their own, and the man who gets his ideas from a boxing manual or a professor of boxing has small chance of advancing.

"Show me the man who only knows the old order of leading, crossing, and has no wrinkles of his own, and I'll show you a fellow who will be licked every time he stands up," said Jcak—and he said it as though he believed it.

TONGUE TWISTING NAMES OWNED BY BALL PLAYERS

What's in a name. What? Well, it might be cursorily mentioned that there's a big lot in some names, both in the number of letters and in the vowels diphthongs and consonants. Viewing the perennial question from that standpoint, allow us to submit a few given publication in J. H. Farrell's latest bulletin of the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues.

First come corrugated handles such as these: Clyde Jarnagin, R. H. Mc-Whirter, Joseph Vyskocil, John Weisenstein, Albert Coughanour, Leonard Woodyatt, Fred Koenuck, G. C. Thrailkill, Oscar Dahlkamp, Will C. Schamburg, L. Nageleisen, D. A. Favreau. Ye gods! enough. Guess we haven't a few tongue-throttlers in this national game.

You may josh about One-Round Hogan, Knock-Out Brown, and Cyclone Johnny Thompson and such esteemed men of the grime ring, but who will gainsay that these illustrious names have more distinction about them than a cosmopolitan list beginning with Guy Featherhoff and Ransom McManus?

Which for you, St. Gordon McDuff or Battling Kelly? Or would you rather come when the manager bellows William Stumpf or Sam M. Guss in preference to Fighting Dick Hyland? Have it your own way.

Oh, what romance weaves itself about such gifted monikers as these: Samuel G. Frits, Lige Wooley, Pembroke Finlayson, O. M. Bagwell, Owen P. Kilburn, and Percy Ling. What a fine team could be composed of L. E. Wisdom, Merle D. Spaid, W. B. Rudisill, Bud Moe, Harry Kiflafay, A. H. Schnoffe, Glade Wearick, Melvin Legates, and Arthur Chirpich.

And they call baseball the great American game!

CURLING

A couple of rinks from Keene played a friendly game on the local ice yesterday. The visitors won by three shots. The local bonspiel is due to commence this afternoon.

HOCKEY

The East City Hockey team and the Y. M. C. A. team met in a game of hockey at Brock street rink last night from 7 to 8 o'clock. The score was 1-1.

Nay, nay, gentle reader, that youth with the pearly white sweater and the curly black locks who performed such wonders for the Examiner seven last night was not Chipchase of the Belleville-Trenton-Picton ptos. His name is Angelsey; he is a simon pure amateur and never has had anything to do with professional hockey (or any other kind.)

At the Sacred Heart Rink last evening "The Pickups" defeated Parnell street by a score of 3-2. Joe Christopher played good hockey for the losers, while Charlie Jones played the best game for the winners. The line-up was as follows:

The Young Grillers and Thistles met in a game of hockey yesterday. The Young Grillers won by the score of 3 to 0. In a previous game the Young Grillers won by 2-1. Following is the line-up:

The Bugle Band will play No. 3 Company a game of hockey on Friday night between 10 and 11 o'clock.

Your Danger From Kidney Troubles

BEGINS WHEN YOUR BACK ACHES

Backache is the first and the sure sign of kidney disease.

When the back aches or becomes weak it is a warning that the kidneys are affected in some way.

Next to the heart, the kidneys are perhaps the most important organs in the body. It is no wonder then that if the kidneys are affected the whole system must be.

On the first sign of backache Doan's Kidney Pills should be taken. They go right to the seat of the trouble, heal the delicate membranes of the kidneys and make their action regular and natural.

Mr. E. J. Sandier, Lake Annis, N.S., writes:—"I take a great deal of pleasure in telling you the benefit I have received from the use of Doan's Kidney Pills. I was troubled with my kidneys for several years; my back was weak, I had terrible headaches, and was so restless I could not sleep at night. I commenced using Doan's Kidney Pills and in a very short time I was right and fit again."

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50c per box or 3 for $1.25 at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

If ordering direct specify "Doan's."

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

DON'T you think it's about time for another "unusual occupations for women" talk?

I do. And I have one that particularly interests me to tell you about to-day. "Particularly interests me," I say, not because it is such an interesting or extraordinary occupation, but because it is a little niche in the work of the world so cleverly and so successfully filled.

It is the story of how a clever business woman makes cracked cups and saucers and broken plates yield her a big enough income to make it possible for her to indulge in some of the luxuries of life.

This woman lives in another city, and so if you should care to try to emulate her you might find a perfectly open field here.

Mrs. C. calls her business "restoring and mending." That means that she mends or when the pieces are lacking restores by moulding, riveting and tinting broken china or bric-a-brac of any sort.

Mrs. C. started simply as a mender. She had an excellent cement and went all over the country demonstrating this cement and mending china.

Finally she grew tired of traveling and made up her mind to settle down in Boston and build a stationary business. She applied at several of the jewelry and china stores for some of their repair work and also got from them the names of some of their best customers and sent cards to them.

Every successful piece of work brought her more work until now some of the best jewellery and china stores, not only in her own city but from other cities, send her their most delicate work.

She does not only ordinary mending of china but almost anything in the line of restoring that you can think of. Fans, dolls, cut glass, dishes and opera glasses are scattered about among the cups and saucers and plates and vases, awaiting the restorative touch of her skilful hands.

Many beautiful and precious pieces of china are brought to her and comfortable sums are paid her to restore some of these particularly treasured bits of bric-a-brac.

As so very many china hunters visit her shop to get their household goods restored from the ravages of the careless housemaid or the vandal baby she has an excellent opportunity to make money by selling rare china and pottery and always has a cabinet full of it to catch the china fiend's eye.

Any woman with some business ability, deft fingers and enough artistic sense to mould correctly and mix colours well, Mrs. C. thinks could follow in her footsteps and that there is a great field for this sort of work in other cities Mrs. C. is convinced by the orders that come to her from a distance.

Her advice to a woman who wants to start such a business is to apply for work as an apprentice in the repair shop of some big jewelry establishment, and if possible to take a course in modelling and colour mixing under some artist.

NO POSSIBILITY THAT SATURN IS INHABITED

Rev. Dr. Marsh Discusses the Question in an Interesting Address Before the Astronomical Society Last Night.

ADDRESS APPRECIATED

The meeting of the Royal Astronomical Society, which was held in the chemical laboratory of the Collegiate Institute last night, whilst not largely attended, was intensely interesting and instructive. In the absence of the President, Mr. H. B. Collier, Mr. T. A. S. Hay, City Engineer, occupied the chair. After the preliminaries, the Rev. Dr. Marsh, of Springville, delivered the lecture of the evening, the subject being, "The Planet Saturn." The speaker in his opening remarks, gave a definition of the word planet and went on to describe its relative distance from the stars, its distance from us, and its orbit around the sun and also referred to the most recent information available concerning the planet.

The planet as viewed by a powerful telescope, appears to be enveloped in a dense atmospheric cloud. The speaker also described the three rings of Saturn, namely, the crape ring, bright ring and the exterior ring. The planet revolves upon its axis once in 10 hours and 14 minutes. While the rings appear to be of a meteoric nature and consist of an orbit around about the planet of about 10 hours 32 minutes.

Relative to the possibility of people as ever inhabiting the planet, Dr. Marsh said that would be impossible as the atmospheric conditions and the intense heat would not permit.

Mr. Lowe, of the Trent Valley Canal, and other speakers, made some very complimentary remarks concerning the interesting and instructive nature of the address. The meeting then closed in the usual manner.

"SQUARE DEAL" TALKS OF STREET RAILWAY EXTENSIONS

To the Mayor and Council.

Gentlemen,—In Saturday's edition of the Examiner, you will observe in somewhat startling headlines, "Extension to local car system"; "Radial Railway Company expect to start work early in the spring." Immediately below this announcement in somewhat smaller type, you are informed that Irl Hicks promises cold weather in March. The latter of these forecasts, we have presented each month, and any reactionary storm period, and the relation it bears to Mercury Venus, or the planet, Mars, does not much upset our temperament. But to be treated to a forecast each early spring, like extension of Radial Railway line is, to say the least, too much of a bluff. When the ratepayer reflects that a former Council gave some years ago a franchise, an asset of the people—the most valuable they had in their right to give—not only of the two principal thoroughfares of this city, but the absolute right to double-track, place switches, and operate on any street in the entire city, but Crescent street. If this is not per agreement, gentlemen, I stand corrected. And for all this certain conditions were to be complied with, as to extension of lines, that would eventually have given to the people a service that would, in some measure, return to the ratepayer and public generally, some equivalent for the valuable franchise given. Now, what have we received? Each early spring our annual forecast, and I ask you now, gentlemen of the Council for 1911, have you any assurance that you are any nearer than you were six years ago to getting fifteen yards of additional road-bed, and equipment? Have you any assurance that one hundred pounds of wire are contracted for; indeed, a single rail? It is a fact that this material cannot be had in a day, much less months, and it's dollars to doughnuts that all you will see will be the forecasts. Tenders for new cars are asked! Well, gentlemen, the residents along the Radial Railway line and within one block of the same, will hail this "forecast" with delight. For a company that has not been hampered with large extensions to rolling stock and equipment, should do better than offer to the patrons at least a service of broken-down cars that rattle and bump and bang, with an ardour that would put a traction outfit to shame. Now, I might say this is not written with an animus against the Radial Railway Company, but as a rate-paying resident for thirty-five years, and a desire to see a much better service given, and concessions at least lived up to. And this is the right of every citizen, and we look to you to safeguard them in these matters, and see that they are lived up to, and obtain from this company some assurance more tangible than these annual "spring forecasts." That two-thirds of the rate-paying public are not being served, and that a more extended service to the south and west ends, and easterly portion of the city has been felt for a long time. And it is time that a move was made to obtain for the people the rights that they have so well paid for, or offer the franchise to a company that will not play fast and loose with an agreement entered into in good faith, and that should have worked out more profitably for the ratepayer and the Company, had the people been given a more extended service.

Yours,

SQUARE DEAL.

USES DYNAMITE TO END LIFE

Examiner Special:

JOHNSTOWN, PA., FEB. 28.—Placing a stick of dynamite in his mouth and lighting the fuse with a match, Steve Zoller, aged thirty, a miner of Souman, eighteen miles from here, blew his head off at his boarding house at Sonman. The rear of the house was wrecked by the explosion of the dynamite and the body of Zoller was blown thirty feet from the rear porch, where he had stood when he ended his life.

Zoller had been despondent for some time.

ENJOYABLE DANCE

Held by the West End Club Members Last Night

The second of a series of club dances given by the West End Club was held last night in their club rooms on George street. The rooms were tastefully decorated for the occasion and presented a very pleasing appearance.

A fine programme of dances were run through and were enjoyed by everyone. The music for the evening was supplied by Mr. Bogenth, who pleased the dancers with his efficient talent. A few extras were thoroughly appreciated, they being played by several of the guests who had to respond to numerous encores. There were about 35 couple in attendance. The gathering broke up about 12 p.m.

The patrons and patronesses were Mr. and Mrs. C. G. Graham, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hughes and Mr. and Mrs. E. V. Morphet. The committee in charge of affairs were Messrs. N. Laing, H. Callaghan and W. Pratt. The stewards were Messrs. J. Oldham, H. C. Kirn, J. Davidson and F. Haskill.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES

The bowling game last night between the Strikers and Mivvies was some game as far as the Mivvies were concerned. They defeated the heretofore invincible Strikers and ran up a record aggregate score for the present tournament of 1281, against the Strikers' 1093.

The game for to-night as scheduled Millionaires vs. Millards.

To-night at 8.00 p.m. the City Basketball League will meet to draw up the schedule. Teams are reminded to have their representative present.

The Collegiate and Senior Leaders basketball teams will meet for a friendly game of basketball at 6.30.

Thursday evening at 7.00 p.m. the Business Boys' Basketball team will meet a team selected from the Junior class, when every boy of the different classes is asked ot attend and cheer for their team.

VESTA VICTORIA COMING

A theatrical event of great importance will be the appearance her for one night of the congress of international stars, headed by the famous English singing comedienne, Vesta Victoria. Miss Victoria is well known all over the world as a singer of humorous songs, and her work has been in such demand for the past seven years, that she has been unable to gratify her great desire to tour Canada until the present season.

Vesta Victoria was born in Yorkshire near Leeds, and began her stage career at the age of four years, playing baby parts. Her father owned a circuit of twelve theatres and his lifelong wish was to see his daughter, and only child, shine in the histrionic firmament. She was educated by private tutors during the times when she was not actively engaged upon the stage.

The foundation of her theatrical experience was laid very firmly. She played every known kind of part, running the gamut of all emotions during her early girlhood. About the age of fourteen years her voice was noticed to have a peculiarly pleasant quality and steps were at once taken to cultivate it. She was sent to India, where, under a well known vocal teacher, she became possessed of her present wonderfully penetrating voice. At the same time her dramatic teaching had schooled her in enunciation, that most to be desired thing in the rendition of humorous songs. She found that she was naturally graceful, and able to portray the various emotions required in the delivery of these songs, and from the age of eighteen on she deserted the field of drama and became a singer pure and simple. She appeared by command before Rajah Bundi-Goona, in Calcutta, with such success that she was engaged to appear before the same company again a week following. As a token of his pleasure the Rajah gave Miss Victoria a diamond butterfly measuring six inches across from wing to wing, and valued at ten thousand pounds.

In London Miss Victoria many, yes, many times, played for the late King Edward, and the present King and Queen of England. Her two tours of Australia were wonderfully successful, her social engagements being so numerous as to cause a temporary break down, from which she recovered in a few weeks, however. Three times she has toured the United States, the last time at a salary of $5,000 a week, the highest price ever paid to a single artist. Her engagement here is for one night only, Friday, March 10.

CAREER OF TRAGEDY HAS TRAGIC ENDING

HARRISONBURG, VA., FEB. 28—The story of the life of John R. Gilmer, whose body was found by dogs in a remote hollow on the Blue Ridge Mountains, reads stranger than fiction.

When twenty years of age he enlisted in the Twenty-second Brigade of United States Volunteers. On his way to the Philippines the transport was wrecked in the Pacific Ocean. Gilmer and his companions had a thrilling escape. In the Philippines Gilmer marched through murky swamps under the pitiless sun, dood guard at night in water up to his armpits, and endured untold hardships. At the close of the Philippine hostilities he was advanced in rank for faithfulness and bravery.

On his return to a station in Texas he was in a railroad wreck. A score of persons were killed and Gilmer almost alone escaped unhurt. While in service he developed tuberculosis, and was sent to the Government Sanatorium in New Mexico. In 1902 he was honorably discharged and came back to his home in Eckingham, almost a physical wreck. Eighteen days ago his relatives here thought that he had gone back to Texas.

A STUBBORN CINDERELA

"A Stubborn Cinderella" is without question one of the greatest successes on the musical stage. It scored a run of five hundred nights at the Princess Theatre, Chicago; played to capacity houses at the Broadway Theatre, New York, for six months and was equally popular in Philadelphia and Boston, where it was presented for twenty-two consecutive weeks. Manager Chas. A. Goettler has this season provided a cast for "A Stubborn Cinderella" that gives it added charm. Cort Albertson plays the leading part and the prima donna role is in the hands of Hazel Kirke. A big chorus of show girls with good voices and pretty faces adds much towards making the show a success. A number of genuine song hits are introduced during the performance, the best perhaps being "When You First Kiss the Last Girl You Love," "What's the Use?" "Don't be Cross With Me," "If They'd Only Let Adam's Rib Alone," "Don't be Anybody's Moon But Mine," "I'm in Love with all the Girls I Know," and "Love Me Just Because". "A Stubborn Cinderella" will be the offering at the Grand on Friday, March 3. Seats now on sale.

gentleman with the petition, that he would not oppose the reciprocity measure in any way whatever.

In conclusion, he said that anything that savoured of free trade could not fail to prove a boon to the farmers. He considered that freedom of trade was the basis of all financial success and prosperity, and when the farmers would prosper, everybody would prosper, and ventured to say that should Sir Wilfrid Laurier retain the reins of Government for another fifteen years he would be more likely to have the United States annexed to Canada, than Canada to the United States.

REGIMENTAL ORDERS

Headquarters, Peterborough,
March 1st, 1911.

Order by Officer commanding 57th Regiment, Peterborough Rangers.

No. 1. For the information of the Regiment the following extracts from District Order No. 3, dated Kingston, Feb. 23rd, 1911, are promulgated with reference to the selection of N. C. O's. and men as representatives of units of the Non-permanent Militia at the Coronation Contingent.

The following conditions must govern:

(a) Numbers.

Infantry—Regiment of eight Companies—3 men per regiment.

(b) The N. C. O'S and men selected should be chosen from the most efficient companies of infantry regiments and the representatives must each be from different companies.

(c) No application from any one who has already taken part in former contingents on such great occasions as the Jubilee of the late Queen Victoria, or the Coronation of the late King, will be considered.

(d) They must at present be included in the service roll of the unit to which they belong.

(e) They must have completed the full military training in 1908-1909 and 1910, except in the case of corps organized since that date.

(f) They must be well set up, of suitable height and physique, thoroughly trained, and certified by their commanding officer, to be of "exemplary" charcter.

(g) They must be examined and passed fit by the medical officer, subject to the confirmation by the Principal Medical Officer, before embarkation."

No. 2.—In compliance with the above order a parade will be held at the Armouries on Saturday, March 4, at 8 p.m., of all those members of the 57th Regiment who desire to make application for selection for the Coronation contingent.

No. 3.—In addition to the foregoing condtions for selection the Commanding Officer will require that the men be selected must be British subjects, at least 5 ft. 8 in. in height, and between the ages of 21 years and 30 years, both ages inclusive.

By order,
D. Walker, Captain Adjutant.

REGULAR MEETING

The regular meeting of the St. Peter's Ladies' Literary Society will be held Friday evening, March 3rd, at St. Alphonsus' Lyceum. An excellent programme is promised to those present, the chief feature of which will be a debate between the Normal school and the Literary Society. The subject of the debate is, "Resolved, that Clubs are beneficial to a community." The affirmative will be taken by Miss Gertrude Day and Miss Irene Gibson of the Normal school, while the negative will be upheld by Miss Eileen Coughlin and Miss Ethel Hayes, of the society. This will be a very interesting and close contest and a large attendance is expected. A good musical programme will also be presented.

ST. ANDREW'S CONGREGATION SUCCESSFUL BANQUET

Large Attendance of Members and Adherents Around the Festive Board—Some Eloquent Speeches

AN ENJOYABLE EVENING

A very enjoyable banquet was held under the auspices of St Andrew's Church last night. It was the outcome of the unanimous decision of the Board of Managers at their last annual meeting, when it was decided to hold a banquet and discuss the several important business matters in connection with the management of the church, and also to enjoy a social evening together. The catering was attended to by the lady members of the congregation and was all that could be desired.

Mr. Andrew McFarlane, chairman of the Board of Management, acted as toast master most acceptably, and explained the objects of the gathering.

The programme opened with a solo by Miss King, which was very beautifully rendered. Next followed an eloquent address by Mr. Gilchrist, secretary of the Y. M. C. A. It was practically a clear, forceful and powerful message to the rising generation calling attention to the golden opportunities which are constantly presenting themselves to those who are willing to reach out and grasp them. The speaker also drew attention to the duties of Christian men and women to the church. In conclusion, he made reference to our forefathers and the trials and tribulations which constantly beset their path in their strenuous record for the faith on which the foundation of the Presbyterian doctrine is founded.

Next followed a well-rendered quartette by Mrs Dorner, Miss Howell, Mr. Wright and Mr. Gerrard.

A toast was next proposed by Mr. McFarlane to the church and its finances, which was responded to by members of the finance committee—Messrs. Gillespie, Harstone and Richardson.

Mr. Chisholm next proposed a toast to the pastor, Rev. Jas. Rollins. In his opening remarks he drew attention to the fact that he (the speaker) had only been a member of the congregation of St. Andrew's for about six months, but had known Mr. Rollins previously in their college days. He had followed his course since leaving Queen's University, and looked forward to a most successful ministry in St. Andrew's.

In reply Mr. Rollins thanked the members of the congregation and all concerned for their loyal support and kindness shown him since coming here; and gave strong evidences of his desire to minister to the congregation in a manner to make it a power for good in the City of Peterborough and district, with the co-operation of the members.

Mr. Brown next gave a reading entitled "An Irish Letter," and responded to a hearty encore by giving a second reading entitled "How Dennis Signed the Pledge."

Mr. Langford then proposed a toast to the ladies and took occasion to make a number of very favourable remarks concerning their virtues.

The toast was responded to by Mr. Glover.

The Chairman then made a few remarks concerning the several good points of the banquet, after which the meeting was brought to a close by the singing of the Doxology.

POLICE COURT

John James, who was remanded a week ago, appeared before Magistrate Dundie again this morning. He was charged with insanity, but during the time he was in gaol here, he showed no signs of insanity. Chief Thompson received a communication from his parents, and his story was confirmed so far as his western experience was concerned. The Chief also found out that James had been a month in gaol at Cobourg on the same charge as he is now arraigned for. It appears that ~~he came~~ here directly he was let out, but he, himself, is unable to remember about being in gaol at Cobourg. He was very much relieved when the Chief told him that he was not in gaol at Cobourg for a criminal offence.

From all personal appearances the man is evidently all right, and only troubled temporarily with a slight derangement of his mind. Mr. Houston Emigration Officer, took him in charge this morning, and will place him with one of the farmers near the city. Mr. Houston stated that he had applications for about two hunderd men of work on farms, and that he would have no trouble in placing James.

But no charge will be laid, for the young man meant no harm. His father sent him $200, of which $60 was for tuition in a certain college, and the remainder for board and expenses for the necessary six or eight months. Before enrolling, however, the son looked around, and hearing of another collegt, requiring but one-half the fees and one-fourth the time, he investigated carefully, and decided on the 30-day Syl-la-bic System of Shorthand at the Moon College, 282-286 Yonge street, Toronto. He started his course on September 3rd, 1910; graduated after 28 days' study, and has already earned over four months' salary. The $167, along with his present earnings, are on deposit in one of the city's banks, and the father, of course, is reconciled.

ENGLISH IN SOME PLACES.

In Boston "bean" is "been,"
Though Whittier's "been" was "bean."
As doubtless you have seen,
He made it rhyme with "pen."

In Pittsburg it is "bin,"
Though it contains no i's.
There it would be a sin
To speak it otherwise.

In Boston it's "again."
The second a is long,
As is the a in "rain."
In Kansas that is wrong.

There when they say "again,"
As frequently they do,
They make it rhyme with "pen,"
And Kipling does it too.

But Kipling, it is plain,
Is not for wasting time,
He often says "again"
In dither out a rhyme.

Down Indiana way
They cut it to "ag'in,"
Although in writing they Still let the a slip in.

Good friends, dear friends, I vow
I have no wish to crank,
But kindly tell me how
Is proper English spoke?

Hiram's Butterfly

A Story of an Aeroplane

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

It was poised on the rolling green turf of the west meadow and with its outspread wings looked very much like a great white butterfly.

"I call it an 'air flier,'" explained Hiram Butler to the little crowd of men and women who had gathered about the machine. "I feel justly proud of her too. Made every bit myself except the engine."

"Must have cost a pretty penny," drawled James Lummox enviously. "If I'd been me I'd rather have an automobile. You can take the hull family out in one of them cars."

"It do seem sort of a selfish contruption," put in Mrs. Deacon Skinner. "For instance, suppose you wanted to take Ellen out on a Sunday afternoon. Where the land would she sit?" She peered curiously at the broad leather strap that served as the single seat in the flying machine.

"I wouldn't want to go," snapped Ellen Butler, with an angry glance at her husband. "Catch me trusting myself in the air with any man!"

All the while that her husband was demonstrating the wonders of his invention and even while he made a short experimental flight above the clover tops Ellen was thinking bitterly of the money that had gone into the useless machine. The bank account, savings of years, had been drained to its last dollar, and the mortgage which Hiram had placed on the house to get more money to perfect his patents seemed to Ellen like some huge blotch that would never be eradicated.

When the onlookers had gone away Ellen still remained, silently watching Hiram's movements about the machine. Presently he looked up, and his gaze met her hostile eyes. He straightened immediately.

"I wish you didn't feel so bitter about this, Ellen," he said soberly. "You know I wouldn't have taken the money out the bank or mortgaged the place if I didn't expect to make a hundred times as much with this invention.

"If it's a failure, Ellen," he went on quietly, "I'll take a job in the pin factory to Dodgeville till I've earned enough to put the money all back. I'll do it and run the farm too. But I'm not going to fail. Do you think I'd put that money in it if I hadn't felt pretty sure of success? I'm going up tonight too. Don't you want to see me?"

"No, I don't, Hiram Butler, and I wish you wouldn't fly over the house. The pesky thing might fall on it and knock off a chimney or come through the roof. Land knows, I'd like to keep a roof over my head even if I starve to death!" Ellen turned and proceeded toward the house without one backward glance at her husband.

Hiram stood by the machine, his shoulder drooping slightly, his broad forehead knitted thoughtfully. His brown eyes seemed to peer anxiously beyond the low lying hills as if timorous of the result of this evening's experiment. Budnutt, the aviator, had an estate there, and he had promised Hiram he would buy the patent outright if the "air flier" would make a successful flight across the twenty miles of country that separated their respective homes.

Now, as he stood there in the pasture, his invention the public topic of the community, Hiram spoke as if in self defense against his neighbors' disapproval and his wife's bitter resignation.

"I may be a farmer born and bred," he said slowly, still with that farseeing glance across the hills, "and maybe that's the very reason I've invented a flying machine when I couldn't contrive a corn sheller or a mowing machine to save my life. It's the birds have done it. I've studied 'em till I believe I could almost fly myself."

The supper bell jangled noisily from the front porch, where Ellen awaited his coming. He was quick to catch the note of impatience in its brazen tongue and hastened toward the house. As he entered the kitchen his wife passed into the dining room and sat down at the table.

It was a silent meal, as had been all the meals in that house since the mortgage had rested thereon. At last Hiram pushed his plate aside and arose.

"I'm going down to the postoffice, Ellen. When I come back I'm going to make the longest flight I've ever attempted. If I succeed in getting over to Budnutt's place he's promised to buy me out. You wouldn't want to come out and see me off?" He spoke a little wistfully.

Ellen's face turned obstinately away [illegible] of the pewter mixing spoon cup of tea.

"Hiram no!" she said emphatically. "One nearly in the family is enough! If you get as far as the chicken house I hope you'll look up the children. You forgot 'em last night."

When she had cleared the table and washed the supper dishes Ellen stood in the doorway looking out into the moonlighted yard. Hiram had not yet returned from the village or else he will about to start on his startling aerial journey without coming to the house again.

Ellen approached the machine, which lay shrouded in its canvas blanket, and its very bigness suddenly attacked her with terror of the prospective journey and the danger that menaced her husband. She wrung her hands nervously, striving to think of some method that would deter Hiram from flying that night. Under the blue sky and sunshine it would not seem so dreadful—so dangerous.

Fifteen minutes later she was returning from the barn tugging at a long rope at the end of which a small anchor bumped over or stuck into the ground with annoying frequency. In the shadow of what she knew to be the rear of the machine Ellen paused and lifted the canvas. She surveyed the intricate machinery with a growing conviction that her husband must be deterred from making an ascension above the ground. Suppose some part should give way?

She had determined upon what special rod she would tie the rope and thus anchor Hiram to the ground until she could by wit or wile prevail upon him to give up the risky adventure, when she heard his approaching steps.

She whisked away in the shadow of the machine just in time to receive the moaning folds of canvas in a cloud upon her form. She freed her head and shoulders and crouched unseen by her husband. Carefully he examined the air flier, trying each bolt and nut, fingering a delicate adjustment here and there, his face stern and close lipped in the light of a small brass lantern held in one hand.

Then he moved forward; there was the heavy chugging of the engine, and Ellen's heart almost stopped still. In another instant it would be too late to detain him—he would be out of her reach, beyond her touch, and he could not hear her plea for pardon.

It had flown above the house. Ellen darted desperately forward, groped for and found the anchor, tied the rope hastily and clumsily to the nearest projecting rod, paused to tie another hard, square knot before jamming the flukes on the anchor into the soft turf.

With a whirring rush the machine started down the slope, the wheels revolving dizzily. The anchor whipped after, and somehow Ellen's hands closed desperately about the flukes, and then she felt herself rising upward with terrifying velocity.

Clutching the anchor, Ellen swept up with the machine very much like the tail to a gigantic kite. She heard Hiram's voice swearing vigorously, and she felt no horror. She closed her eyes tightly and held on. Her feet brushed treetops once or twice, and she knew she was above the cedar grove. Then one foot tangled in some crooked branch, and she lost her hold on the anchor. With a frightened cry she fell into the embracing arms of the close limbed cedars. Through an aperture in the branches she saw the air flier dart upward and away through the moonlight, the anchor dangling like a twisted thread, until the noise of the engine died away and all was still.

Cradled in the treetops, Ellen dared not stir for fear of falling. She was a slight woman, and she had fallen snugly into strong branches that curved upward like the ribs of a ship. Her hands were torn and bleeding, her face was scratched, and her twisted ankle pained horribly. But above all was the agony of belief that her husband had gone forth into space and would never return.

Too wretched to cry aloud more than once, she huddled, cold and stiff, through the long hours of the night. Owls hooted unpleasantly near, whippoorwills throbbed in the thickets, and all around were the sleepy twitter of birds and the soft brush of wind in the trees.

She must have fallen asleep, for the sound of her name called in Hiram's stentorian tones awakened her to pale daylight. There was anxious terror in his voice.

"Here I am," she called feebly, and then louder, until at last he came wonderingly to her rescue. It was not until they were within the house and she had sobbed out her wretchedness on his breast that Hiram spoke soothingly.

"Do you know what you did, Ellen Butler?" he asked. "I was in doubt about making a successful flight, but I didn't know what was the matter with the machine. That there anchor was the additional weight that balanced her perfectly. Whatever saved it from catching in the trees I don't know. It was a clear case of Providence all through, I guess, for you had a narrow escape. That there anchor sold the machine, Ellen, for without it I couldn't have got to Budnutt's As it is, it's sold for enough to raise the mortgage and make us pretty independent besides." He yawned sleepily and stretched himself.

"It's done more than that, Hiram," said Ellen gently, the tears shining in her penitent eyes.

"What's that?" he asked. And then, looking down into her upturned face, he kissed her and smiling whimsically, answered his own query. "Settled the first and last quarrel we ever had eh?"

Ellen nodded assent. "And shows that even the tail of a kite may be useful." She shuddered a little at the recollection of her perilous flight, and Hiram paled suddenly as he stooped [illegible] her. And then in the moment of reconciliation they forgot the white butterfly and the fortune it had made for them.

"And how are we feeling today—eh?" asked Dr. Overdone.

"Worse than ever, sir," his patient answered gloomily. "It's no use, doctor; my case is hopeless."

"Come, come! You mustn't say that!" said Dr. Overdone. "Tell me, what have you been doing since your last visit?"

"All you told me, sir. And I'm afraid the diet hasn't agreed with me."

"That's nonsense!" exclaimed the doctor. "It can't possibly have upset you. I told you to confine yourself to such foods as would be taken by an ordinary three-year-old child."

"Yes, and I obeyed your orders to the letter," groaned the sick man. "During the last twenty-four hours I've eaten five apple cores, sixteen ends of burnt matches, seventy-eight beet buttons and a threepenny bit!"—Answers.

As He Remembered It.

"Did any of you ever hear the song," asked the elderly boarder, "entitled 'The Laugh of a Child?'"

It appeared that nobody present ever had heard it.

"It was very popular fifty years ago," he said, "but I don't suppose it's in any of our modern collections of music. It was a great favorite of mine."

"How does it go?" timidly inquired the new boarder.

"I don't remember it all, but a part of it goes like this."

Clearing his throat, he sang:

"Oh, the lah-hah-hahf of a chi-hi-hild,
So wi-hi-hild and so free-hee-hee,
Is the meh-heh-herriest sow-how-hound
In the wuh-huh-huh-hurld to me!"

"Dinner's ready!" gasped the landlady, although it was a full quarter of an hour earlier than the regular time.—Chicago Tribune.

Punishment For Perjury.

Perjury is a crime more severely punished in Germany than in any other country in the world. Even an apparently trivial misstatement under oath carries a sentence of ten years in prison. Excepting murder, there are few crimes that carry as heavy a penalty as perjury. The German theory is that the entire system of jurisprudence rests on the respect for an oath administered under the forms of law and that this must be strictly guarded in order to secure the punishment of other crimes and insure justice in civil cases. Germany stands at one extreme and the United States at the other. Fewer people are punished in the United States for false swearing in the witness box than in any other country.—London Telegraph.

Spain Brought Us Horses.

The Spaniards were the first to bring horses to this continent, though the paleontologists tell us that the rocks abound with fossils which show that equidae were numerous all over America in the eocene period. It is a singular fact, however, that there were no horses in America when the first Europeans came hither.

Alchemy and Chemistry.

The chemistry of today had its origin in the old time alchemy, which had for its main inspiration and object the discovery of the "philosopher's stone," by means of which the alchemists hoped they might be able to effect the transmutation of the base metals into gold. The great students of real chemistry were the Arabs of the twelfth, thirteenth and fourteenth centuries. They may be said to have created the science, and from them it was transmitted to modern times.

THE CHIMES WILL DEVELOP HARMONY AND PATRIOTISM

Mr. D. O'Connell Points Out the Results That Will be Achieved Through All Creeds and Races Uniting in the Project.--A Lasting Monument to the Desire of Peterborough Citizens to Give Evidence of a Harmonious and Patriotic Aspiration.

Peterborough, March 1, 1911.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Sir,—I read with a great deal of interest, the statement of the chimes committee, published in the evening papers some days ago.

It appears that through the efforts of these gentlemen, when the amount asked for is fully subscribed, there will be installed in the City of Peterborough the finest set of chimes in the Dominion of Canada. This will be a distinction, of which our citizens may well be proud, and the beautiful and dignified music of these chimes will undoubtedly lend a great charm and pleasure to their city life.

In my opinion, however, a still greater purpose will be served by the accomplishment of this good work. It is the fervent wish of every patriotic citizen that all classes in the community, irrespective of race or creed, should animated by a common patriotism, live together, a united people, in the utmost peace and harmony. These chimes placed in St. John's church by the common contribution of all creeds, will, I am confident, do more than anything else to bring into existence and preserve this much desired harmony and will do much to stimulate the proper and benefitting sense of patriotism. They will be a lasting monument to the desire of Peterborough citizens to give some substantial evidence of this harmonious and patriotic aspiration.

When this project is understood in its true light I am sure, our citizens, animated by a laudable desire to bring to a happy fruition the good work undertaken by the Chimes committee, will contribute promptly the small amount (if any) that may be required to complete the work so well calculated to promote good will and a common understanding amongst them. The time is fitting and the opportunity a splendid one for the citizens to show that they are still a generous and peace loving people. May the speedy conclusion of the committee's work make these sentiments quite manifest. I am.

Yours truly,
D. O'CONNELL.

ROCHESTER FINANCIER JUST PASSED AWAY WAS BORN IN THIS CITY

The Rochester Democrat and Chronicle says:

Walter B. Duffy died yesterday at his home in Lake avenue, aged 71 years. Although he had been ill about a year and a half and friends of the family were aware that recovery was hardly to be expected, the announcement of the death was a shock to the city in which Mr. Duffy so long had been a commanding figure.

Walter B. Duffy was one of the group of men of marked business acumen whose influence on the commercial life of Rochester was first felt during the decade of 1860-70 and who became eminent in the commercial, financial and civic life of the city in later years. To these men is due in large measure the credit for originating and executing many projects that made for the welfare of the city. Mr. Duffy was a man of foresight, with a wide grasp of affairs, of great daring based upon full confidence in himself, of quick decision, excellent judgment and a close student of details.

Mr. Duffy was born in Peterborough, Ontario, Canada, on August 8, 1840. When his parents removed to Rochester Walter B. Duffy was but little more than one year old, and from that time until his death he was a resident of this city. He was identified with this city for so many years that he was believed by many in recent years to be a native of Rochester. In every sense of the word except nativity he was an American. As an evidence of his wide interest in affairs it is pointed out that in Savannah, Ga., Duffy street was so named in his honour and that in Idaho, especially in the mountains north of Boise, and in the mountains of southern New Mexico and other mining regions, the name of Walter B. Duffy is almost as well known as in Rochester.

That Mr. Duffy was interested in many lines of business is evident from the fact that he was a director of the New York & Kentucky Company, the Lincoln National Bank, the Rochester Trust and Safe Deposit Co. the Duffy-McInerney Company, the National Hotel Company, the General Railway Signal Company, the German Insurance Company, the Pfaudler Company and many other corporations of this city, and of the Hotel Lafayette Company, of Buffalo; the Hotel Marlborough Company, of New York and various mining companies Of several of these companies he was also the president. He was the builder and owner of the National Theatre.

The late Mr. Duffy is related to several Peterborough people.

Too Much Reciprocity In Young Women

Appreciation

1910 was a Banner year with us, but 1911 unrolls even greater promise, because we have thousands of patients in this city and vicinity who are wearing glasses prescribed by us, many of whom could not be fitted elsewhere, and we know that they will not lose an opportunity of speaking a good word for us.

We take this occasion to acknowledge our indebtedness to our friends and patrons, our appreciation of their good will and faith in us, which have helped to make our success so great. We need not disguise the fact that we believe that we have deserved well of you. That if you have had confidence in us and have bestowed upon us your patronage it is because we have done something to warrant it. We have done "the best we could" and we purpose to keep right on doing so.

We are deeply grateful to our friends and customers for their loyalty. We ask for and hope to merit a continuance of the same.

HOW MANY?

How many of those voting through the yellow press, against the reciprocity agreement have read the agreement? How many know what it proposes? What articles it affects, and how it affects them?

MR. SIFTON'S SPEECH.

It is amusing to note the great glee with which the Conservative journals and politicians hail Hon. Mr. Sifton's declaration in opposition to the trade agreement. They have some reason for this, for his speech in parliament on Tuesday was the only coherent, matter-of-fact public utterance of any importance against the agreement. While it was a model of parliamentary oratory it did not precisely add anything important to the argument, but it was a relief to the windy, incoherent, wildly declamatory arguments from the Opposition benches. It must be admitted that while Mr. Sifton's speech as a speech, was an able one, many of his conclusions were more assertions than logical deductions. For a speaker of his ability, his remarks were remarkable for assertion and forecast. After all, Mr. Sifton is only Mr. Sifton, and his denunciation of the agreement is entitled to no more weight than the unqualified approval expressed by Hon. Geo. A Cox as reproduced upon this page. The latter has an assured position both in politics and finance and has no reason to make a spectacular breach with his party in order to clear the way for future action or affiliation.

It is "painful" to note how much importance the Conservative press places upon the "painful" nature of Mr. Sifton's action in once more antagonizing his party relations. When Mr Sifton left the Liberal cabinet in 1905, this "painful" step was made more "painful" by bitter antagonism on the part of the Conservative party and a determined attempt to drive him from public life. Since that time Mr Sifton's adherence to the Liberal party has been somewhat nominal and his attitude upon the trade agreement came as no surpise. It is not to be expected that upon such a question as the trade agreement there should not be some defection in the Liberal ranks. Liberalism means Liberalism and not hide-bound partyism. Mr. Sifton's attitude is bound to have some effect but it does not mean the collapse of the government or the party. Since Sir Wilfrid took power two or three of his ministers have antagonized the policy of his administration. Mr. Taite went his way and the government survived. Mr. Blair in 1902 came out against the Transcontinental railway, but the people endorsed the government's policy. Mr Sifton antagonized the policy of the government in respect to a certain measure of legislation which has fully justified itself and, as far as opposition to it is concerned, is only a memory. While it is to be regretted that a man of Mr Sifton's influence and former relation ranges himself against the present policy of the government, that does not mean that that policy will not prevail in parliament, not be acceptable to the country and not represent as large a measure of advance and national development as the fiscal policy adopted in 1897.

ASQUITH ON RECIPROCITY.

(London Advertiser)

Premier Asquith laid an unerring finger on the Achilles heel of the tariff reform movement in Great Britain, when he said:

"Suppose we had entered into this (Chamberlainite) bargain; suppose you had given colonial preference; suppose you put a tax on foreign food; and suppose that the whole thing was working beautifully, smoothly, is it not obvious from what has happened that if any day of any week and in any month of the year, without any reciprocity at all the ninety or hundred millions of the United States could have toppled the whole fabric over? (Ministerial cheers.) It was not necessary for them, when their own wants dictated to them the importance of having free sources of supply of food and raw material from Canada—it was not necessary for them to enter into any bargain with Canada at all. All they had to do was to lower their own tariff wall, and in a moment Canadian corn goes into the United States, and the very foundations of the edifice of imperial preference are undermined. (Ministerial cheers.) A more crazy structure resting on a more unstable basis and more certainly doomed by the inevitable play of economic forces to decay was never created by the imagination of a politician. (Ministerial cheers.)"

In the foregoing, Mr. Asquith raises a question which anti-reciprocity Canadians refuse to meet. They contend that the flow of Canadian products into the United States market under reciprocity would dislocate our transportation systems and draw us into the orbit of the United States. The United States, however, could open its markets to us "in any day of any week, and in any month of the year," and produce all the effects which would follow the adoption of the present reciprocity agreement. The opponents of the agreement say these effects will be disastrous. Will they say how this imaginary calamity is to be prevented?

The idea of imperial preferential trade was built on the assumption that the countries of the British Empire would be always confronted by hostile foreign tariffs. No allowance was made for the present attitude of the United States. The United States can topple over the fabric of imperial preferential trade—though not the British preference in Canada—by simply abolishing its duties on foodstuffs, as Mr. Asquith has indicated: and it can also without Canada's co-operation bring about all the results that would flow from the adoption of the Taft-Fielding compact.

KENT CONSERVATIVES FAVOUR AGREEMENT

Fully Fifty Per Cent. of Kent County Conservatives Approve Reciprocity —Will Give Larger and Better Market

(Toronto Star)

CHATHAM, MARCH 1.—The people of Kent County seem to be born "boosters." They cannot talk to a stranger for five minutes without telling him that Kent will grow better fruit and hogs, and better anything else, than any other county on earth. It must be said, however, that the county has had good grounds for congratulating itself. It is famous for its natural produce, and its people look upon reciprocity as affording a splendid market for the products of the district. Its farmers are even more enthusiastic than those of Eastern Ontario, and the merchants of Chatham also show a majority in favour of the trade pact.

An interesting sidelight on the impression made upon Conservative business men here is furnished by the comment of ex-Mayor Charles Austin, Chatham's representative of the riding. Mr. Austin committed himself to opposing the agreement before negotiations were concluded. He still contends that it was unnecessary and ill-timed, but bears the following testimony to the effect in Kent:

"I think there is no doubt that the agreement will benefit the agricultural intrests of this neighbourhood, and there is no question as to the general approval being expressed by the farmers. I believe that Kent would approve of the agreement if the matter were put to a vote."

Other Ex-Mayors Approve.

Two other ex-Mayors of Chatham, prominent merchants, whose party affiliations are Liberal, go much further than Mr. Austin in approving the arrangement. One of these is Mr. W. H. Westman, who deals with the agreement, both on general grounds and locally.

"In a general way," he told The Star, "an exchange of a market of 92,000,000, which is opened to Canada, for a market of 7,000,000, which is opened to the United States, seems a pretty good bargain. Again, the United States population is now so large that it can hardly feed itself. Canada has good land, which is capable of raising produce for two nations like the United States. I think the agreement is the very best advertisement we could have for securing good settlers for our unoccupied lands, since a ready market is guaranteed for the produce of such lands by the nearby market of the States. And what will help the farmer, who is the backbone of the country, cannot but help every other branch of industry in Canada."

Kent's Opportunity.

"So far as our own county is concerned," he said, "we can produce large quantities of barley, beans, sugar beets and early vegetables and fruits. These will all find a ready market in the States. And while I see advantages for the farmer, I cannot see where there will be disadvantage. I do not think that the small reduction in agricultural implements will hurt those industries. However, I would not be in favour of extending the principle of reciprocity at the present time to manufactured articles to any great extent. That is something which should be made very plain to the people of the United States.

"I cannot see for the life of me how extending trade relations will interfere with our loyalty. The agreement is a master stroke of politics in the intrests of the farming community."

Mr. Stone Approves, Too.

Mr. W. M. Stone, a merchant and ex-Mayor of the city, told the Star that he could not see a bad point in the agreement. "We had the largest malt house here of any place in Canada. A duty was put on, and where is it now? It was torn down, and its employees went away. Then there are beans. Two-thirds of the bean crop of Canada comes from this district. The agreement means 45 cents additional on every bushel sent to the United States. In Detroit the barley market is 90 and 92 cents, as compared with 55 and 56 cents locally."

These opinions are fairly representative of the sentiment among Chatham's business men. The local Conservative newspaper took a confidential vote among these, and found a substantial majority for reciprocity.

Conservative Farmers Rejoice.

Conservative farmers do not hesitate to express their approval of the Fielding measure. One old farmer, whom an over-zealous Liberal described to The Star as "just a rotten Tory," is quoted as saying rather bitterly that the reciprocity agreement is the only good thing which ever emanated from a Grit Government.

John Smith, of the River road, Harwich, is practically interested in hogs. "I believe," he told the Star, "that reciprocity will provide me with a better market. It is certainly all right from a farmer's standpoint." He is a staunch Conservative.

A. N. Bechard, a representative French Conservative of Dover Township, declared that he believed the farming class would receive a certain amount of benefit at the present time but feared that the agreement might lead to annexation, "and for my part he said, "I prefer ot stay under the British flag." He was the only man interviewed in this district who apprehended any such possibility. The French have been so often accused of disloyalty by the Conservative press that there may be, on their part, a reluctance to take a stand which might lead to sneers on the part of the loyalty shouters.

Another Conservative farmer interviewed was James McConnick, Deputy Reeve of Harwick. "The trouble with the agreement is that it doesn't go far enough for me," he said. "For instance, I would like to have seen a bigger reduction in agricultural implements. I am a Tory, but not a bide-bound one, and I find that other farmers around here are fairly well satisfied with the agreement."

Wholly in Favour.

"I'm a Conservative, but wholly in favour of it," declared Edward Hea, of Raleigh. "My specialty is hogs, and I feel that reciprocity will make me independent of the packers and buyers of this country."

Mr. Hea added that he had interviewed a great many Conservatives and found them all in favour of reciprocity.

The Conservative Chorus.

Frank Sultor, another well-known farmer, proved ready to join the agricultural chorus in favour of reciprocity despite his Conservative convictions. "As a farmer," he said, "I think it will be beneficial with regard to both grain and stock. In my neighbourhood Conservatives as well as Liberals are talking in favour of it. It will enhance the price of produce and increase the value of stock. Store cattle, especially further east, where there is not the same opportunity of fattening them, should find a good market across the line."

So is W. W. Everitt, a Conservative Harwich farmer, who says that he would not undertake to discuss reciprocity from a national standpoint, but believes if will benefit the farmers of Kent. "I think," he said, "that it will be a better thing for the agricultural interests of Kent, Essex and Lambton, than for any other counties in Ontario. It may not benefit us with regard to fruit, but our beans, for instance, will find a better market in the United States, mind you, I do not think that we will save the whole 45 cents duty. The markets will to some extent, equalize each other. But we should get a better price than now, at any rate. "Personally," this Conservative added, "I would sooner see absolute free trade. The worst feature of the agreement is that manufactured articles were not touched. If there had been a much greater reduction in manufactured articles, especially implements and farm machinery, I would have been better pleased."

Judging from opinions expressed by farmers interviewed hereabouts, fully fifty per cent of the Conservative yeomen openly approve of reciprocity as it affects this district, and only a small percentage actively oppose it.

SENATOR COX ENDORSES THE TRADE AGREEMENT

The Greatest Financial Authority With the Largest Interests at Stake, Hopes to See the Agreement Endorsed.

The Hon. Senator Cox, whose opinion on financial and commercial matters is worth something, and whose interests are all concerned in the prosperity of Canada, addresses the following letter to the Globe:

Lest my silence should be misunderstood, will you permit me through your columns to say that, having carefully considered the situation involved in the proposed reciprocity arrangement in all its bearings, I am unable to share in the alarm that in some quarters has been manifested. Perhaps I look at the matter superficially, but I am at a loss to understand how so natural an adjustment of the trade arrangements between Canada and the United States can involve the serious state of affairs that has been predicted. I would regard it as a great public misfortune were those employed in agriculture, lumbering, mining and fishing, which are the industries almost solely affected by the proposed tariff changes, to form the opinion that the men concerned in the management of the financial institutions of the Dominion have not their welfare at heart as well as the welfare of the classes of the community engaged in manufacturing and trading.

We should not forget that agriculture is still our greatest industry, and that anything that improves the condition of the agriculturist must promote the welfare of Canada from one end of the Dominion to the other. A vast portion of the capital and deposits in our banks and other financial institutions consists of the savings of the people of rural Canada. I am convinced that financial authorities who condemn the agreement on sentimental grounds, even when frequently by their own sense of fair play, they are forced to admit its values as a measure for improving our trade relations, do not represent the opinions of those whose money they hold in trust and on whose behalf they take it upon themselves to speak.

I have the utmost faith in the ability of my fellow-countrymen of rural Canada to hold their own against the competition of food producers in the United States. They do so now in the open markets of the world, and Canadian wheat, cheese, bacon and other products are everywhere recognized as articles of the highest standard. The opening of an additional and very valuable market for his products will not cause the Canadian agriculturist to lose his skill or the soil to lose its fertility. We need not look far into the future to see on this continent a population of two hundred millions. The increase is over two millions yearly at the present time. The huge area of vacant land in Western Canada is the only sufficient source from which the foodstuffs for this huge population can come.

Ontario has a vital interest in the filling up of the Canadian West. An acceleration in the rapidity of settlement consequent on the inauguration of relatively free trade in foodstuffs on this continent will bring to the Province many such industries, as, for instance, the Oliver Plow Co., which will employ a very large force of men in the city of Hamilton, and which announces that the trade agreement will make no difference in its plans, because it is buildings to take advantage of permanent basic conditions.

Possibly an underlying fear on the part of manufacturers is that, though their position is not altered appreciably by the proposed arrangement, its adoption will be a prelude for the wholesale bringing down of duties later on. I believe there is no basis for such anxiety. If I am not mistaken, the opinion throughout Canada, entirely irrespective of party lines, is practically unanimous that the prosperity of the country for a long, indefinite period is absolutely bound up with reasonable protection for our manufacturers. The Canadian Government must give the most careful consideration to the intrests of all sections, and in my opinion the legislation now under way is evidence that they are discharging that responsibility with great wisdom and fairness.

Canada is growing fast because of its great resources and their intelligent development, and because of the strength, stability and progressiveness of the Government. I have no fear that carrying out the proposed arrangement of reciprocity in natural products will injure business generally or hurt interprovincial trade. On the contrary, in my opinion our prosperity will tend to increase because of the arrangement, and our railways will still find themselves taxed on their lines in carrying the ever-increasing volume of business throughout the country as a whole.

I see with amazement not a few owners of factories in this city who will reap great benefit from enlarged markets all over the country opposing the agreement on the ground that it will lead to a change in our political relations. As a Liberal, I have been proud to see the party led by Sir Wilfrid Laurier showing its affection for the Motherland by the adoption of the British preference, by the sending of Canadian troops to South Africa, by the taking over and maintaining of fortified bases at Halifax and Esquimault, and by the launching of a project for naval defence. It is inconceivable that the party that has been responsible for these progressive steps toward the closest possible relations with Great Britain should now seek in the remotest degree to endanger the future of Canada.

Great good in a business way, and, in my opinion, no harm to Canadian nationality, will result from the adoption of the agreement, and for that reason I most sincerely hope that it will be carried into effect.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

O'Neill Phillips, a prominent musician of Montreal, committed suicide by shooting.

The C.P.R. is said to have given orders for over three million dollars' worth of steel rails.

The population of St. Thomas will show an increase during the year of about 400, making 15,200.

It is reported that an English syndicate will build summer hotels near the leading Canadian cities.

A petition to Premier Asquith is being signed by M.P.'s urging the formation of an Imperial Advisory Council.

Norton Griffiths, British M.P., has given a further thousand pounds towards emigrating distressed families to Canada.

The Toronto Globe says: Sir Alan Aylesworth, Minister of Justice, will retire after serving out the present term of Parliament.

Sir H. Richards, Canadian counsel at The Hague fisheries arbitration, has been elected professor of international law at Oxford.

The notorious outlaw, Hakkim Khan, with thirty of his followers, was captured by British forces in India. Five of the party was killed.

An exciting chase after a burglar at Montreal by boarders dressed in night clothing ended in a return empty-handed to find the house on fire.

Five horses were suffocated at 6:30 yesterday morning in the stable of Mr. John Hughes, cabman, Seigneur street, Montreal. Mr. Hughes valued his horses at $1,000.

The second session of the Legislature of British Columbia was prorogued yesterday. Among the chief measures passed during the session was the making of provision for a future Provincial University.

Robber Pleads Guilty.

New York, March 2.—Jos. G. Robin, banker, pleaded guilty yesterday to larceny of $27,000 from the Washington Savings Bank, of which he was president. He will be sentenced on March 27.

Seven other indictments remain. Through his operations the Washington Savings Bank, the Northern Bank of New York, the Carnegie Trust Co., and a string of minor concerns which he promoted, went into insolvency.

BE WARNED BY HEADACHE

t Tells of Serious Derangements of the Liver and Kidneys

DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS

You can stop a headache with powerful drugs. But it is not generally wise to do so.

A headache almost always warns you of derangements of the digestive system, the liver, kidneys or bowels.

Awaken the liver to healthful action by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and you not only free yourself of headache, but remove the cause which will soon lead to more dangerous results than headache.

Invigorate the action of the kidneys by this treatment and you take away the dangers of Bright's disease as well as free yourself of headache.

Pains are the result of poison in the system and whether you have headache, backache or aching limbs, you can be almost sure of relief and cure when you cleanse and regulate the vital organs by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

They are wonderfully prompt, as well as definite and thorough in action. You can depend upon them, no matter how long-standing or complicated your case, so long as the cause is the sluggish, torpid condition of the liver and kidneys.

If you don't feel like risking 25 cents for a box, write for a free sample. A trial will convince you of their merits. One pill a dose; 25 cents a box; all dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

Situation Desperate.

Washington, March 2.—To meet the pressing needs of the starving people of China, Consul-General Wilder at Shanghai yesterday cabled to the Secretary of State an urgent appeal to the people of the United States for the contribution of $100,000 more to be sent by cable to the stricken people. Mr. Wilder makes it plain that that amount will be needed before the army transport Buford, now loading at Seattle, can possibly arrive in China with its supplies.

The Red Cross yesterday cabled $1,000, making a total of $23,000.

How to Tell If Your Hair Is Diseased

Even if you have a luxuriant head of hair you may want to know whether it is in a healthy condition or not. 98 per cent. of the people need a hair tonic.

Pull a hair out of your head, if the bulb at the end of the root is white and shrunken, it proves that the hair is diseased, and requires prompt treatment if its loss would be avoided. If the bulb is pink and full, the hair is healthy.

We want everyone whose hair requires treatment to try Rexall "93" Hair Tonic. We promise that it shall not cost anything if it does not give satisfactory results. It is designed to overcome dandruff, relieve scalp irritation, to stimulate the hair roots, tighten the hair already in the head, grow hair and cure baldness.

It is because of what Rexall "93" Hair Tonic has done and our sincere faith in its goodness that we want you to try it at our risk. Two sizes, 50c. and $1.00. Sold only at our store.

—The Rexall Store. McDermid and Jury.

New York State Wants Public Power.

Albany, March 2.—A bill directing the State Water Supply Commission to make an immediate investigation of the practicability of developing water power at Niagara Falls and in the Niagara River, and to obtain the consent of the Federal Government, if necessary and possible, to the development of such power by the state, was introduced by Assemblyman Lareau.

Maine's Vote on Prohibition.

Augusta, Me., March 2.—Re-submission to the vote of the people of Maine of the amendment to the state constitution prohibiting the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors, now lacks only the signature of the governor before being put into effect. The matter will then come before the people at a special election to be held next September.

Big Liners Can't Get Docks.

New York, March 2.—Calvin Tomkins, commissioner of docks and ferries, as well as the agents of large steamship lines, were disappointed by the refusal of the harbor line board of the Army Engineers Corps yesterday to recommend permission for the extension of piers along the Jersey and New York shores of the Hudson River for accommodation of the larger liners now building.

It is generally agreed that without longer piers transatlantic liners will have to abandon New York and Hoboken as ports of entry for the larger ships, such as the White Star Liners Olympic and Titanic, which are now being built at a length of 900 feet.

A Light Sentence.

Boston, Mass., March 2.—For killing his chum, James H. Lawson, a Tennessean, Jas. F. Farrell a former resident of Toronto, was sentenced to the state prison at Charleston for two and a half years.

The testimony of Mrs. Lawson, wife of the murdered man, who said she thought Farrell a fine man, and that he was justified in killing her husband and that of the aged mother of Farrell, who lives in O'Hara avenue, Toronto, helped to make the sentence the lightest ever given for a crime of the sort.

Vote for Church Union.

Winnipeg, March 2.—The Presbytery of Winnipeg, by a vote of 46 to 7, went on record yesterday in favor of the basis of the church union as handed down by the general assembly. The vote followed a long discussion and the minority represented those who desired the question to be sent down to congregations and sessions.

WANT ARBITRATION BOARD.

G.N.W. Employes Get No Answer to Their Demands.

Toronto, March 2.—The committee representing the aggrieved employes of the Great Northwestern Telegraph Co. will apply to-day for a board of conciliation to investigate the demands of the G.N.W. operators for increased wages. No names have yet been selected for members of the board, but the men have five days in which to name their representatives.

In speaking to the newspapers last night, S. J. Konencamp, president of the Commercial Telegraph Union of America, said: "We made repeated efforts to-day to get in touch with some one in charge of the general manager's office. We were informed that no one was there in charge at present, and could obtain no definite date as to when there would be someone there capable of talking business with us.

"A letter was addressed this afternoon to the general manager stating that on Feb. 2 the men had submitted a schedule and set of working rules and asked for a date for the purpose of presenting their arguments in behalf of the schedule. The reply of the company was to dismiss the committee on Feb. 15. A conference with S. B. McMichael, assistant general manager, had brought a statement to the effect that in another week the men would be out of the service, and the management would not deal with a committee from a union or composed of their own employes. And that unless the management were willing to meet the committee, we would proceed under the laws of our organization. This letter asked for a reply by nine o'clock, and as at that hour we had received no communication from them, we decided to apply for a board of conciliation."

One of the men imported from Detroit and one brought from London to replace employes that have been dismissed, quit yesterday.

The matter of taking action upon the company's alleged infringement of the alien labor law has been deferred, as it is considered of secondary importance to the securing of the proposed schedule of wages.

DOCTOR ADVISED HOSPITAL

But Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Cured Her.

Upper Sandusky, Ohio.—"Three years ago I was married and went to housekeeping. I was not feeling well and could hardly drag myself along. I had such tired feelings, my back hurt, my sides ached, I had bladder trouble awfully bad, and I could not eat or sleep. I had headaches too, and became almost a nervous wreck. My doctor told me to go to a hospital. I did not like that idea very well, so, when I saw your advertisement in a paper, I wrote to you for advice. I have done as you told me.

"I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills, and now I have my health.

"If sick and ailing women would only know enough to take your medicine, they would get relief."—Mrs. Benj. H. Stansbery, Route 6, Box 18, Upper Sandusky, Ohio.

If you have mysterious pains, irregularity, backache, extreme nervousness, inflammation, ulceration or displacement, don't wait too late, but try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills, and such unquestionable testimony as the above proves the value of this famous remedy, and should give everyone confidence.

Miss Vera Flynn visited her parents at Rockroft last Sunday.

Mr. Glen Allen of Smith spent Saturday evening at the home of Mr. T. T Shearer.

ROCKDALE HAPPENINGS

Examiner Special.

ROCKDALE, FEB. 15.—The funeral of the late John Brown, which took place on Saturday, Feb. 11, was very largely attended. The Masonic Lodge of which he was a member, took charge of the service.

Miss Annie McCutcheon was the guest of Miss Edith Brown on Sunday.

Mr. Dan Yeomans and Miss Mabel Yeomans of Havelock, spent Sunday in the settlement.

Mrs. Bert Brown of Sterling, returned to her home on Monday after having spent a few days with her friends.

Mr. Richard Lees, Public School Inspector, visited the school last week.

Mrs. A. A. Brown spent Tuesday in Havelock.

Mrs. Aunger is spending a few days with friends at Blairton before going for her home in Ashburnham.

Liquor Cases Adjourned.

Collingwood, March 2.—The hearing of the sixty liquor cases here has been adjourned, pending the outcome of an application by Col. Bruce, K.C., on behalf of the defendants for an order of prohibition to restrain the Police Magistrate from proceeding with the cases. The defendants claim that the indictments are removed from the calendar because of not having been specifically called and adjourned at the close of the first day's proceedings. It is also held that the subpoenas to the witnesses are only valid for the date specified.

BEARING DOWN PAINS

What woman at sometime or other does not experience these dreadful bearing down pains. Mrs. E. Griffith, of Main street, Hepworth, Ont., says: "A heavy bearing-down pain had settled across my back and sides. I was often unable to stoop or straighten myself. Many times each night I would have to leave my bed with the irregular and frequent secretions of the kidneys and just as done out in the morning as on retiring. I was languid and would have to let my house-work stand. Nothing I had tried would benefit me. I learned of Booth's Kidney Pills and concluded I would try them, which I did, and soon found the long sought relief. My back strengthened and I began to feel better and stronger. I now enjoy my sleep without being disturbed and feel grateful to Booth's Kidney Pills for what they did for me."

Booth's Kidney Pills are a boon to women. She would know less of backaches if she took more of these wonderful pills. They are nature's greatest specific for all diseases of the kidneys and bladder. All druggists, 50c. box, or postpaid from The R. T. Booth Co., Ltd., Fort Erie, Ont. Sold and guaranteed by Wm. Madill.

Fellow Travelers.

Kingston, March 2.—A batteryman named Young is missing, and a brother batteryman named Matthews reports a suit case with clothing valued at $75, also missing. It is believed that the man and the suit case took the same route.

Worry, whatever its source, weakens, takes away courage and shortens life.

The Quickest, Simplest Cough Cure

Easily and Cheaply Made at Home. Saves You $2.

This recipe makes 16 ounces of cough syrup—enough to last a family a long time. You couldn't buy as much or as good cough syrup for $2.50.

Simple as it is, it gives almost instant relief and usually stops the most obstinate cough in 24 hours. This is partly due to the fact that it is slightly laxative, stimulates the appetite and has an excellent tonic effect. It is pleasant to take—children like it. An excellent remedy, too, for whooping cough, sore lungs, asthma, throat troubles, etc.

Mix 2 cups of granulated sugar with with one cup of warm water and stir for 2 minutes. Put 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents' worth) in a 16 oz. bottle and add the Sugar Syrup. It keeps perfectly. Take a teaspoonful every one, two or three hours.

Pine is one of the oldest and best known remedial agents for the throat membranes. Pinex is the most valuable concentrated compound of Norway white pine extract, and is rich in guiaicol and all the other natural healing elements. Other preparations will not work in this formula.

The prompt results from this recipe have endeared it to thousands of housewives in the United States and Canada, which explains why the plan has been imitated often, but never successfully.

A guarantee of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this recipe. Your druggist has Pinex or will get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

MARKET REPORTS.

Liverpool and Chicago Wheat Futures Close Lower—Live Stock—Latest Quotations.

CHICAGO, March 1.—Sudden buying on a large scale this afternoon for a leading speculator gave wheat a firm close, although the market early went far beneath even the latest of the recent succession of new low records for the season. The finish was at the same figures as forty-eight hours before, to ⅛c to ¼c down. Corn made a net gain of ⅛c to ⅜c; oats a rise of ⅜c to a shade off, and provisions 10c to 17½c to 20c advance.

The Liverpool market closed to-day ¼d to ⅝d lower on wheat, and unchanged on corn, compared with yesterday. Antwerp closed ⅝c lower on wheat, Berlin ⅜c lower, Budapest ⅛c higher.

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, March 1.—There continues to be a fairly good demand from European sources for Manitoba spring wheat, and sales of 100,000 bushels were made for May-June shipment. The tone of the local market for oats was stronger, and prices advanced ½c to ¾c per bushel, in sympathy with the strong closing of the Winnipeg market. The foreign demand for spring wheat flour was fair, and sales of several round lots were made. The local market is quiet and millfeed is still scarce and firm.

Oats—Canadian western, No. 2, 35½c to 35½c, car lots, ex-store; extra No. 1 feed, 37½c to 38c; No. 3 C.W., 37½c to 37¾c; No. 2 local white, 37½c; No. 3 local white, 36½c; No. 4 local white, 35½c.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, March 1.—The export trade this week from the port of St. John, N.B., for this season to date has been very quiet, there being only 2,200 head shipped in the three months, as compared with 6,425 for the corresponding period a year ago, showing a decrease of 3,225 head, which is attributed to the fact that Canadian exporters have not been operating to any extent since the close of navigation in 1910 from here, and American exporters have been able to secure all the space they wanted from U. S. ports; consequently, the shipments from Portland show up well, there being 7,325 head forwarded, as compared with 1,625 last year, showing an increase of 5,700 head and 9,650 sheep.

At the Canadian Pacific live stock market the offerings were 650 cattle, 350 sheep and lambs, 1,225 hogs and 225 calves. A feature of trade in cattle was the easier feeling in the market, and prices ruled ½c per pound lower, which was due to the somewhat limited demand on account of the Lenten season being now on, and in consequence butchers do not care to carry large stocks of beef; but, as the supply was not large, a fair clearance was made at the reduction in prices recorded as above. Choice steers sold at 6½c; mixed at 6¼c; fairly good at 5¾c to 6c; fair at 5½c to 5¾c, and lower grades at 5¼c to 5½c per lb. Cows and bulls brought from 4½c to 5½c per pound.

Owing to supplies of hogs being larger than expected, a weaker feeling developed in the market, and prices declined 25c per 100 pounds. At this reduction the demand was fairly good, and sales were made at $7.25 to $7.50 per 100 pounds, weighed off cars. The market for calves was also weaker, on account of the larger run, and prices ruled lower at from $5 to $10 each, as to size and quality. The trade in sheep was quiet at 5c to 6c, and a few spring lambs sold at 8c.

HASTINGS NEWS ITEMS

Examiner Special.

HASTINGS, MARCH 1.—The junior grade of the Public School is closed for a few weeks on account of the illness of the teacher, Miss M. Greenley.

The Ladies' Aid, in connection with the Methodist Church held their monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. Nelson Beavis, on Thursday afternoon, when a sleigh-load of about 23 ladies drove out to attend. After the transaction of the regular business of the month, refreshments were served, and a sociable hour spent together, after which the party embarked for the homeward trip, reaching town in good time and in the best of spirits.

Messrs. Gibson and Huycke, who have been conducting a jewellery business here for the past two years, have disposed of their stock to Mr. T. Coughlan, who takes possession in the near future.

Mr. Harold Beavis, town, has purchased the farm of Mr. Jas. McGillen in the neighbourhood of Dartford and intends moving there some time in early March.

The many friends of Mrs. L. F. Clarry of Edmonton, late of Hastings, will be interested to hear of the reception lately given by her to her new acquaintances in that far-off city. Mrs. Clarry has written to some old friends here, to whom we are indebted for some particulars. She was assisted by Miss Clarry, of Millbrook, who wore a dainty costume of pale blue silk, the hostess being gowned in rich satin, with touches of gold. Tea was poured by Mrs. Mitchell, looking lovely in a gown of amethyst silk and large picture hat, while shaded candles added much beauty to the scene. Mrs. Clarry's friends, in town, wish her much prosperity in her Western home.

Mr. Jas. McCarthy is spending a few days in Toronto, in the interest of his business.

Rev. and Mrs. Edmison of Demorestville, spent a few days during the week with Dr. and Mrs. Edmison, of town.

Mr. Coughlan, of Cobalt, is in town visiting friends.

Miss Mabel Laing and Miss Bella Howson of Norwood, have been visiting their friends, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Beavis.

Mr. and Mrs. Elmhirst of Syracuse, are guests of the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. M. Elmhirst.

Mr. James Andrews of Norwood, was in town on Tuesday.

The Epworth League of the Methodist Church held a unique social on Friday evening, the admission fee being one cent for every letter of the person's name. Quite a number was in attendance and a very enjoyable evening was spent in different forms of amusement. During the course of the evening light refreshments were served by the Social Committee, who had charge of the meeting.

Mrs. Orr has gone to Picton to spend a few weeks with friends, in the hope of regaining her failing health.

Miss Maggie Stevenson left on Monday for Roseneath, where she will spend a few weeks with friends.

Mr. Wm. Cuthbertson of Norwood, was in town on Friday.

Mr. D. Landon of Campbellford, was in town through the week.

Mr. H. Elmhirst of Lang, gave us a call on Friday.

Mr. Erle Laing of Norwood was in town on Sunday.

Miss Annie Short spent Sunday with friends out of town.

A WOMAN MADE HAPPY

"I could scarcely get about the house to attend to my work and felt miserable nearly all the time," writes Mrs. Alex. Buchanan, Island Brook, Ont. "After using Dr A. W. Chase's Nerve Food my system is wonderfully built up. There is no further trouble from dizzy spells and stomach weakness, and with health and strength restored, life has a new pleasure for me."

"THE GODDESS OF LIBERTY"

"The Goddess of Liberty," Mort. H. Singer's musical comedy production that will be seen at the Grand Opera House on Monday, March 6th, bears the distinction of having the endorsement of the Canadian authorities. Among the prominent men who attended the performance of this play in Winnipeg, and then endorsed it are Sir Daniel H. McMillan, Colonel Steele, Colonel R. M. Thompson and A. A. Gilroy. The entire main floor was reserved and occupied by the officers of the Royal Strathcona Horse, Canadian regiment. During the last act the officers presented Miss Violet Seaton, the leading woman of the company, with a huge bouquet of American Beauties, which they had sent especially from the states for the purpose.

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

THE question as to who works the harder, the wife of the man of small income, who does all the housework and takes care of two or three babies, or the man who struggles to earn that small income, came up the other day, and this was the Fair-Minded Man's contribution, interesting enough, I thought, to pass along.

I don't know who works the harder. I suppose that's different in different cases, but I often think to myself that the woman has the worst end of it in this way. When I go to work in the morning I am apt to meet two or three men I know on the train. In the office I come in contact with a dozen more. I usually lunch with someone I know and say, 'How de' to a few more coming back on the train.

"Now I have the contact, however brief, with all these minds to take me out of myself, and interest and stimulate me."

"What does my wife have in the meantime? Outside of the grocery man and the iceman, and maybe one or two peddlers and perhaps a short chat with the woman next door, and the hour the children are home for lunch—nothing. And all the time she's doing work that keeps her hands busy but not her mind.

"Now doesn't it stand to reason that she is going to find the day longer and more tiresome than I do?

"When I come home at night there's nothing I like to do so well as sit down in front of my own hearthfire and just rest. I used to think it was queer that my wife felt differently, was always wanting to get out somewhere when she had such a nice home. And then one day somehow I got to thinking and saw it this way, and I think I've been considerably better since about going out with her and trying to bring home as many outside rests as I could."

If more men would get the Fair-Minded Man's point of view I think we should have fewer discontented women, fewer absurd love affairs on the part of married women, less insane jealousy and unreasoning suspicions on the part of wives, fewer children out of sympathy with and ashamed of their mothers, fewer wives old at forty and fewer women in the insane asylums.

In a little country town not so many miles from here a staid middle-aged woman of unimpeachable character and habits went out into the garden one morning and calmly set fire to the barn.

The barn and house burned to the ground. The woman was examined and taken to the insane asylum, where she died a month later.

"Too much to occupy her hands and too little to occupy her mind for thirty years," was the concise explanation the doctor gave.

That woman's sole diversion had been church on Sundays when the horses weren't too tired or it wasn't too stormy, and a prayer meeting or church social per haps once a month.

That is an extreme case, of course, but there are less virulent ones developing all about us.

Most of the insane jealousy on the part of women, most of the discontent and suspicion and unrest develop while fingers fly over tasks so mechanical and so familiar that the mind is set free to roam at will, and lacking pleasant occupation, it is given over all too often to foolish brooding.

Broader educations, more opportunities for entertainment and outside interests, more chance for social work, those wonderful world links, the telephone, the magazine and the newspaper are doing much to improve this condition of affairs, but there is something that will do more than all of these.

And that is simply more husbands like the Fair-Minded Man — more men with his point of view and his will to help.

Here's hoping the next generation, or better still, the next decade, brings them.

DAIRY MEN MET YESTERDAY IN CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC HALL

There was a Dairymen's meeting held at the Conservatory of Music hall, yesterday afternoon, and a great deal of important information was imparted to an audience of about fifty people, principally farmers. Mr. G. A. Gillespie presided.

Mr. Barre was the first speaker. He had as his subject, "The Care of Cream." He had a chart, which he used in explaining and bringing out his points. He said that milk should be separated while warm, that is as soon as the milking has been completed. If the milk is cold, 60 per cent. of the butter fat is lost. He explained that there was nothing lost by running a separator too fast, and yet 20 revolutions too slow—would result in a great loss. An unbalanced separator bowl will also cause a loss. From 94 to 97 degrees is the right heat to have the milk for separating. In money, the normal separator loss for one year is $24.45. The amount lost by washing the separator only once daily is $48.91. The amount lost by milk being too cold is $58.69. The amount lost by an unbalanced bowl is $83.14.

The amount lost by the separator being turned 20 revolutions too slow is $102.17. At the close of Mr. Barre's speech, Mr. Gordon Wright sang a much appreciated solo, after which followed, a lecture on Cow Testing by Mr. Whitly.

Mr. Whitly said that the idea was at present being discussed, of establishing a Dairy Record Centre in Peterborough. He congratulated them upon the fact that Peterborough was the first place in Central Ontario to be a Dairy Record Centre. He said that it was proposed to locate a representative in Peterborough, or some village near, and have him go aoining the farmers and try to interest them as much as possible in the cow-testing business. He stated that their work must be strengthened, and that it was his opinion if the representative got got in close connection with the farmers, it would be strengthened. This representative will endeavour to get information that will be of vital importance to the farmers. Mr. Whitley said that he wanted the county to act in co-operation with the representative. He wanted them to give the representative any information they could.

Lastly, the speaker asked them to have their cows tested, as soon as they were asked, and they would see the difference. He said that the information that their representative would get was not for themselves, but to be published, and for the farmers—for the whole empire. A man's intelligence must also be put into the work if he wants to make a success of dairying. By cow-testing, a man gets down to hard facts. He knows just what he has and what it is worth. We hear of a dairy cow simply as a machine, but there is something more than a machine about a cow—there is life. A man had to deal with life, when dealing with a cow, and must not get the idea that he can feed her the scrubbage of the farm, and that she will turn it into good milk. Again there is no use in feeding a cow good Alfalfa and grain if she is no good. Whether she is good or not can be ascertained by cow-testing, and if she is no good, the farmer is better without her, because he will get more profit from the good ones, when the feed is taken into consideration.

A cow must have good stables, well ventilated and well lighted, and she is better to have something to keep the flies from tormenting her in the summer time. There is more knowledge obtained from monthly tests than there is from yearly tests.

Mr. Whitley told them, in closing, that there were immense possibilities in cow-testing, and he hoped that they would go in for it.

Mr. Burgess was the last speaker. He gave some interesting information about cow-testing. He said that men had told him that the value of their cows had been increased $25 and $50, but he said that the average increase was about $35. He also made a few other remarks, which proved very interesting and instructive.

GUARD FOR HAT PINS

ROCHESTER, MARCH. 1.—Inspired by the newspaper accounts of accidents due to hatpins protruding from women's hats and the recent passing of a city ordinance in regard to hatpins, W. H. Wood, of No. 12 Meigs street, has invented a guard for the end of the hatpin.

The guard looks exactly like the head of a fancy hatpin. Inside it is a spring, invisible, which holds the guard on the end of the hatpin. The latter is thrust through the hat in the ordinary fashion and the guard is sliped on the point of the hatpin. The appearance of the hatpin at the point is then similar to the head of the pin; in other words, the hatpin appears to have no point and two heads.

LENT OPENED WITH SPECIAL SERVICES

The beginning of the Lenten season was marked in the Anglican and Roman Catholic churches of the city yesterday, (Ash Wednesday) by special services, which were very largely attended, large congregations being present at the different churches.

At St. John's church the special preacher for the evening service was Rev. F. J. Sawers, M.A., of Lakefield.

At St. Luke's, Rev. H Earle of Omemee, addressed a large congregation in the evening.

Rev. H. R. Trumpour occupied his own pulpit at All Saints' Church and preached a strong Lenten sermon.

ECZEMA NOT A BLOOD DISEASE

Eczema is a disease of the skin and not of the blood. For this reason internal medicines have never been a success in curing eczema. Whatever the cause local application is necessary to heal the sores and restore the skin to a healthful, natural condition. For this reason Dr. Chase's Ointment has a world wide reputation as being without a rival for the cure of Eczema.

DISAPPEARS IN NEW YORK IN BROAD DAYLIGHT

The Sensational Case of Miss Cuyler Like That of Dorothy Arnold—Creates Much Excitement.

A FASCINATING MYSTERY

Everybody who reads the newspapers has heard of the mysterious disappearance of Miss Dorothy Arnold, who left her home in New York City in the middle of December last, and who has not been heard from since, in spite of the fact that scores of detectives, spurred on by the offers of rewards from her wealthy relatives, have been exhausting every effort to trace her movements. It is singular that a short time before her disappearance a book was published entitled "The Strange Case of Miss Cuyler," which related almost exactly the story of a similar disappearance on the part of a fictitious character, "Miss Cuyler." In the novel hte ciriumstances are almost parallel with those which surround the strange absence of Miss Arnold. The details of how the mystery is solved makes a fascinating story, which is told in a gripping, enthralling manner. Miss Arnold's case, has not been cleared up, but that of Miss Cuyler has and readers of the Examiner will be able to read all about it in the new serial story, which will commence in this paper in a few days and which the Examiner is confident will prove the most interesting yarn ever published in serial form in Peterborough. If you read the first chapter you will never be satisfied until you have read it all.

CITY FINANCE COMMITTEE IN SESSION LAST NIGHT

The City Finance Committee met last night and the following members were present: Ald. Anderson, chairman; Mayor Morrow, Ald. Buller, Ald. Duncan, Ald. Metheral.

A letter was read from Mr. E. H. D. Hall, requesting the payment of witness fees for the defence in the case of James Gorham, amounting to $98.55.

Ald. Buller moved, seconded by Ald. Metheral, that the witness fees be paid, and a cheque for the amount issued.

The Mayor moved that the city renew its membership in the Union of Canadian Municipalities, and the Ontario Municipal Association, and that the Treasurer issue cheques for that purpose.

A letter was read from the Water Commissioners asking that debentures for $10,000.00 for laying of mains and sewers in 1910, be paid.

Moved by Ald. Metheral, seconded by Ald. Buller, that the request be granted.

Moved by Ald. Buller, seconded by Ald. Duncan, that the Protestant Home be given a grant of $600.00 on the same terms as last year.

Moved by Mayor Morrow, seconded by Ald. Metheral, that the city's ad. in the Canadian Hardware and Stove Journal be renewed for this year.

CASE WAS DISMISSED

James Doald, who appeared in court a few days ago, on a charge of indecent exposure, was this morning allowed to go. The Magistrate strongly advised him to give up drink, and go to work. The Chief asked that he be allowed to go on suspended sentence, but the Magistrate decided to let him go absolutely free and give him a chance. His Worship Magistrate Dumble told the prisoner that if there was any manhood in him, he would do better. The prisoner stated that he had been sending $10.00 and $15.00 home to his wife in Scotland every month. He promised that he would leave the drink alone, if he was let go, so the case was accordingly dismissed

BIG MUSICAL SUCCESS

At "The Grand" Monday, March 6th

While catchy music, pretty girls and scenery, lots of life and good management are absolute essentials to a comedy with music, to make it successful in this day and generation, talented and accomplished principals must also be provided before a play can command the earnest attention of the theatre-going public of to-day

It was with that important fact in mind that Mr. Mort. H. Singer set about to organize the company which is to present "The Goddess of Liberty" at the Grand Theatre next Monday, March 6. And it was because of the solicitation with which the selections were made that the play was so entirely successful when it was first produced in Chicago by Mr. Singer and had to be kept in that city for a run of over one solid year. Even after that long time, it was only with the greatest effort that Mr. Singer was able to get "The Goddess of Liberty" on to the road, that after other cities might have an opportunity to witness what was called by one of the Chicago critics, "Chicago's best musical comedy."

Mort H. Singer will present "The Goddess of Liberty" this season with a notable cast among whom are Violet Seaton, Marcelle Montaigu, Lydia Kane, Mrs. Guise, Robt. H. Wilson, Al. Denier, Johnny Fogerty, and many others. The celebrated Singer show girls and dancers are in a superabundance and lend no small amount of support to the excellent principals who have been a universal hit everywhere "The Goddess of Liberty" has been presented.

POST CARD COLUMN

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Dear Sir,—In reply to the Drury article in the Examiner of Feb. 28th, copied from the Toronto Star, I wish to say here, emphatically, that what E. C. Drury said of the Johnston petition in North Monaghan, regarding the farmers and gardeners, who signed it in favour of protection and knowing exactly what they signed, that the said E. C. Drury, or whoever is responsible for the article, published a downright falsehood, and from my impression of Drury on a public platform, it is not beyond his doctrines to make such a statement to accomplish his ends. On the other hand I, in defending myself, and all parties believing in protection, have no scheme to advance. We simply believe in letting well enough alone. Let me state that in North Monaghan, where there are 220 people engaged in various kinds of agriculture, the Drury meeting had an audience of about 30 people. It is easy to see how enthusiastic the farmers and gardeners of North Monaghan were to hear the great free trade, I AM, when only 30 out of 220 turned out to his meeting.

Mr. Drury and his confederates do not tell the farmers that under The Friendly Nation Act, that the Reciprocity pact will place other large food producing countries on the same basis as Canada and the United States. The tariff on manufactured goods remains practically untouched. Mr. Farmer, while all the protection you have had in the past is to be completely undone. The farmers of Canada should wake up and consider that the products of their farms will, under Reciprocity, come in competition not with the United States alone but with the Argentine Republic, Russia, Spain, Austria-Hungary, Denmark, Norway, Sweden, Japan Australia New Zealand and other countries.

What is good for the manufacturer is also good for the farmer. Let all classes of industrial and farm life stick to protection, and to the upbuilding of Canada.

Some Interesting Items From Young's Point

Examiner Special.

YOUNGS POINT, MARCH 1.—The Catholic Order of Foresters held a number of card parties in their hall this winter. On one occasion a large number drove from Ennismore and Lakefield and played cards with the Foresters here, the visitors winning by a few points. A week later about twenty drove from the Point to Ennismore for a return game, the Point winning this time. We expect the Ennismore gentlemen here on Thursday evening next for another friendly game.

In the Foresters' Hall last Monday evening, the ladies played the gentlemen euchre, the latter winning by a few games.

The sleighing is splendid from here to Peterborough, except a few pitch holes between here and Lakefield. Any one fond of tobogganing will not mind going through the pitchholes.

Master Carman Varty aged nine years, son of Mr. George Varty, who resides one mile east of Havelock, was kicked in the stomach by his father's horse on Friday last and died from injuries on Monday.

The little fellow had returned from school and as his custom was, changed his clothes and went to meet his father (who was skidding logs in the swamp) and to drive the horses home for him. However, he met his father coming home on horseback and who told the boy that he was so tired that he thought he would have to ride home this night and let him walk. The little fellow who is very fond of horses, did as he had been told and followed right close to the horse's hind feet. The father heard a peculiar noise and on looking back saw the boy lying on the ground in an unconscious condition. He was at once taken to the house and Dr. Kindred summoned to attend to his injuries. Later another doctor was called, but the little fellow passed away on Monday. The parents are grief stricken over the loss of their dear one. Funeral arrangements as yet have not been made known.

Bahama Islands Want to Become a Part of Canada—The Government is Coming to Negotiate

STEPS TO BE TAKEN

Montreal, March 2.—The addition of another province to the Dominion is the idea that T. B. Macaulay, managing director of the Sun Life Assurance Co., brings back with him on returning to this city after a visit to the West Indies.

A meeting which took place in the Bahama Islands on the 20th of last month was, Mr. Macaulay states, one of great enthusiasm. The Legislature suspended its sittings and workmen dropped their tools on the streets on the day of the meeting to talk over the question of asking Canada to take them under her wing. Although there was no official representatives of Canada among the 20,000 people assembled, there were plenty of prominent men. Among the speakers, several well-known in Canadian life, said Mr. Macaulay, were Mr. Macdonald, mayor of Rigaud, Que., Mr. Nicholson of Winnipeg, and Judge McIntyre of Whitby, Ont.

The upshot was that a committee of a dozen members of the Legislature were appointed to further the project and to consider the advisability of sending a deputation to interview the Dominion Government, and this decision was arrived at with only two dissentients, the objection of one of them being to joining any country that had a protective tariff.

The advantages, said Mr. Macaulay, would be great on both sides. The addition of the Bahamas to Canada might be a small matter, but in another way it would be a long step forward in the pathway of our national manhood and importance.

The acquisition of this new province, added Mr. Macaulay, would effectively broaden the views of our people. Our navy question would solve itself, for we would not only wish to properly protect the routes which our growing trade would follow. Nassau might perhaps become a coaling and dockyard for our fleet.

"It is not merely trade relations that we would like to see established," concluded Mr. Macaulay. "We want to take advantage of this desire of the people down there to add a province to the Dominion. The Canadian Parliament should at least meet these people half way and discuss the matter seriously."

The governor of the Bahamas, Sir William Grey-Wilson, is anticipating a visit from Earl Grey (who is his cousin) next winter, a fact which seems to indicate which way the wind is blowing.

Fire in Richmond, Que.

Richmond, Que., March 2.—This town was visited by a fire which wiped out the Duncan Block on Main street at an early hour yesterday morning. The loss is estimated at $30,000, when the contents of the various stores are taken into account.

The sufferers are A. J. Bedford, druggist; M. J. Palmer, fancy goods, who occupied stores on the second floor, and on the upper flat were Mr. J. G. Alexander, insurance and ticket agent; Mr. Alard Barber, and Messrs. Mackenzie & Darters, lawyers. They lose everything. Hon. P. S. G. Mackenzie, Provincial Treasurer, has lost all his valuable law library, which was in his office, and only carried $3,000 insurance.

Admiral Howe Dead.

Portsmouth, Eng., March 2.—Admiral Sir Assheton Gore Curzon-Howe, commander-in-chief at Portsmouth, was stricken with paralysis yesterday morning and died in the evening.

Admiral Curzon-Howe succeeded Admiral Sir Arthur Fanshawe as commander-in-chief at Portsmouth in March, 1910, the latter being promoted to the rank of admiral of the fleet. He had served in the navy 48 years, and during that period commanded many of the best known ships and saw a great variety of active service. He received the thanks of the Royal Humane Society in 1866, and was twice mentioned in despatches in 1891. He was commodore in charge of Newfoundland fisheries in 1893-96. He was second in command of the channel fleet, 1902-03; commander China, 1903-05; channel fleet, 1905-07; Atlantic fleet, 1907-08; commander-in-chief Mediterranean fleet, 1909-10.

The Healthfulness of Tea

Physicians who often forbid the use of Coffee and Cocoa to the well, prescribe tea for the sick. Of the three, tea is the only beverage that can be drunk for a lifetime without injurious effects. It is a harmless tonic—a gentle stimulant without reaction.

As tea is the most desirable beverage, so "Salada" is tea in its most desirable form.

"Salada" Ceylon Tea comes from tea plant to tea pot untouched by human hands, from the time the leaves fall into the picker's baskets. Its delicate aroma and delicious flavor are perfectly preserved in sealed, air-tight packages.

THE PRESS ON TARIFF

United States Papers Comment on the Issue—An Extra Session of the House Looms Up

STILL HOPE OF VOTE

New York, March 2.—The growing conviction that an extra session of Congress, to pass the reciprocity bill, will be rendered necessary no less by the luke-warmness of its friends than by the vigorous campaign being waged by its avowed enemies, is reflected in the Washington correspondence appearing in yesterday morning's issues of the leading metropolitan journals.

The Tribune says:

"It is the conviction of many Senators that had a vote on the Canadian reciprocity agreement been made a condition of a vote on the Lorimer case at this session, it could have been obtained and the necessity of a special session of Congress avoided, but the reciprocity had no friends who were ready to make an earnest fight in its behalf when the crucial moment arrived.

"The agreement between the advocates of a tariff board and the regulars is of an informal nature, but the former are confident that their efforts will meet with success. They expect that the Senate will hold a night session to-morrow, and they believe that the tariff board bill will be enacted before adjournment is taken."

The Sun reluctantly admits the same point. It says:

"The Canadian reciprocity situation in the Senate remains unchanged as a result of the breaking of the deadlock except in so far as the legislative log jam is relieved by the advancement of the Lorimer case and the tariff commission proposition. No attempt was made by friends of reciprocity to force a compromise upon this measure and a special session to consider this subject still seems inevitable.

"The disposal of the Lorimer case and the advancement of the tariff commission bill, however, will give the supporters of reciprocity a better opportunity to focus the attention of the Senate upon it, but they acknowledge that the outlook for favorable action is not bright in view of the fact that the Senate has eleven big appropriation bills to dispose of in the three and a half remaining days of the session."

The Indian Budget.

Calcutta, March 2.—The budget came up for consideration yesterday at a meeting of the Viceroy's Council. Sir Guy F. Wilson introduced a bill reducing the import tax on tobacco, cigars and cigarettes by one-third. This bill, which will become law next week, is the only fiscal change made in the budget.

The opium question also was discussed. Sir Guy Wilson, referring to the large surplus from opium, said that he could not consent that India should suffer losses which brought no corresponding benefit in the interest of reforms in China, and the Government should therefore safeguard India's legitimate interests so long as India's trade exists. Later he again referred to the large opium revenue as a cause of anxiety, and intimated that in the course of time the Indian people would be called upon to make sacrifices in the cause of humanity. He prophesied that India would not shrink from bearing her share of the burden in uplifting a sister nation.

Dynamite Explosion.

Montreal, March 2.—Half the inhabitants of the Island of Montreal were rudely disturbed at twenty minutes after 12 o'clock yesterday morning by a noise afterwards variously explained by a wide range of suggestions from a boiler explosion to an earthquake. It required hours of investigation to discover the cause of the disturbance, which was created by the explosion of a quantity of dynamite stored in a wooden shanty.

Luckily there are very few houses in the vicinity, but those few several hundred feet distant had all the windows smashed and one house had a wall cracked.

Thirty-One Years In Service.

Kingston, March 2—Lieut. T. J. Hennessey, quartermaster of the Royal Military College, retired from service yesterday. He has been connected with the college since it was opened thirty-one years ago, and every cadet who has passed through the institution has kind remembrances of him.

Keeper John Bannister, connected with the penitentiary for the past twenty-five years, retired yesterday.

New French Cabinet.

Paris, March 2.—The new French Cabinet, so far as it is at present constituted, is made up as follows: Premier and Minister of Interior, Antoine Ernest Monis; Minister of Foreign Affairs, M. Gruppi; Minister of War, Henri Maurice Berteau; Minister of Marine, Theophile Delcasse; Minister of Finance, M. Caillaux; Minister of Public Instruction, M. Steeg; Minister of Public Works, Charles Dumont; Minister of Agriculture, M. Massa; Minister of Colonies, M. Messimy; Minister of Labor, Paul Boncour; Under Secretaries: Interior, Emile Constant; Justice and Worship, Louis Malvy; Posts and Telegraphs, Charles Chaumet; Beaux Arts, Henri Dujardin-Beaumetz.

The appearance of Delcasse in the Cabinet has caused alarm in some sections. Some of the newspapers declare that it would be better if he should remain in oblivion, charging that he menaced the peace of France and the peace of the world by attempting the isolation of Germany in connection with the Moroccan question in 1905.

G.T.R. Will Pay.

Kingston, March 2.—The G.T.R. has agreed to pay all damages in the smash-up between a Kingston and Pembroke train and the Suburban G.T.R. train at Diamond Crossing. No investigation will be held.

Famous British Admiral

Tells What Zam-Buk Did For Him

Many famous persons have testified to the great value of Zam-Buk, and amongst the most recent is Admiral Rodney M. Lloyd. Writing from the Royal Naval Club, Portsmouth, England, Admiral Lloyd says:—

"I have found Zam-Buk most reliable for healing cuts and abrasions; while for the relief of skin irritation it is invaluable."

Another famous user of Zam-Buk is Mr. Frank Scudamore, the War Correspondent, who supplied Canadian papers with their dispatches during the Boer War. Mr. Scudamore says: "Some poisonous dye on my underclothing came in contact with a small ulcer on my leg and the blood poisoning set in. Inflammation, pain and swelling followed. My medical man's treatment did not seem to do any good, as ulcer after ulcer broke out, until my left leg from knee to foot was one mass of sores. I had seventeen deep ulcers at one time. I could not put my foot to the ground, and was really in a pitiful state. A friend advised Zam-Buk, and I applied this herbal balm. It was really wonderful how it soothed the pain and aching and gave me ease.

"I continued with it, leaving off all other treatment, and at the end of a week's treatment my leg was not like the same. A few boxes of Zam-Buk healed all the sores, and bit by bit new, healthy skin covered the places which had been so deeply pitted and scarred by ulceration and blood poison. The limb is now perfectly healthy, and with no marks of the old ulcers. For this splendid result I have only Zam-Buk to thank."

Zam-Buk is a cure for piles, eczema, cold cracks or chaps, ulcers, ringworm, poison, cuts, abscesses, burns, children's rashes, abrasions and for all skin injuries and diseases. All druggists and stores sell at 50c box, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price. Refuse imitations and substitutes.

Mitchell Resigns Membership.

New York, March 2.—John Mitchell, former head of the United Mine Workers of America, and lately chairman of the National Civic Federation, yesterday made public his resignation of his office and membership in the latter organization. Mr Mitchell follows the stand recently taken by the United Mine Workers of America in declaring that any member of their order accepting a position with the National Civic Federation would forfeit membership in the union.

Church Papers Opposed.

Toronto, March 2.—The movement for Federal rather than organic union of churches launched at a meeting of Presbyterian laymen and ministers, does not meet the approval of official church organs.

"The Presbyterian" says the movement is untimely because if the stage propaganda for organic union has reached in the assembly this year will submit the whole question to the people.

Italians to Disarm.

Brantford, March 2.—A petition is being circulated among local Italians by one of their number in an effort to effect a general disarming of all Italians in this city. They are pledging themselves to turn over all weapons to the police. The action is at the suggestion of their Consul.

JUSTICE TO NORTH

Port Arthur Member of a Deputation Claims That the Legislature Has Been Doing Too Little For That Section

PREMIER DISAGREES

Toronto, March 2.—Justice to New Ontario was the slogan sounded in the Ontario Legislature yesterday by J. J. Carrick, Conservative member for Port Arthur. Sir James Whitney vigorously repelled the implication of lack of devotion to the rich domain of which Mr. Carrick was the zealous champion.

Two years ago the member for Port Arthur was mayor of that thriving young city, and spoke from a local perspective. Mr. Carrick credited the Minister of Education with generous consideration of New Ontario, and the Minister of Mines with being a sincere friend of the north, but considered the district he represented had received less sympathetic attention from the Provincial Secretary, as the requests for aid for a new jail and court house had not been complied with.

A complete change of method with a view to the more rapid settlement of New Ontario was urged. The Government should build trunk colonization roads with new territory in advance of settlement. This would be in accordance with the policy of the C.P.R. in rendering eleven million acres of land available by irrigation before offering it to the public.

Mr. Carrick moved for a return showing the expenditures in New Ontario during the past six years.

Sir James Whitney said the member for Port Arthur was enthusiastic and enthusiasm was a good thing, but the Government had to calmly deal with the actualities, the needs of the different portions of the province with a due regard to the duty due to old Ontario. The Government had expended $2,000,000 for the development of New Ontario, and could not be accused of being parsimonious.

It was true, no doubt, that the court house and jail at Port Arthur were not particularly spectacular, but he understood that they sufficed. Possibly with the increasing growth of Port Arthur and Fort William the way may become clear for a better court house for the district.

There was no doubt that the people of New Ontario appreciate the great work which has been done. He was willing to assent to the return of expenditures asked for with the addition however of the amount expended for the administration of justice.

Hon. Col. Matheson secured the assent of the House to the second reading of the supplementary revenue bill introduced on Tuesday. The Provincial Treasurer pointed out that the bill increased the mileage in double-track railway from $80 at present to $100. Express companies will pay $500 on every 100 miles.

The second reading was carried without debate.

Hon. W. J. Hanna, in moving the second reading of the liquor license law amendment bill was asked if all licensed hotels would have to make monthly reports of their daily bar receipts.

Hon. Mr. Hanna answered that the bill required monthly returns from all hotels. It would retain that feature as a matter of right, but the Government did not propose, as might be stated in the regulations, to ask for daily returns from all districts. That, on the face of it, would be absurd. During the past five years the Government had received a number of returns of the actual receipts, and had therefore some idea how it was going to work out.

"There will be whole districts which will not be touched at all," he said, "where they may have an occasional forty-dollar day. We have no thought of taxing an exceptional day. Our thought is to make the collection where the daily average for the month is over $40. The bill reads to the other effect at present." It would be changed in the other direction, he intimated.

Removing to States.

Kingston, March 2.—Mica Works, King street, will be removed to Trenton, N.J. Dallas B. Smith of Opelika, Ala., who has been superintendent of the plant, will take charge of the plant there.

WOULD VERY OFTEN FAINT AWAY.

Doctor Said That Sometime He Would Never Come Out of One.

Many people may be unaware of having anything wrong with their heart till some little excitement, overwork, or confinement in an overheated or overcrowded room or public building makes them feel faint or dizzy.

If you neglect the warning the slight feeling of dizziness gives you, and fail to take treatment, there will be a gradual progression to something more serious.

There is no reason you should wait till your case becomes desperate before you avail yourself of a perfect cure by using Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

Mr. F. S. Chute, Wheatley, Ont. writes:—"It is with gratitude I tell how your Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills benefited me. I was very weak and run down, and had headache, nearly every day and would very often faint away.

"In fact, my doctor said that sometime I would never come out of one of them. After taking three boxes of your pills I am glad to relate that it has been a number of years since I have had a fainting spell and scarcely have had a headache. Too much cannot be said in praise of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills for in me they have effected a perfect cure."

FAST ICE FOR THE BIG HOCKEY GAME

It Will Be a Case of Intermediates Against Senior When the Toronto Athletic Club and the Petes Clash at Brock Street Rink---Looks Like a Red-hot Contest All the Way.

Both the Toronto Athletic Club team and the Petes are happy to-day because there is a lightning fast sheet of ice for to-night's exhibition game at Brock Street Rink. Both teams are at their best on hard going and it is fortunate indeed that the weatherman has handed out such a splendid sheet for to-night's battle. That there will be a big crowd of fans on hand goes without saying. The local followers of the game have been clamouring for a chance to see the Petes in action against some of the senior teams and now that arrangements have been made with one of the best of the Toronto big leaguers the camp followers will be satisfied. This T. A. A. C. team are some class and were only beaten out by Eatons, the senior finalists by a single goal. At that the Crimson team say they had the hardest kind of luck all through the final battle. They are in the pink of condition right at the present time, as they have been keeping in shape for a game arranged some time ago with the Argonauts, whom they are very anxious to beat. All things considered the game should be about the fastest exhibition of the season. The Petes have been keeping in shape by three practises a week all along, and are playing better together now than at any time during the season. They finished up their preparation for to-night's game with a lively practise last night and the many fans who saw the workout say that the Toronto team will have to show more form than any aggregation has done here this year if they hope to have any chance of pulling off a victory over the Petes. It will likely be the winding up game of the hockey season, and should attract a monster crowd. The game will not start until 8.30 o'clock, a little later than usual, and the fans are asked to bear this fact in mind. The Peterborough team will line up as follows:

Goal—Derocher.
Point—Bond.
Cover—Heffernan.
Rover—Ray.
Centre—Park.
Right wing—Sorel.

The Argos and Eatons Battled To A Draw The Score Was 3-3

TORONTO, MARCH 2.—Argonauts expected to beat the Eatonias last night, and they were not alone in that expectation. The hockey-going public generally were of the opinion that the rugged bayfront lads would be the victors, but when it was learned at the last moment that Gordon was ill and unable to play the verdict was that the game would be a toss-up. It was.

The 3 to 3 score is a fairly correct indication of the relative strength of the teams. Argos led at half time by 2 to 1, but they did not have sufficient of the play in the first period to warrant the score being taken as a criterion of what happened before the intermission. Play was quite even throughout the contest except at odd periods when one side or the other had the advantage of the odd man. That was not often because penalties were comparatively few. The Eatonias are not "mixers" like Parkdale and Argos, and Referee Chaucer Elliott of Montreal had no difficulty in keeping the game clean. The ice was fast in the first half and sticky, but not slushy, in the second period. The playing surface was better than that on which the Eatonia-T.A.A.C. and the Parkdale-Argo games were played. Eatonias wanted fast ice, and they got it in the first period, but their opponents not only held them but outscored them 2 to 1. The Big Store outfit adopted wrong tactics and surprised the fans by not trying to get in on the Argo goal. They, shot repeatedly from outside the defence, when, with the speed and stick-handling of Rankin and Meeking they might have gone through for several goals. Occasionally the centre ice pair went in, but it was in the second half when the ice became heavy and the checking more effective. Hyland, as usual, took no chances and got rid of the puck as though it were a hot potato. Preston sallied down the ice at times when Capt. Murphy was out of the way. Leroux and Flesher also shot as long range throughout most of the game.

Eatonias' speed on the fast going in the early stages interfered with the herd body-checking for which the Oarsmen are noted. This perhaps also helped to minimize the penalty list. Both sides were poor in front of the nets, Eatonias particularly missing easy chances to score. The long-range shooting of the Big Store helped the Argos in the first half, while the ice was fast, because the Oarsmen were able to take possession of the puck and rush it back before being checked. Good slow ice tactics on fast ice proved costly.

The second half saw the most strenuous and exciting hockey of the game. The slower ice was conducive to closer checking and when Eatonias scored and made the count 2 to 2 there was "something doing" until Argos pulled ahead again. With the score again tied at 3 to 3 the boys were digging in desperately.

Eatonias were in front only once. Rankin scored the first goal of the game when he recovered the puck which Captain Murphy overskated, and sallied right in on Yuile who was drawn out. Rankin swerved with the rubber and shot it into the unoccupied net. Bray and Captain Murphy each carried the puck the length of the rink and shot, but Bricker blocked cleverly on both occasions. Jack Murphy, who was brought out to play right wing in place of Gordon, shot well and marked Flesher effectively. Big "Murph" tore through the Eaton team for the Argos' first goal. Fleming duplicated the stunt all but the scoring. Argos would have had a number of additional goals had they passed when getting through the defence. "Murph" went from end to end a number of times, and would have had three goals to his credit had not Preston dumped him with a foul check. Preston did time for the offence, but it undoubtedly saved a goal. Fleming had shot after shot at close range, but Bricker was too good. Meeking went through once and even got around Yuile, who rushed out of his net, but Meeking is either excitable or a mighty bad shot. He had nothing to do but shove the disc into the open net, but he shot hard and missed it by a foot. Captain Murphy pulled off another of his famous rushes just before half time and scored again Leroux's long shot early in the second period got away from Yuile, off whose hand it glanced and landed in the net. Fleming to Brady to Fleming into the net was the course of the Argos' third goal. Rankin got the last goal of the game. The teams:

Referee—Chaucer Elliott, Montreal.

Played A Tie Game

St. John's Church team of Lakefield and the local Midgets played a tie game at Brock Street Rink last night, winding up with four goals each, after a hard-fought game that was featured chiefly by the closeness of the checking. The players bunched badly and followed the puck around, instead of playing their positions, with the result that combination was out of the question, not only from this account, but also because the checking was of the close, hard variety that makes passing a difficult matter. There was little to choose between the teams on the play, although the Midgets would have undoubtedly won by a two or three goal margin had it not been for a series of splendid stops by the Lakefield goaler in the first few minutes before the visitors got their sea legs. The Midgets stormed the Lakefield citadel from the face-off, and rained in shots which Rowe coolly picked off. For five minutes the fusilade was kept up, but Rowe was on the job, and turned them aside. Finally Lakefield broke away and scored on their first rush into the Midget territory. They added another in a few minutes and Parker scored the first for the Midgets from a scrimmage. The Cementville youngsters, however came right back with another and at the half were in front 3 goals to 1. The Midgets opened the second half with a burst of speed and quickly tied up the score by beating Rowe twice. Once more Lakefield shot ahead, and shot from close in, on a long offside, beating Lattimer. A few minutes before time was up the Midgets succeeded in tying the score again, and although both teams battled hard and had a lot of good opportunities the figures remained the same until the final whistle. It was not possible to play over-time, and the game was called with honours. W. Quinlan, of Lakefield, was a satisfactory referee. Kennealy, Sabatino and Rowe were the Lakefield stars while Parker was always in the limelight for the Midgets, with Callaghan performing well at cover. The teams were:

EXAMINER BACHELORS AND BENEDICTS TO PLAY

Now that the Review team has been wiped off the face of the hockey map, the Examiner puck-chasers are free to turn their attention to other matters, and the hockey enthusiasm has reached such a high pitch that the married men of the Examiner have caught the fever and have issued a bold challenge to the Bachelors of the plant which the single men have eagerly snapped up. Articles were signed this morning and the bout will come off at Brock Street Rink next Tuesday night at 9 o'clock. Both teams have gone into training and the game promises to be the most sensational exhibition ever seen here. The Married Men are not a bit backward because the line-up of the Single Men is the same as that which defeated the Review, and say that they will leave the youngsters in worse shape than a "pied" form. The only hitch in the arrangements was that the Benedicts wanted to substitute brooms for hockey sticks, but the bachelors kicked so strenuously that the Double Harness advocates capitulated and the game will be played with the orthodox weapons. As far as weight goes the Married Men have it all over the Lonely seven, but the latter claim the speed. It will be a great battle. The teams will be about as follows:

Benedicts		Bachelors
	Goal
Honest Abe Caniff		Rink Rat Craig
	Point
Bouncer Sherrard		Planed Board
	Cover
Flagpole Myland		Speed Boy Reynolds
	Rover
Half Nelson Long
	Young's Point Heard
	Centre
Spike Robinson		East City Swapston
	Right Wing
Lou Dillon		Geo Whittaker
	Left Wing
Peroxide Barringer
	Mount Pleasant Langton

Some of the Married Men look like an exclamation mark. Myland, of the Benedicts, could play goal and centre at the same time if he wanted to, himself. As it is the lights will have to be raised or he will have to play on his hands and knees to prevent him smashing the globes with his think-factory. Lou Dillon, the Benedicts' right wing, has a mark of 1.56 on a heavy track and is stepping faster right now than at any time in his career.

Barringer of the Double team should show a lot of "ginger" in his work.

Bouncer Sherrard will "make up" some weight on the Benedicts' defence.

Caniff, the goaler, for the Married Men, should be able to glue to the puck and box up all the shots.

If Long ever gets a hammer-lock on the puck something has got to go.

Langton, the new recruit on the Single Men's team, was the sensation of the Mt. Pleasant League last season.

Board should be able to wood up all right.

THE CITY BASKETBALL LEAGUE ARRANGES SCHEDULE

Exciting Game In The Y. M. C. A. Bowling League

As one of the most nerve-racking contests ever bowled on the Y. M. C. A. alleys the Millard vs. Millionaires game last night carried off the palm. The first game found the Millionaires 8 pins down, in the second game only one pin separating the two teams, ad this was again in favour of the Millard team. However, the Millionaires started the third game in grand style and had a very comfortable lead on their rivals when the half-way house was reached, but Millards, to the surprise of everybody — even themselves — made a grand finish, and when the score was totalled up it was found that the Millionaires had won the last game by ten pins, thus winning the contest by the narrow margin of one pin. Some of the Millionaires have not yet recovered from the effects of the excitement, but are progressing favourably.

The game scheduled for Friday night—Strikers vs. Lancashire Trio. The Strikers are noted for their ability to spill the beans and something is liable to happen.

The Collegiate Class Basketball team played the Senior Leaders a friendly game of basketball last night which proved the fastest game played on the local floor this season. The Leaders had their hands full all the time and just managed to defeat their younger rivals by the narrow margin of 12 points. Score, Leaders 40; Collegiate, 28. After the game the Collegiate team were the guests of the Senior Leaders at supper.

To-night at 7.15 the Business Boys' Basketball team meet the Junior Class team in a game that is sure to be full of excitement from the drop of the hat.

Trophy For The Player Making Most Assists

OTTAWA, ONT., MARCH 1.—Officers of the Ottawas are convinced that the publication of the goal-scoring table of the N. H. A. is spoiling combination plays. Secretary Martin Rosenthal announced last night that there would be presented next season a trophy to become the property of the player making the most "assists" in the series.

It is planned to appoint an official scorer for each team, whose duty it will be to credit the man passing the puck or engineering a rush for a goal with so many points. It is intended to inaugurate an absolutely new system of scoring, allowing a man two points for one play, three for another and five for the best grade.

The National Association will ask the co-operation of the newspapers in its endeavours to stamp out individual play. All the clubs are working with this end in view. They believe the scheme practical and agree that something must be done to encourage combination, which with many teams now seems to be a lost art. They maintain that the advertising of scores is very harmful, especially to young players who wish to build up their reputations.

Coach Alf Smith expressed himself as heartily in favour of the plan, and Messrs. Brown and Brennan also agreed that some such action should be taken at once. The Ottawas also express themselves in favour of the proposed new rule which will empower a referee to overrule a goal umpire. Alf. Smith declares that Quebec won Monday's game at Renfrew by means of a dishonest umpire, and Referee Brennan said that if he had the authority he would have reversed the decision in question. In the last four matches there have been disputes over goals.

KINGSTON AND ORILLIA WILL MEET TO-NIGHT

Orillia and Kingston play the first game in the junior finals to-night. Lou Marsh, in the Toronto Star sizes up the situation as follows:

While the champion Kingston Frontenacs must "on form" be called to win the junior O.H.A. title this season, do not get the idea cemented in your mind that they are as safe as it. There is one thing against Orillia, they are a young team and have had an unusually strenuous season. They have been at it hammer and tongs from the gosin. They have played thirteen games and the majority of them have been tough battles. They only won their district by a whisker from Penetang. The play-off went overtime at Midland, and since then they have been going at top speed to beat such teams as Varsity, Toronto Canoe Club and Preston. It has been one tough row to hoe ever since they started.

Frontenacs have only played ten games. Their district was custard pie for them and Peterborough and Oshawa were sort of a dairy lunch, too. Since their games with Oshawa they have been resting, while Orillia is just out of a very hard game with Preston.

Anyway Orillia will give Frontenacs a lively run for it at Orillia, and they are game enough to make them step in Frontenacsville if they have any sort of a head to aid them. Both teams are swift and all the players are superb stick handlers. Kingston has weight on Orillia on the defence, but in middle Orillia has a trifle the best of it.

WEDDING BELLS

COWAN—DWYER.

A quiet but pretty wedding was celebrated Monday, when Miss Lucy Margaret Dwyer, the youngest daughter of the late Mrs. Ellen and John Dwyer was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. George Nelson Cowan, formerly of Kingston. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Father McCauley. The bride was assisted by her sister, Miss Lizzie Dwyer, while the groom was supported by Mr. Frank Heffernan. The young couple have many friends who wish them a long and happy married life. Mr. and Mrs. Cowan will reside on Albert street.

MEHARRY—ROELICH.

At the residence of Mr. J. Black, 236 Rubidge street, yesterday afternoon was solemnized the marriage of Miss Lillian Ethel Roelich, Bolivar street, to Mr. Robert John Meharry, Cross street. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. G. Brown, in the presence of a large number of friends. The bride was assisted by Miss Ethel Sloane and Mr. Roy Hendren acted as best man. Sharp at 6 o'clock the party entered the beautifully decorated parlour to the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march, rendered by Miss Mabel Hindes. The bride looked charming in a creamp china silk gown. She wore a corsage bouquet of beautiful bridal roses. The bridesmaid was becomingly attired in a pink mull costume, and carried a bouquet of pink carnations. The groom's present to the bridesmaid was a diamond sunburst, and to the groomsman a diamond stickpin. After the ceremony the wedding dejeuner was served in the dining room, which was tastefully decorated with flowers and ferns. The remainder of the happy evening was spent in dancing and games. Mr. and Mrs. Meharry will make their home at 236 Rubidge street.

INDIGESTION GOES IN FIVE MINUTES

Heartburn, Dyspepsia, Gas and Other Stomach Misery Vanishes

If what you just ate is souring on your stomach or lies like a lump of lead, refusing to digest, or you belch Gas and Eructate sour, undigested food, or have a feeling of Dizziness, Heartburn, Fulness, Nausea, Bad taste in mouth and stomach, headache—this is Indigestion.

A full case of Pape's Diapepsin costs only 50 cents and will thoroughly cure your out-of-order stomach, and leave sufficient about the house in case some one else in the family may suffer from stomach trouble or Indigestion.

Ask your pharmacist to show you the formula plainly printed on these 50-cent cases, then you will understand why Dyspeptic trouble of all kinds must go, and why they usually relieve sour, out-of-order stomachs or Indigestion in five minutes. Diapepsin is harmless and tastes like candy, though each dose contains power sufficient to digest and prepare for assimilation into the blood all the food you eat; besides, it makes you go to the table with a healthy appetite; but, what will please you most is that you will feel that your stomach and intestines are clean and fresh, and you will not need to resort to laxatives or liver pills for Biliousness or Constipation.

This city will have many Diapepsin cranks, as some people will call them, but you will be cranky about this splendid stomach preparation, too, if you ever try a little for Indigestion or Gastritis or any Stomach misery.

Get some now, this minute, and forever rid yourself of Stomach Trouble and Indigestion.

"THE OLD CURIOSITY SHOP" AT THE PRINCESS TO-DAY

"The Old Curiosity Shop" dramatized from the famous Dickens' novel and produced by the Thanhouser Co. of America, will be exhibited at the Princess to-day. This reel is arranged and presented in such a way that it makes the complete story, it forms the most important motion picture dramatic event of the season, and is said to be the most elaborate dramatic film ever produced, both as to the players appearing in the various parts and the attention to scenery and detail. All lovers of Dickens' works, should not fail to see his masterpiece.

Caught a Heavy Cold.

It Left Him with a Hacking Cough.

Mr. J. H. Richards, 1852 Second Ave. East, Vancouver, B.C., writes:—"Allow me to write a few lines in praise of your Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. Last fall I contracted a heavy cold which left me with a hacking cough, and every time I would get a little more cold this hacking cough would become a lung splitting one. It kept on getting worse and I kept on spending money buying different cough remedies until a friend asked me if I had ever tried Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. I told him I was willing to try anything I thought would cure, and on the same day bought two bottles. Before half the first one was used my cough began to get much easier, and by the time I had used a bottle and a half my cough was gone. I am keeping the other half bottle in case it should come again but I am quite sure I have a positive cure. Let me recommend Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup to all who suffer from a cough or throat irritation of any kind."

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price 25 cents.

Manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

MAKING REPAIRS

The C.P.R. authorities are making extensive repairs to the local station. A new hardwood floor has been put in the general waiting room, and the same will be done to the ladies' waiting room. Other renovations are also being made, that will add to the comfort of the passengers as well as adding to the general appearance of the station.

ENJOYABLE SOCIAL AT FRASERVILLE

A very pleasing and profitable evening was spent at Fraserville this week, when a basket social was held under the auspices of the Fraserville Methodist Sunday School. The net proceeds amounted to $39.50. The proceeds amounted to $39.50. The event was one of the most successful of the season, and the programme, which was an unusually enjoyable one, was unique in all parts.

Mr. James Ruddy made an ideal chairman, and opened the programme with a few appropriate introductory remarks, after which he introduced the first item on the programme—"Opening Speech," by Orval Kidd. This number was greatly applauded, showing the appreciation of the audience. A selection by the Orchestra was the next number, and proved a very enjoyable one. Master Robert Harrison then gave a recitation, which was followed by a patriotic exercise, entitled "Canada." This was a very intricate exercise, and the entertainers showed no small degree of dramatic ability. A recitation by Miss Thelma Wood was the next number, and was much appreciated.

The next number was a dialogue, entitled "A Valentine." This was followed by a much appreciated solo, by Miss Keitha Kidd. Master Leonard Moncrief gave a recitation which was much applauded. Quartette, A. Wood and W. A. Kidd, Mrs. Walters and Mrs. Latimer. This was much appreciated, and the audience displayed their appreciation in no uncertain manner. Miss Olive Seabrook gave a recitation, which was followed by another selection by the Orchestra. A dialogue, entitled "A Sparking Scene" was the next number. It was irresistibly funny, and drew a perfect scream of laughter from the audience. The next item was a quartette by Messrs A. Wood and W. A. Kidd, Mrs. Walters and Mrs. Latimer. Master Harold Whitefield then gave his contribution in the form of a recitation, which was much appreciated.

This closed the first part of the programme. At this stage the auctioneer, Mr. A. Wood, took charge of the proceedings and commenced with the selling of the baskets, an act which produced great enjoyment for the audience. This was gotten thru the audience. This was gotten through with unusual celerity, and the remainder of the programme began.

Miss Keitha sang a solo in her usual popular manner, also keeping up her reputation as a youthful soloist. Mr. Joseph Waterman gave a recitation in his usually comical manner. The number evoked thundering applause from the audience. The last number, which closed that part of the evening, was a selection by the Orchestra. The programme reflected great credit upon the entertainers, and was a great success in every way.

At the close of the programme refreshments were served, and the social side, in general, was cultivated: the young people enjoying themselves immensely.

SALVATION ARMY CAMPS

For Mothers and Children

Hundreds of tired mothers and sickly children were given fresh air and rest during the past summer by the Salvation Army at its frush air camps.

There are many tired mothers who have sickly children who were not fortunate enough to be given such an outing and we ask those mothers as a duty to themselves and their children to read the two following letters:

Mrs. Rose Hawthorne Lathrop, who has done so much good among the children of New York City, says: "Little children seem to delight in taking Vinol. In my work among the destitute sick, I give Vinol in many cases where it would be impossible to give cod liver oil in any form, on account of the extreme weakness of the patient's stomach. I have known Vinol to restore appetite and infuse new life in many cases of sick women and children when everything else failed."

Mrs. C. W. Stump, Canton, Ohio, says: "I wish I could induce every mother who has a weak, sickly child to try the delicious cod liver preparation, Vinol, as it restored health and strength to our daughter after all else had failed."

Vinol is a boon to weak mothers and sickly children. If it fails to give satisfaction we will refund your money. McDermid and Jary, corner George and Charlotte streets; also Payne's drug store, corner George and Simcoe streets.

A GRAND RECITAL

A recital was given at the Conservatory of Music on Saturday, at 4 o'clock, by Miss Beatrice Starke's pupils. It reflected great credit both on the teacher and individual members of the class. The parents and intimate friends of the children were present, and were much pleased with the talent displayed by the latter. The programme was arranged as follows:

Piano Trio—School Festival — S. Bogue, O. Gliddon, S. Scott.
Krogmann—Little Prince—Ruth Fee
Villagers' Valse—Betty Mowat.
Streabogg—Papa's Letter — Stanley Bogue.

LENGTH OF SESSION

Special Sitting of the United States House Might Continue Until Oct. 15—Senator Owen's Filibuster

AN EXTRA SESSION

Washington, March 3.—Democratic leaders in the House differ in their views as to the length of an extraordinary session, if the President should call one, but the estimates are that the session will continue sometime between July 1 and Oct. 1.

Speaker-Elect Champ Clark believes that four or five months would be ample, and that adjournment might be reported during July. Chairman Underwood of the ways and means committee of the next House, feels that an extra session could wind up its business by Sept. 1. Representative Henry of Texas, who will be one of the leaders in the next House, thinks the session might run on until Oct. 15.

Democratic leaders say the reciprocity measure, if not passed by the Senate at the regular session, will pass the House if the President should call an extra session.

The tariff board bill is dead, according to the leading members of the Senate. Shortly before 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon the Senate agreed to a motion temporarily to lay aside the bill and take up for consideration the general pension bill.

The pension appropriation bill, carrying $158,000,000, was then passed, and the Senate took up and quickly disposed of the diplomatic and consular bill, carrying about $4,000,000. The fortification bill, carrying $6,000,000, required just fifteen minutes.

This was too rapid work to suit the plans of Senator Owen, and when the military academy appropriation bill, carrying, $1,000,000, was taken up, he began a little filibuster of his own. "I want to force an extra session," he said. "This Congress has no moral right to pass these measures."

He kept up his obstruction tactics until the close of the sitting, forcing a reading of every bill.

Gigantic Traction Plans.

New York, March 3.—The Brooklyn Rapid Transit Co. yesterday made public a letter written to Wm. R. Wilcox, chairman of the Public Service Commission, enclosing a gigantic plan to extend their own lines, build new elevated roads, construct and extend new subways both in Manhattan and Brooklyn, which will add twenty-three miles of underground tracks to the use of the public. It is estimated that the completion of the scheme will cost $130,000,000. The Brooklyn Rapid Transit Co. offers to pay half if the city will stand the rest of the expense.

Their plan is briefly to centralize all the traffic in the lower part of New York and, by the construction of new elevated roads, the new tunnel to Staten Island, looping all the bridges and the new subway route up Broadway and over the Queensborough bridge, to carry traffic for five cents from the furthest district in Brooklyn through Manhattan to the Borough of Queens.

The plan covers every part of New York and Brooklyn and establishes sixteen important rapid transit lines It is estimated all the new lines can be built and ready for operation within five years if started immediately.

Big Hotel Scheme.

Montreal, March 3.—E. H. Ford, Canadian manager of the Ford Iron Co., and representing an English syndicate, announced yesterday that they will spend $1,250,000 in building summer hotels outside the prominent cities of the Dominion. They have a property at Senneville, near Montreal, and opposite Sir Edward Coluston's property, and the hotel will be ready for occupation this summer.

Toronto, Winnipeg, Ottawa and Vancouver are included in the list of cities in which agents are now looking for a site.

One of the oldest Ontario pioneers passed away in Toronto on Tuesday, in the person of Horace Secord, a nephew of Laura Secord, the heroine of 1812. The late Mr. Secord was in his 87th year.

One man was slightly injured by jumping from a first storey window and $5,300 damage was done by a fire which started on the stairway of 93 West Richmond street, Toronto, yesterday afternoon.

Joe O'Rourke of Jeffrey street, Chatham, awoke at an early hour yesterday morning to find the bed in which he was sleeping a mass of flames and his body burned and blistered from his waist to his head.

Agents have been going through Adelaide, Lobo and Williams Townships of Middlesex County, endeavoring to lease the apple orchards. They have met with good success on a basis of $20 an acre per year.

The troops stationed at Springhill, N.S., on account of the strike by coal miners, were called out yesterday to suppress a fierce riot arising out of the stoning of the houses of strikers who have returned to work.

A search yesterday resulted in the seizure of a number of bottle filled with draught gin, and also of counterfeit seals and a quantity of sealing wax at the grocery store of J. A. C. Meunier, 16 Roy street east, Montreal.

At yesterday's meeting of the Montreal Chambre de Commerce a resolution was unanimously adopted setting forth the attitude of the chambre as absolutely opposed to the putting into effect of the Long Sault dam project.

Princess Di Tigena, a lady-in-waiting to Queen Helena, niece of Marquis Di San Giuliano, the Italian Minister of Foreign Affairs, was murdered yesterday in a small hotel in Rome by Lieut. Baron Paterno, a cavalry officer, who then shot himself.

Want to Stay In Canada.

Kingston, March 3.—United States Consul Johnston has been taking evidence of captains and engineers who claim American citizenship, but reside in Canada. Some of them are trying to get the United States Government to re-issue licenses to them, allowing to continue their residence here. It is scarcely likely the request will be granted. Some of the captains made an appeal to Hon Mr. Hanty to take up the matter with the Dominion authorities.

Do Not Fear Canada.

St. Catharines, March 3.—Elijah Roberts of Milford, and Stancliffe Hale of South Glastonbury, two of the largest and most prominent growers in Connecticut, yesterday afternoon told the Niagara district fruit growers that they could see no good in the Reciprocity pact, not that they feared Canadian fruit, but because sufficient was not given them in return. As fruit growers, they would benefit, as the Canadian market would relieve the congestion in New York and other large cities at certain times of the year.

Both expressed delight with the local orchards, which are in better shape than those of their state, the trees having longer life and better fruit. They predicted a big crop this year from the present condition of the buds. Prices there average sixty cents for a half bushel basket of fruit, which would be about equal to the local eleven quart basket at local prices. Prof. Macoun, Ottawa, and Prof. Harcourt, Guelph, addressed the convention last night.

Ontario Government Wants Five and One-half Millions—Hon. Mr. MacKay Criticizes the Taxation

J. C. ELLIOTT'S BILL

Toronto, March 3.—Five and a half million dollars will be the amount of the new provincial loan. Hon. Col. Matheson, Provincial Treasurer, made the public announcement at the opening of the Ontario Legislature yesterday afternoon.

Two million dollars will be for the contemplated extension of the Hydro-Electric power transmission line to Windsor and to other points outside of the original circuit proposed.

Two million is to cover the extension of the T. & N. O. Railway to Porcupine, and for the extension to Callander to connect with the Grand Trunk Pacific main line.

One million and a half dollars is required to be kept available for heavy payments on capital account, which mature during the early part of the year, while the heavy receipts are received towards the close of the year.

T. T. Smellie, Fort William (Con.), raised a question of privilege. According to a newspaper report the honorable member for East Hamilton, speaking at the Labor Temple on the previous night, had referred to the members of the House as "a lot of loafers."

The facts were, said Mr. Smellie, that the members of the House had sat for hours listening to Mr. Studholme when he was "talking twaddle."

Sir James Whitney interrupted Mr. Smellie, pointing out that comment or debate was out of order. The procedure was for the attention of the House to be called to the matter without debate, and for it to be taken up on the following day.

Mr. Studholme: I am very glad the matter has been brought up.

Sir James Whitney: "So am I."

C. N. Anderson, South Essex, withdrew his bill to amend the Game and Fisheries Act, to shorten the season for duck shooting in Essex and Kent Counties.

Sir James Whitney requested him to do so, because if it were necessary to make special provision in one instance it should be done with regard to every county in the province.

Mr. Anderson also withdrew his bill to increase the jurisdiction of division court judges, upon the request of Hon. J. J. Foy.

J. C. Elliott's (West Middlesex) bill to amend the Voters' List Act, giving the Court of Revision power to strike from the voters' list the names of persons who have lost their qualifications, was given a second reading; but his bill to make drivers of motor vehicles liable for accidents occasioned to other persons or property on country highways, unless the motor owner could prove that it was due to the injured person's negligence, was lost on division.

Hon. W. J. Hanna at first advised Mr. Elliott to withdraw it, saying that it placed the motor owner under a tremendous liability and made it absolutely necessary for him to prove negligence on the other person's part or be be assessed for damages.

Hon. A. G. MacKay said that the supplementary revenue act, the third reading of which was moved by Hon. Col. Matheson, did not go far enough in raising the taxation on railways. It only began to nibble at them.

The railways, the Provincial Treasurer pointed out had also to pay municipal taxes. The clause as proposed was carried.

A number of members on both sides of the House put in a plea against all trotting horse meetings being taxed, and the clause was allowed to stand for further consideration.

Mr. Gamey secured delay with respect to the taxation of stock transfers. The member for Manitoulin said these are lots of stocks that the selling at a few cents which are just as good value at the price as C.P.R. stock or any bank stock and much better than the Farmers' Bank stock.

Architect to Lie In State.

New York, March 3.—The doors of New York's great public library admitted the public for the first and only time before its completion this morning, in order that all may see the body of its architect and designer, John M. Carrerer. The body will lie in state in the unfinished building from 10 to 11 o'clock. It was then taken to Trinity Chapel, where funeral services was held, and the building is now closed until the formal opening in May.

Carl Frederickson, a taxicab chauffeur, held responsible for the accident in which Mr Carrerer sustained injuries which caused his death, was arrested yesterday, charged with homicide.

Mr. Carrerer of the firm of Carrerer, Hastings & Bird, one of the most prominent firms of architects in New York, was well known throughout America. They have an office in Toronto and are architects for the new Bank of Toronto building at King and Bay streets.

The accident to Mr. Carrerer occurred on Feb 13 and he died last Saturday night.

"LOYALISTS" ARE SILENT

Fail to Applaud When German Tells Them He Favours Imperial Free Trade

OPPOSED TO TREATY

Ottawa, March 3.—Liberalism had an impressive inning in the House of Commons yesterday. It fell to the lot of Mr. W. M. German to turn the vaunted Imperialism of opponents to the proposed reciprocal trade agreement topsy-turvy. The member for Welland made his promised confession that he was unable to support the present proposals, and in lieu thereof urged the Government to devote its energies to the immediate accomplishment of unrestricted reciprocity with the Empire. In response to an inquiry by Sir Wilfrid Laurier, he declared emphasically for free trade within the Empire.

The scene was perhaps the most spectacular of a debate abounding in dramatic episodes. The Conservatives, who had greeted with noisy approval the declaration of the Welland Liberal that he would oppose the arrangement, suddenly stayed their merriment as the Prime Minister put his quiet question; the frenzy of enthusiasm which had followed the speaker's prediction that it spelled the defeat of the Administration was stifled and stilled; and the Opposition spokesmen, who for the past ten days have been vaunting their ultra-Imperialism, precipitately scurried for shelter.

Mr. German prefaced his arguments against the tariff resolution with praise of the Liberals. They had made an "honest attempt to keep the reciprocity pledge of 1891," he said, and gave them credit for "an administration that had brought prosperity to Canada." He declared, however, that "there was a general feeling throughout the country against reciprocity with the United States," and that Sir Wilfrid Laurier's erstwhile awakening from that fiscal nightmare had made the "hearts of Liberals throb with pride."

Mr. German endorsed the Conservative arguments against the trade pact, and thought Sir Wilfrid should have paid the United States back in its own coin. "Has he taught them the lesson which they taught us?" was his question.

Mr. German declared in favor of adequate protection, instancing the present tariff as his conception of the term.

The member for Welland could not understand why there should have been any great haste about the proposals. The people of the United States had decided only recently that there must be a reduction in the duties. Would it not have been better in view of the circumstances, to have waited for the new Congress to come in. This Congress would probably have given Canada as much for nothing in return and the Canadian tariff would not have been disturbed. Canada would cut a small figure if the agreement did not go through the extra session of Congress. Mr. German believed it would not go through.

Dealing briefly with the manner in which, in his opinion, the agreement would affect the business interests of the country, Mr. German said that the business men had expressed their opinion emphatically. Fully nine out of every ten were opposed to the agreement.

F. E. Carvell (Carlton, N.B.), gave expression to the enthusiastic reception which the trade proposals had met with in the Maritime Provinces. He criticised the "leader of the eighteen" in Toronto, who condemned reciprocity, and yet financed the cotton crop with Canadian millions. He did not think Mr. Sifton spoke for the West.

A lot of nonsense had been talked about wheat. Our wheat would go through the United States in future, we were told. Yet last year, out of 36,000,000 bushels that went by the United States 19,000,000 passed through Fort William. It was simply one-half of the wheat being shipped from St John was American wheat. He then reviewed the attempts of the railways to improve their through routes, and declared when these were all completed there would be no question as to the carrying of Canadian wheat by Canadian channels.

Dastardly Outrage.

Bowmanville, March 3.—Four men went to Thomas Bradley's house in the Township of Clarke on Sunday night last about nine o'clock, called Bradley out and said they were lost and wanted feed for two horses. Bradley had to go about forty yards to get hay for them, two men went with him and two remained in the barn. When he reached the other barn, he heard his wife screaming murder. He ran back, accompanied by the two men who went with him, but when he reached the house, the other two men had disappeared. They had made improper advances to his wife, but she managed to get away from them, and they took flight on hearing Bradley returning. The two who had accompanied him took their departure too, but about 11 o'clock two of them returned, gained admission to Bradley's house, knocked him down, and one man held him while the other assaulted his wife. Then the other man held Bradley, while the man who held Bradley first, assaulted his wife.

Bradley came to town on Tuesday and reported the circumstances. Chief Jarvis went down and from the description given, arrested two men, named McManus, about 27 years of age, and Luther Brown, about 20. He brought them to Bowmanville jail, where they are now confined. They will appear before Magistrate Horsey.

Federal Union Movement.

Toronto, March 3.—That the movement aiming at federal rather than organic union of the churches is one to be seriously reckoned with, was made clear by the character of the meeting held in the Church House of New St. Andrew's, King street, yesterday afternoon, when a permanent organization, to be known as the Presbyterian Association for the Federal Union of the Churches, was formed. The attendance was larger and representative, including many elders, not only of Toronto, but outside districts. Dr. McLeod of Barrie again presided, and Rev. A. H. McGillivray acted as secretary.

Cornwall Fire Brigade Resigns.

Cornwall, March 3.—Cornwall's volunteer fire brigade resigned Wednesday. For some time past, several years in fact, there has been friction between the brigade and the Town Council over the question of remuneration, and last year the brigade sent in a statement of what they required, a grant of $700 to the brigade, $200 to the chief, new uniforms for the brigade of twenty men and suitable sleeping quarters at the firehall.

A month or so ago they gave notice that unless some agreement was reached by March 1 the brigade would resign, and they have carried out their threat.

Appreciation

1910 was a banner year with us, but 1911 carries even greater promise, because we have thousands of patients in this city and vicinity who are wearing glasses prescribed by us, many of whom could not be fitted elsewhere, and we know that they will not lose an opportunity of speaking a good word for us.

We take this occasion to acknowledge our indebtedness to our friends and patrons, our appreciation of their good will and faith in us, which have helped to make our success so great. We need not disguise the fact that we believe that we have deserved well of you. That if you have had confidence in us and have bestowed upon us your patronage it is because we have done something to warrant it. We have done "the best we could" and we purpose to keep right on doing so.

We are deeply grateful to our friends and customers for their loyalty. We ask for and hope to merit a continuance of the same.

LENGTH OF SESSION

Special Sitting of the United States House Might Continue Until Oct. 15—Senator Owen's Filibuster

AN EXTRA SESSION

Washington, March 3.—Democratic leaders in the House differ in their views as to the length of an extraordinary session, if the President should call one, but the estimates are that the session will continue sometime between July 1 and Oct. 1.

Speaker-Elect Champ Clark believes that four or five months would be ample, and that adjournment might be reported during July. Chairman Underwood of the ways and means committee of the next House, feels that an extra session could wind up its business by Sept. 1. Representative Henry of Texas, who will be one of the leaders in the next House, thinks the session might run on until Oct. 15.

Democratic leaders say the reciprocity measure, if not passed by the Senate at the regular session, will pass the House if the President should call an extra session.

The tariff board bill is dead, according to the leading members of the Senate. Shortly before 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon the Senate agreed to a motion temporarily to lay aside the bill and take up for consideration the general pension bill.

The pension appropriation bill, carrying $153,668,000, was then passed, and the Senate took up and quickly disposed of the diplomatic and consular bill, carrying about $4,000,000. The fortification bill, carrying $6,000,000; required just fifteen minutes.

This was too rapid work to suit the plans of Senator Owen, and when the military academy appropriation bill, carrying, $1,890,000, was taken up, he began a little filibuster of his own. "I want to force an extra session," he said. "This Congress has no moral right to pass these measures."

He kept up his obstruction tactics until the close of the sitting, forcing a reading of every bill.

Gigantic Traction Plans.

New York, March 3.—The Brooklyn Rapid Transit Co. yesterday made public a letter written to Wm. R. Wilcox, chairman of the Public Service Commission, enclosing a gigantic plan to extend their own lines, build new elevated roads, construct and extend new subways both in Manhattan and Brooklyn, which will add twenty-three miles of underground tracks to the use of the public. It is estimated that the completion of the scheme will cost $130,000,000. The Brooklyn Rapid Transit Co. offers to pay half if the city will stand the rest of the expense.

Their plan is briefly to centralize all the traffic in the lower part of New York and, by the construction of new elevated roads, the new tunnel to Staten Island, looping all the bridges and the new subway route up Broadway and over the Queensborough bridge, to carry traffic for five cents from the furthest district in Brooklyn through Manhattan to the Borough of Queens.

The plan covers every part of New York and Brooklyn and establishes sixteen important rapid transit lines It is estimated all the new lines can be built and ready for operation within five years if started immediately.

Big Hotel Scheme.

Montreal, March 3.—E. H. Ford, Canadian manager of the Ford Iron Co., and representing an English syndicate, announced yesterday that they will spend $1,250,000 in building summer hotels outside the prominent cities of the Dominion. They have a property at Senneville, near Montreal, and opposite Sir Edward Coluston's property, and the hotel will be ready for occupation this summer.

Toronto, Winnipeg, Ottawa and Vancouver are included in the list of cities in which agents are now looking for a site.

In response to an inquiry by Sir Wilfrid Laurier, he declared emphatically for free trade within the Empire.

The scene was perhaps the most spectacular of a debate abounding in dramatic episodes. The Conservatives, who had greeted with noisy approval the declaration of the Welland Liberal that he would oppose the arrangement, suddenly stayed their merriment as the Prime Minister put his quiet question; the frenzy of enthusiasm which had followed the speaker's prediction that it spelled the defeat of the Administration was stifled and stilled; and the Opposition spokesmen, who for the past ten days have been vaunting their ultra-Imperialism, precipitately scurried for shelter.

Mr. German prefaced his arguments against the tariff resolution with praise of the Liberals. They had made an "honest attempt to keep the reciprocity pledge of 1891," he said, and gave them credit for "an administration that had brought prosperity to Canada." He declared, however, that "there was a general feeling throughout the country against reciprocity with the United States," and that Sir Wilfrid Laurier's eyes

while awakening from that fiscal nightmare had made the "hearts of Liberals throb with pride."

Mr. German endorsed the Conservative arguments against the trade pact, and thought Sir Wilfrid should have paid the United States back in its own coin. "Has he taught them the lesson which they taught us?" was his question.

Mr. German declared in favor of adequate protection, instancing the present tariff as his conception of the term.

The member for Welland could not understand why there should have been any great haste about the proposals. The people of the United States had decided only recently that there must be a reduction in the duties. Would it not have been better in view of the circumstances, to have waited for the new Congress to come in. This Congress would probably have given Canada as much for nothing in return and the Canadian tariff would not have been disturbed. Canada would cut a small figure if the agreement did not go through the extra session of Congress. Mr. German believed it would not go through.

Dealing briefly with the manner in which, in his opinion, the agreement would affect the business interests of the country, Mr. German said that the business men had expressed their opinion emphatically. Fully nine out of every ten were opposed to the agreement.

F. B. Carvell (Carlton, N.B.), gave expression to the enthusiastic reception which the trade proposals had met with in the Maritime Provinces. He criticized the "leader of the eighteen" in Toronto, who condemned reciprocity, and yet financed the cotton crop with Canadian millions. He did not think Mr. Sifton spoke for the West.

A lot of nonsense had been talked about wheat. Our wheat would go through the United States in future, we were told. Yet last year, out of 26,000,000 bushels that went by the United States 19,000,000 passed through Fort William. It was simply one-half of the wheat being shipped from St. John was American wheat. He then reviewed the attempts of the railways to improve their through routes, and declared when these were all completed there would be no question as to the carrying of Canadian wheat by Canadian channels.

W. S. Middleboro (N. Grey) would not see any analogy between free trade in England and Canada. He thought the prices of natural products would be equalised and the farmers get no advantage.

Dastardly Outrage.

Bowmanville, March 3.—Four men went to Thomas Bradley's house in the Township of Clarke on Sunday night last about nine o'clock, called Bradley out and said they were lost and wanted feed for two horses. Bradley had to go about forty yards to get hay for them, two men went with him and two remained in the barn. When he reached the other barn, he heard his wife screaming murder. He ran back, accompanied by the two men who went with him, but when he reached the house, the other two men had disappeared. They had made improper advances to his wife, but she managed to get away from them, and they took flight on hearing Bradley returning. The two who had accompanied him took their departure too, but about 11 o'clock two of them returned, gained admission to Bradley's house, knocked him down, and one man held him while the other assaulted his wife. Then the other man held Bradley, while the man who held Bradley first, assaulted his wife.

Bradley came to town on Tuesday and reported the circumstances. Chief Jarvis went down and from the description given, arrested two men, named McManus, about 27 years of age, and Luther Brown, about 20. He brought them to Bowmanville jail, where they are now confined. They will appear before Magistrate Horsey.

Federal Union Movement.

Toronto, March 3.—That the movement aiming at federal rather than organic union of the churches is one to be seriously reckoned with, was made clear by the character of the meeting held in the Church House of New St. Andrew's, King street, yesterday afternoon, when a permanent organization, to be known as the Presbyterian Association for the Federal Union of the Churches, was formed. The attendance was larger and representative, including many elders, not only of Toronto, but outside districts. Dr. McLeod of Barrie again presided, and Rev. A. H. McGillivray acted as secretary.

Cornwall Fire Brigade Resigns.

Cornwall, March 3.—Cornwall's volunteer fire brigade resigned Wednesday. For some time past, several years in fact, there has been friction between the brigade and the Town Council over the question of remuneration, and last year the brigade sent in a statement of what they required, a grant of $700 to the brigade, $200 to the chief, new uniforms for the brigade of twenty men and suitable sleeping quarters at the firehall.

A month or so ago they gave notice that unless some agreement was reached by March 1 the brigade would resign, and they have carried out their threat

Appreciation

1910 was a banner year with us, but 1911 carries even greater promise, because we have thousands of patients in this city and vicinity who are wearing glasses prescribed by us, many of whom could not be fitted elsewhere, and we know that they will not lose an opportunity of speaking a good word for us.

We take this occasion to acknowledge our indebtedness to our friends and patrons, our appreciation of their good will and faith in us, which have helped to make our success so great. We need not disguise the fact that we believe that we have deserved well of you. That if you have had confidence in us and have bestowed upon us your patronage it is because we have done something to warrant it. We have done "the best we could" and we purpose to keep right on doing so.

We are deeply grateful to our friends and customers for their loyalty. We ask for and hope to merit a continuance of the same.

NURSERY STOCK

The Principal Regulations Governing the Importation Thereof

The attention of all persons who intend to import nursery stock into Canada is called to the regulations of "The Destructive Insect and Pest Act," which may be obtained on application to the Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

In particular they should note the following regulations governing the conditions under which nursery stock may be admitted:—

"5. All persons importing nursery stock into Canada shall give notice to the Minister of Agriculture within five days of despatching the order for the same, and they shall again notify the Minister on the arrival of the shipment in Canada."

"Notice shall also be given to the Minister by all transportation companies, Custom House brokers and other persons importing or bringing nursery stock into Canada, immediately such a consignment is received by them. Such notice shall include the name of the consignor and the consignee, the points of origin and destination, the name of the company carrying the nursery stock, as well as the nature, quantity and origin of same."

"6. European nursery stock, and such other imported vegetation or vegetable matter as the Minister may determine, entering Canada, may be allowed to proceed and shall be inspected at the point of destination, but must not be unpacked except in the presence of an inspector."

RACERS WITH JEWEL CASKETS

With Age and Success the Collection Frequently Becomes Valuable

Every great racehorse, says an English exchange, has his special toilet-case, marked with his name and provided with a special lock. Each animal has his own basins, pans, and pails for the toilet, his feeding utensils, brushes and combs.

A racehorse has many sets of towels of various grades, and has blankets for all weathers. These are marked and numbered, and are kept beautifully clean and well-aired. The belongings of the horse are carried about in his toilet-case when travelling.

Besides all this luxury every great horse nowadays must have a jewel-case, and with age and success the the collection frequently becomes very valuable. In the casket, which is a compartment of the box, are kept the various trinkets presented by admirers. These consist largely of articles of wear, such as bridles finished in silver and gold, silver-chained and mounted halters, and combs and brushes mounted in handsome style.

ELEPHANT WOULDN'T PLAY

Recognized in the Piano Keys its Mother's Tusks

The other day an itinerant circus announced, as the chief attraction on its programme, a performing elephant who, amongst other accomplishments, played the piano. The hour of the performance arrived; the docile animal was led into the arena and conducted to an open piano, when suddenly he wheeled round, uttering lugubrious cries. After a brief conference with the elephant's valet, the proprietor of the show came forward and said that until another piano could be procured that part of the programme could not be carried out. The elephant, a most sympathetic and affectionate creature, had recognized in the ivory keys of the instrument the tusks of its mother!

THE CHAMPION COW

The champion milch cow of the world is now supposed to be Chief Josephine, the prize cow of the University of Missouri. Eight months ago the keepers of the animal began a race for the record of one year. In the time that has elapsed since the start her milk yield has been greater by 2,100 pounds than that of any other cow that has ever lived. Josephine's daily yield has been 89 pounds. Her best record for a single day is 110.2 pounds. The cost of feeding her is about 50 cents a day.

INFANTILE PARALYSIS

A Germ Disease Which is Baffling the Doctors and Alarming the People Generally

It may be said that doctors are only agreed on two points regarding this much dreaded disease.

First, that it is a germ disease, and, second, like all germ diseases can only be fought with pure, rich blood.

Prevention is always the better way and that is why we are always talking about the wisdom of keeping the blood pure and rich and the nerves healthy and strong by using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Rich, red blood is a deadly foe to disease germs whether they are germs of infantile paralysis, of colds, of consumption or any other disease.

Don't let the blood get thin and watery. Don't let the nerves get exhausted. The risk is too great. Every dose of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food goes to the formation of a certain amount of pure, rich blood. For this reason you are certain to benefit by this treatment.

You need not wait until you have some form of paralysis before testing this great medicine. Be warned by headaches, sleeplessness, irritability, failing memory and power of concentrating the mind. Restore the system while still you have something to build on.

Get new energy and vigour into the system by using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. 50 cents a box, 6 boxes for $2.50, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

BRIGHTEST COLORS FOR THE CORONATION

Blue, Crimson, Gold, and Purple—Ermine the Only Fur that Now Finds Favor

The Coronation year of King George is likely to be remarkable for the clash of bright colors it will see. In some measure this will be the result of the reaction consequent on last year's mourning. Practically speaking, the only shades that will find favor with the really well-dressed woman will be those what have what may be termed a "Coronation flavor" about them. Thus, the chief vogue will be for Garter Blue, Ducal Crimson, Princely Gold, and Regal Purple. Already a foretaste of this is given by the wonderful popularity of ermine, which is the only fur that now finds favor. For the moment sable and silver fox are both removed from that pedestal of popularity they have so long occupied, and a stroll through the park of a morning is sufficient to show the supremacy of the Royal fur. This is also to be a year of lace. It will play an important part not only in the Coronation dresses, but in the trains to be worn at the Courts to be held at Buckingham Palace. Lucky indeed is the woman who has had a careful mother or grandmother to dower her with valuable old lace; she, at all events, is above criticism.

TAXES ON TITLES WILL TOTAL $16,350

What the Recent New Year Honors Cost—Money Goes to Inland Revenue Fund

Should the exigencies of the political situation bring about the creation of five hundred new Peers a nice little sum would be added to the nation's revenue in the way of fees. Indeed, it has been suggested at times that the Chancellor of the Exchequer, when endeavoring to make up a deficit on the Budget, might do worse than follow the example of James I., who, when desperately hard-up, created, on the suggestion of the Earl of Salisbury, a couple of hundred baronets, each of whom paid $5,000 for the dignity. Fees have been considerably reduced, however, since "the wisest fool in Christendom," as Sully described James I., invented the order of baronets in England. Nowadays the granting of letters patent to a baronet costs only $500, payable to the Board of Inland Revenue. There were nine baronets in the list of New Year's honors, and six Privy Councillors, twenty-five knights, nineteen recipients of Colonial honors, fourteen recipients of South African honors, and fifteen recipients of Indian honors, each of whom will have to pay $150. The Inland Revenue authorities will thus receive $16,350 altogether.

These amounts do not include the stamp duty incurred in taking out a coat of arms, nor the charges of the Heralds' College for the using of letters patent. For designing a coat of arms and granting letters patent for its use the Heralds' College charge $338. Assuming that the eighty-eight recipients of honors all decide to take out letters patent to the right of armorial bearings the whole cost of the New Year's honors will be over $50,000.

The absence of any peerages in the new honors list makes a considerable difference to this form of revenue, for a duke has to pay $1,750, a marquess $1,500, an earl $1,250, a viscount $1,000, and a baron $750. Then, again, the Knighthood of the Garter entails $1,000 in fees. It may be remembered that Lord Roberts objected to paying a bill for $3,750, which was presented to him after accepting an earldom in 1901, and complained still more when he found that his acceptance of the Garter entailed a total expenditure of close upon $5,000.

Even this, however, was not quite such a costly distinction as being made a Scottish baronet in the time of Charles I., who compelled every man so honored to pay $15,000. As a set-off to this heavy fee the patents down to 1638 included a grant of specified land in Nova Scotia. Unfortunately, this grant did not prove of much advantage, for long before 1638 the colony had passed into the hands of the French.

A ROYAL DEBUTANTE

Princess Maud Will be Introduced at the Courts of the Coming Season —Duke of Fife's Daughter

Pretty Princess Maud, the younger daughter of the Princess Royal and the Duke of Fife, will be one of the most interesting debutantes at the coming season's Courts. She is two years younger than her sister—tall, fair-haired Princess Alexandra—who came out, not at a Court function, but at a ball given by Lady Farquhar for the late King and Queen Alexandra. To King Edward Princess Maud was much devoted, and was a great favorite with his Majesty. She is clever, and can speak fluently in French, German and Italian. In disposition she is lively, adventurous, fearless, and full of initiative; and if at one time she was always getting her sister into trouble, she was always getting her out of it again. It was merry Princess Maud who called her mother, who is extremely retiring, "Her Royal Shyness." The presentation of a Royal Princess is always of great interest. She is not, of course, formally presented, but enters the Throne room, where the presentations are made, with the Royal party, and sits behind their Majesties while the Court is in progress with other members of the Royal family. After her debut, she usually appoints a lady-in-waiting, who escorts her to any social functions she may attend.

WHERE KING MANUEL WILL LIVE

A Mansion of Victorian Design in Four Acres of Ground

Abercorn, King Manuel's residence for the next twelve months, is a mansion of mid-Victorian design standing in four acres of grounds, which include a charming rosery, fruit, kitchen, and flower gardens, two tennis lawns, and a croquet lawn. The house has only two floors. On the ground are the dining and drawing rooms, which open into a large conservatory arranged as a winter garden or smoking lounge; a boudoir, and a splendid library overlooking the garden. The first floor leads to fourteen bedrooms and dressing rooms and three bathrooms. The furniture is a mixture of old English and substantial modern, and there are many interesting Oriental articles brought over by Sir Harry Maclean. Except in the servants' quarters no paper or paint is used, all the walls being of varnished pitch-pine. Forty years ago the house was built at a cost of $125,000, but Kaid Maclean secured it in 1909 for about one-fourth that sum.

ALBERTA GAME LAWS

New Provisions Governing the Slaughter of Chickens

The Alberta Government have made important amendments to the Game Act. Perhaps the most important of all are the provisions for the protection of prairie chickens, the slaughter of which has been so common in the past. In future hunters will be limited to ten chickens per man per day. The opening of the duck season will be changed from August twenty-third to September first.

In future a residential bird license of $1.25 will be necessary before game birds can be shot. Provision is made for the protection of Hungarian partridge.

Game wardens in the future are to possess the power to make arrests. Fines of not less than $50 or more than $100 are provided for offenders under the Act.

Non-residents, the guests of settlers, must pay $5 for the privilege of hunting as under the old Act. A provision is also made that residents, accompanying non-residents without licenses, are equally offenders under the law.

FINE LAKE TROUT

Many Varieties of the Finny Tribe Caught in the North

A Government expedition consisting of Professor A. E. Barlow, of McGill, Professor Guillin, of Queen's, Mr. Fairbault, of the Dominion Geological Survey, J. H. Vailquette, engineer of the Provincial Department of Mines, spent three and a half months in Northern Quebec, in the region between Lake St. John and James Bay. While the members were largely engaged in prospecting they found the waters abounding in many varieties of fish. In some of the lakes members of the party took speckled red trout up to five and six pounds in weight. Huge gray lake trout or touladi were captured as well as white fish, pike and pickerel. Plenty of feathered game was seen. The only big game killed was a bear, the animals being numerous along the route followed by the explorers. This route traversed some of the hunting ground of the Montagnais Indians, and numbers of the latter were secured as guides for the expedition.

FIVE ACRES, PLUS

What Boys Were Able to Do on a Small Farm

Near a Maritime Province town a man, his wife, and two sons lived on a five-acre lot. The head of the house ran a carriage shop and paid little attention to the land. The boys paid less attention, and were on the road to nothing in particular. The father died, leaving the place involved. Then the boys awakened, and began to till the five acres. Last year they expected to sell by the end of the season over one thousand dollars' worth of produce from the five acres. Among other things they marketed one half acre of tomatoes and one acre of green beans. The little farm is no longer involved.

SO LONG, LONG AGO

One morning a congressman went into a country hotel in California and gave his order for breakfast to a waitress who seemed utterly indifferent as to whether he got food or starved to death. She kept him waiting a long time, and his impatience grew until he had to give it vent.

Calling a waitress who passed by his table, he asked:

"How long have you been here?"

"Who, me?" she asked sweetly. "I have been here three weeks."

"Then," said the hungry one, "you are not the one who took my order. That one left here before you came."

RATHER SUSPICIOUS

Two lawyers, who bore the curious names of Catchem and Cheetem, decided to throw in their lots together and, with that purpose, gave orders for an elaborate brass plate bearing their names.

A day or two later, on arriving at their offices, their suspicions were aroused by half-hidden smiles from the people round about, and they soon decided to have the title altered by substituting their Christian names.

But when fixed again in position, it was worse than ever; for, instead of Uriah Catchem and Isaac Cheetem, their initials only had been engraved. Then did the worthy laywers take counsel of each other.

HAD KIDNEY TROUBLE.

COULD NOT CROSS THE FLOOR PAIN WAS SO GREAT.

Miss Hazel Hess, Winchester Springs, Ont., writes:—"I was troubled with my kidneys for five years. They were so bad, at times, I could not cross the floor for the pain. The doctor could not do me any good and a friend advised me to use Doan's Kidney Pills. I bought six boxes and now I have been cured for over four years. I will recommend them to every sufferer."

No woman can be strong and healthy unless the kidneys are well. When the kidneys are ill, the whole body is ill, for the poisons which the kidneys ought to filter out of the blood are left in the system. Then how important it must be to see to it that this system of sewerage be not clogged up.

Doan's Kidney Pills are a purely vegetable medicine, realising quick, permanent relief, without any after ill effects. A medicine that will absolutely cure backache and all forms of kidney and bladder trouble.

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50c. per box or 3 for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

If ordering direct specify "Doan's."

CANADA'S IMMENSE AREAS OF FRUIT

From Farm and Dairy.

W. T. Macoun, Dominion Horticulturist

Canada has immense areas where the best commercial varieties of apples, pears, plums, cherries, grapes and small fruits succeed. There are other areas of still greater size where only the hardier fruits can be grown successfully. Into these large and more newly settled parts of the country thousands of people are pouring annually, and it is to give these people reliable information which will lead them to plant only the varieties which are most likely to succeed that this article is prepared. Many thousands of dollars are wasted annually by new settlers, and by old ones as well, in buying trees of varieties too tender for the parts of the country in which it is hoped to grow them.

APPLES

We owe much to Russia for giving us our hardiest apples. In that country commercial apple orchards are found as far north as the district of Kazan in latitude 55 degrees, which would mean about 350 miles north of Winnipeg in this country. Nearly all the varieties which are considered of the first degree of hardiness in this country are of Russian origin. Of the hardy sorts that can be obtained in Canada, the following are recommended for trial in the most northern districts:

Summer—Blushed Calville, Lowland Raspberry, Charmaloff and Duchess.

Autumn and early winter—Antonovka, Patten's Greening and Hibernal.

Crab apples—Martha, Virginia, Hyslop, Transcendant and Dr. Saunders' new hybrids.

For districts favorable to fruit growing between latitude 45 degrees and 47 degrees, the following are recommended:

Summer—Yellow Transparent, Lowland Raspberry (for home use), and Duchess.

Autumn—Langford Beauty, Wealthy, Dudley, Alexander.

Early winter—MacIntosh, Fameuse, Wolf River.

Winter—Scott's Winter, Milwaukee, Bethel, Canada Baldwin. The Baxter also is a hardy, large, handsome, early to mid-winter variety, well worthy of a trial. Hardy winter varieties are scarce.

PLUMS

In the most northerly districts of Canada the European or Domestica plums are a complete or partial failure owing to the fruit buds winter killing. Along the lower St. Lawrence, where the winter air is moist, European plums can, however, be grown with good success, but throughout the greater part of Quebec and in Ontario north of latitude 45 degrees they are not satisfactory. Some varieties originated near Montreal are hardier in the fruit bud than others, among the best of these being the Mount Royal, Raynes and Lunn. A French variety called Perdigen also appears hardier than most. Some other European plums which are hardier than most varieties are Early Red Russian, Glass, Gueii, Montmorency and Richland. The dependence in the north must be upon the native plums and on the Americans. While these are not equal to the Europeans in quality they are very fair and are being rapidly improved upon. The trees, moreover, are very hardy. Some of the best of the improved native and American varieties in order of ripening are: Aitkin, Bixley, Mankato, Cheney, Omaha, Wolf, Hawkeye and Stoddard.

Pears are not successfully grown north of latitude 45 degrees except in some favored localities and along the lower St. Lawrence. The Flemish Beauty is the hardiest of the better varieties and is one recommended to those who wish to try pears. This variety succeeds very well in favored situations on the Island of Montreal and at Oka, near the Ottawa River. It has not proven sufficiently hardy at Ottawa. The Russian varieties, though hardy, are of inferior quality and subject to fire blight.

Cherries, like European plums, are not hardy enough for the north except near large bodies of water where the air is not so dry as it is more inland. They thus do very well along the lower St. Lawrence. At Ottawa the flower buds are usually killed. Those which bear crops more frequently, and hence may be considered the hardiest, are Orel 25, which appears to be the most hardy, Minnesota Ostheim, Cerise d'Ostheim, Vladimir, and Orel 24. Montmorency is good, but is not quite so hardy in the flower bud as the others.

At the Experimental Farm, Ottawa, there have been nearly 200 varieties of grapes tested. Many of the varieties only ripen when the season is especially favorable, while others ripen every year. The latter are those which will be most likely to succeed in the north, and among the earliest of these are: Red—Moyer; white—Golden Drop, Winchell (Green Mountain); black—Brant, Canada, Manito, Peabody, Daisy, Jewel, Moore's Early.

Where the climate is as favorable as that at Ottawa, the best kinds to plant are: Black—Early Daisy, Manito, Moore's Early, Worden and Wilder; white—Winchell, Diamond; red—Moyer, Brighton, Delaware, Lindley.

In order to grow grapes successfully in the north they should be planted where they will get the greatest heat in summer; the vines should be covered with soil in the winter, and the covering should be left on as long as posible in the spring so that they will escape the spring frosts.

The Black Cap Raspberries do not succeed very well in the north, but two of the hardiest are Older and Hilborn. A promising new variety is Gibraltar. Some of the hardiest and best red varieties are the King, Marlboro, Herbert and Clarke. The Herbert is considered the best, and the King the hardiest. The Cuthbert which is the standard in warmer parts of the country is rather tender for northern districts.

CURRANTS AND GOOSEBERRIES

Some of the hardiest red varieties of currants are Pomona, Victoria, Red Dutch, Raby Castle, and of the black varieties, Saunders, Victoria, Collins' Prolific and Lee's Prolific.

The best varieties of gooseberries are: Downing, Pearl, and Red Jacket. The two former, which are much alike, are green varieties, and the latter is a red one. Houghton, though not so large, is hardier than any of them.

STRAWBERRIES

The best varieties of strawberries for the most northerly districts are: Bederwood, Senator Dunlap, Splendid, Lovett and Crescent, the last one being perhaps the hardiest. The Haverland has also done well in the north.
